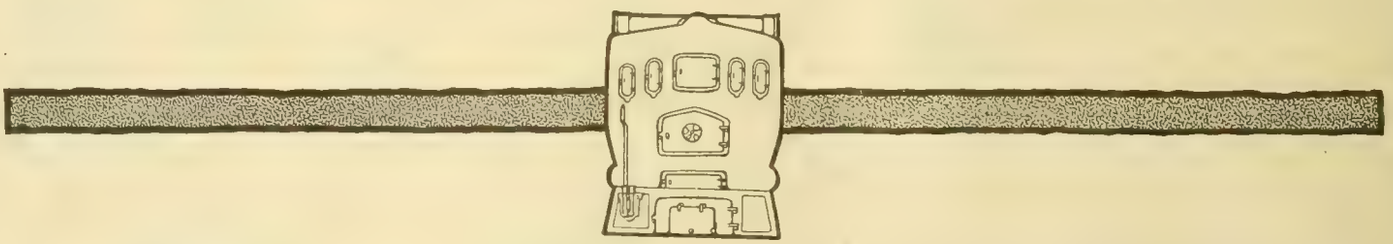
The Burning Question Is Your Heating System Does It or Doesn't It Burn Too Much Coal? There Is a Way to Find Out



WHEN coal could be had for the buying, you just bought it and mostly let it go at that. But now when it can hardly be bought for love or money, you are thinking more in pounds than tons. Every pound wasted looks like it had 32 ounces instead of 16.

Thinking of those 32 ounces "got on some of the growers' nerves." "Got on them" so hard, that they have kept our Coal Eater Detective on the jump. He has gone over system after system with a fine-tooth comb, taking out Koil Kinks, locating Heat Leaks, and finding the coal Hunger Spots in boilers.

He says this war is going to be the best thing that ever happened for the grower. It's going to make him make his heating system make heat economically.

He also says, that more than half the heating troubles are so simple, you would have thought they would have thought of them.

But it is the same old story; the things we are with most, we see the least. It's the man hunting high and low for his spectacles, whose grandchild tells him they are pushed up on his forehead.

That's why it pays, to pay to have our Coal Eater Detective go over your entire system. He is much in demand these days. You may have to engage him a week or two in advance. So act accordingly.

ADIANTUM Gloriosa Lemkesii
THE NEW GLORY FERN

We have ready for shipment an excellent stock of this new variety of Farleyense, which is as hardy and will stand up in homes and stores as well as Adiantum Croweanum. It is of good form and beautiful color, the new fronds being tinted with pink. We shall send this out this season in place of the old type of Farleyense, and we believe it can be used more extensively than that variety—especially on account of its keeping qualities.

These leaves are prepared in our own factory. They are flexible, do not mold, and are of a fine color. Cycas are very scarce, and we have been fortunate to have some on hand. War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

WAX FLOWERS

Mr. Florist:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

ONION SETS GROWERS FOR THE TRADE

PLANT EXCLUSION

Hearing before the Federal Horticultural Board at Washington, October 18. Chairman Marlatt closes with statement that suggestions made thereat would be given due consideration.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18.—Although the Federal Horticultural Board in no wise committed itself to any action, or made any announcement of intended action, the florists and nurserymen who appeared before its members today feel confident that the board will accede to their request for a postponement of the date of going into effect of the proposed new plant import restrictions to a time when the florist's and nursery trade will have come out of chaotic wartime condition and again adjusted itself.

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of H. A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia, was the leading speaker. He furnished the board and its experts with considerable valuable information and from what started out to be a cut-and-dried proposition the meeting developed into a most interesting one.

Chairman C. L. Marlatt, of the board, opened the meeting by impressing it upon the members of the trade present that the board was not compelled to hold this meeting under the law but wanted to do so in order that the florists and nurserymen might be present before final action was taken. He declared that the need for further restrictions has been realized for some time. The desirability of taking action has been under investigation for two or three years, and had culminated in the call for the hearing of May 28 last, at which, he declared, the matter was fully discussed.

"That hearing," Mr. Marlatt said, "really completed the necessary public details for the quarantine. The Department had then complied with the law and could legally go ahead and declare whatever quarantine or restrictions it saw fit to promulgate."

Consulted the Trade

"Following that hearing ample time was taken by the Department to go over the whole subject again under the direction of Dr. Galloway, who consulted with all the heads of the Dept. of Agriculture and with trade interests in different parts of the country. Consideration was given to all conditions and the war situation and to everything that bore on the subject. The result of that consideration was the definite recommendation of the experts of the Department, under the leadership of Dr. Galloway, for certain restrictions. These restrictions were considered by the board and were accepted as recommended. It then drew up the quarantine order and regulations which would govern the further entry of plants and seeds for propagation.

"We did not need to submit these to the public, but we wanted to be absolutely fair and allow an opportunity for any constructive suggestions that might be offered. The result was that we issued these tentative recommendations to the trade in our letter of Aug. 29. I then suggested in this notice that after the trade had had time to digest the matter we would call a conference. This conference was called on Oct. 5. This was simply for the purpose of acquainting the trade with the action to be taken."

Chairman Marlatt further stated that the board regretted not having been able to foresee conditions in Washington and so was unable to avert the necessity for holding the meeting at this time. "But inasmuch as the hearing had been called, and inasmuch as the Department's point of view had been so fully set forth in these letters and explanatory statements, it was not expected that there would be very much of a hearing," Mr. Marlatt remarked.

Speaking of letters received from interested persons, Mr. Marlatt stated that a number had come from State officials and others "heartily approving of the quarantine and regulations as submitted;" while other letters and telegrams had come from the commercial growers "whose complaints came largely through misunderstanding of the matter."

Mr. Totty Speaks

Charles H. Totty, president of the S. A. F. and O. H., made a brief speech pointing out the fact that the florists are already being called upon to make sacrifices of a nature having a great effect upon their businesses, and that they feel that the Government ought to let the matter lie over for a year or two until conditions settle down to something more nearly normal. "We have run along for so many years without having these restrictions, we feel that a little more time would not matter to the Government."

President Totty read into the record of the hearing a letter from the National Association of Gardeners protesting against the adoption of the proposed regulations.

Mr. Eisele Makes Effective Points

It was J. D. Eisele who brought out the undesirability of the proposed regulations being put into operation at this time. Chairman Marlatt had stated that because of the war conditions, under which it was impossible to bring in plants and florists supplies, the effective date of the quarantine would not seriously hurt the importers and users of the plants covered. Mr. Eisele created something of a surprise when he produced figures and facts to back up the statements he made. He proved to be one of the best witnesses that has appeared before any of the Government boards—he knew his subject, offered nothing but facts, and answered without hesitation or quibbling such questions as were put to him. But his talk was over the heads of many, for it was highly technical and "Greek" to most of those present.

He took the matter of the importation of Kentias. "We have, during the past ten years," he said, "sowed eleven hundred bushels of Kentia seeds, which means about five million seeds. During this same period we have imported $359,000 worth of Kentias. We are undoubtedly the largest individual growers of Kentias in this country, but we have found it absolutely necessary to have free access to importing these plants from England, Scotland and Belgium." Mr. Eisele explained the effect of climatic conditions upon the growth of these palms, the length of time required to produce a finished plant, and the difficulties experienced in raising them in this country. It would require from 20 to 35 additional acres of glass to produce the palms of this variety that his firm now imports, and he pointed out that no grower would be willing to go to the expense of putting up the necessary houses in the face of the possibility of the Federal Horticultural Board at some future time, deciding that these regulations are too drastic and amending them so as to permit of the importation of the palms; a decision which would make all this expenditure useless.

The speaker next took up the subjects of Araucarias, tuberous rooted Begonias, and other stock imported now, which it would be practically impossible to produce in this country. He spoke of Water Lilies, telling of the difficulties experienced in getting people to work in the ponds and declared that unless the bulbs were permitted to come from Holland and Japan there would be none but the commonest varieties to be had in the United States. Mr. Eisele's views were somewhat at odds with those of other growers, for he contended that the Rose business would also be very seriously hurt. He therefore wanted the bars let down with respect to finished Rose plants. He said that it would be difficult after the war to get men to reengage in horticulture, because the men who have been in the army will not want to return to the hard details of the business.

Chairman Marlatt spoke then of the activities of the Dept. of Agriculture in propagating work, and said that the proposed regulations would not affect it at all, so that Rose growers could have new plants brought into the United States in limited quantities through the Department.

To this Mr. Eisele replied that the Delphinium was one of the varieties that cannot be handled to advantage in this country, and if not permitted admission in commercial quanties, it would be wiped out here. Referring to the effects of the Japanese beetle scourge, costing $15,000 during the past year in efforts to eradicate it, he said that if the Government spent a like sum every year for several years, it would not begin to lose as much as the importers will lose if they are prohibited from importing Japanese flowers and plants.

During his talk the speaker scored good points on several occasions.

E. Gurney Hill of Richmond, Ind., asked the co-operation of the board in getting shipments into the United States. He stated that he had experienced great difficulty in getting an import license and had learned that it was because the board had rendered objections to it. Mr. Marlatt assured him that such was not the case; "the Shipping Board is a law unto itself," and the Dept. of Agriculture experienced as great difficulties in getting in shipments as did the commercial producers.

Others present spoke briefly on the subject and the meeting was closed with the statement by Chairman Marlatt that the suggestions made would be given due consideration, especially those having to do with the importation of plants not requiring earth balls at the roots, and of bulbs from Europe. Speaking to the Washington correspondent of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, several of the men present at the meeting expressed the belief that a further extension of time would be given.

Dards' Liberty Loan Window

This window display at Dard's, Madison ave., at 44th st., New York City, is said to have been the only elaborate, distinctly Liberty Loan window in any florist's store in New York during the recent Fourth Liberty Loan drive. It has been noticed and highly commended by members of the Liberty Loan Committee of this city and also by members of the committees of the Red Cross and other patriotic bodies, as a manifestation of a spirit which is in keeping with these stirring times.

Toward the front of the window on the right is an army bugler, and to the left a navy bugler. These

HYBRID TEA ROSE Los Angeles

In addition to the wonderful reputation that this Rose has made for itself as a bedding proposition during the past three seasons, it has this year also been awarded the Grand Prize in the Trials at the Bagatelle Gardens at Paris.

Every plant we sent out of this variety in the past has been a live advertisement, and without any special solicitation we now have more advance orders on file from our retail customers for "Los Angeles" than for any other variety.

We are sole distributing agents for the introducers for all points east of the Mississippi River and are now booking advance orders.

The price for strong two-year-old California field-grown plants for 1919 will be $1.50 each at retail. The general wholesale price will be $1.25 each, but we are prepared to book orders now for lots of fifty plants or more at the rate of $100.00 per 100. Delivery of these to be made as soon as stock arrives, which will be late in November, or early in December.

While we have a large supply, there will be no surplus and if you intend to catalogue it, we would advise you to cover your requirements now.

When in Doubt, Sow Sweet Peas

If you are a retail grower and don't know just what to put into a certain bench after the Mums are through, sow Sweet Peas. There are today some wonderful varieties; magnificent, large flowers of the most delicate shades and colors borne on extra long stems such as in many localities can only be grown under glass if you want to see them at their best. They are so far ahead of anything we used to call Sweet Peas years ago that you can't compare them at all. Whenever a florist has well grown stock to offer there is no trouble in getting rid of it, no matter what month in the year. Most growers prefer solid beds for Peas to be sown in now. They are right but you can grow them in raised benches if you fill them well up with good soil. Have no red hot steam or hot water pipes close to the benches. Sow thinly and take care of the stock. With sorts costing several dollars an ounce we get away from wasting seed and pay more attention to the growing and that means better results. Maybe you have at this time a batch of pot plants on hand. Get them planted out as soon as possible. If they get a little too long cut them back to within a few inches of the ground. That is better than to wait for the top growth to get busy. What you sow now will give fine flowers during February and March and even later. White, light pink and pale lavender are as they always have been the favorites. If you have room for only one sort use pink.

Cyclamens

It is not too late to sow Cyclamen seed; in fact, it may be done up to December and good results obtained. Plants intended for Christmas 1919 should now consist of transplanted stock with several leaves on ready in another four to six weeks to go into 2½'s. While seed sown now can hardly be expected to develop into early flowering stock the average florist has good use for Cyclamen all Winter long especially these times when we are short on other plants. If you can place the seed flats on the return pipes and thereby get a better bottom heat you will gain several weeks; seed in cold soil may lie for many weeks before germination sets in. In general the flowering plants this year are not as far advanced in regard to buds and flowers as last year. Nothing will help push things better than giving the plants a sunny bench in a 50 deg. house and allowing plenty of space between them so the sun and air may get around the entire plant. Stock intended to be in flower for Christmas must not be shifted after this date for this would encourage a new growth, while pot bound plants are more likely to push their buds through the foliage and flower. A 5in. pot plant in full bloom for Christmas is worth a 7in. one a week afterward. Far too many growers overpot their plants, being under the impression that the size of the pot means everything; but it doesn't. Nothing detracts more from a plant than being in a pot several sizes too large.

Cannas

Don't wait until a rainy spell sets in to lift the Cannas. After this date you may lift the plants and store the roots under the Carnation benches if you have no better place. The more soil you can leave on them the better. It will come in very handy next Spring for shifting bedding stock. When once the frost has killed the foliage on the Cannas outdoors and you have to cut them down and lift after a week's rain the job is anything but pleasant. Why not avoid it? Don't forget the labels to keep the sorts separate also placing boards under the clumps to prevent the roots from getting into the soil and starting the dormant eyes into growth.

Dahlias and Gladioli

With us in the Middle West the Dahlias in most localities were a complete failure again. A hot, dry Summer always has the same effect, but for all of that we shall plant the same amount next Spring as we have done for almost 25 years in this neighborhood. Once in every five years we strike it right and then feel well repaid for all the disappointments the other four brought. Lift the plants, allow them to dry off if coming out of moist ground and after being labeled store the tubers in a place where Potatoes would keep best. So also with Gladioli. These paid better this season than in a good many years. The late plantings paid best. Plan now to grow a good batch under glass this Winter. There is money in it.

Canterbury Bells and Foxgloves

Both Foxglove and Canterbury Bells should now be lifted from the field and planted close together in frames where they can be properly protected over Winter. The more careful you are doing it the less of a check it will be to the plants. You should make it your business to have a good number of both of these beautiful biennials massed on your own grounds during the early Summer, thereby giving your patrons a chance to see what a wonderful showing they make. That is the only good way to advertise them. Have you potted up some Canterbury Bells yet? If not get at it soon.

Jerusalem Cherry "Cleveland"

The Jerusalem Cherry Cleveland didn't require very long to get acquainted and become a favorite with everybody. Its numerous berries clustered on top of the branches where every one of them shows make it highly desirable. Even small plants in 3in. or 4in. pots are loaded down with fruit. You will need some of these inexpensive Christmas plants this year. When used in connection with either the Primula sinensis or P. obconica and some Asparagus plumosus attractive yet low priced baskets may be made up. They are bound to sell. Keep the plants in a cool house and don't worry because the berries are still green or some plants are as yet not set very heavily. There is still plenty of time between now and Chirstmas. Don't overpot nor ever let the plants suffer for the want of water.

Bouvardia Humboldtii

From now on you will appreciate Bouvardia Humboldtii, a highly desirable and easily grown plant. The pure white, fragrant flowers come on long stems and when properly handled will last for days. A Carnation house temperature is all the plants need. When once starting into flower light doses of liquid cow manure will help to get a good color into the foliage and develop large flowers. Stock grown from small plants benched last Spring may not produce a heavy crop of flowers this Fall and Winter, but if the plants after flowering are gradually dried off and stored away under a bench they may be cut back a little next Spring and benched again with excellent results.

Genistas

Like almost any other plants we grow outdoors during the Summer and house in Fall before frost comes, Genistas can stand a house of 40 deg. over Winter but should not be allowed to suffer outdoors in weather near the freezing point. Keep the plants in a cool house for you need most of them for Easter week when they are always in demand and are among the most showy of flowering plants. In case flowering stock is wanted sooner than April the plants may be brought to a Carnation house temperature during January or a little later. While they won't stand hard forcing, they do nicely in a 50 to 52 deg. house. If you have pot bound stock and don't wish to shift the plants an occasional dose of liquid cow manure will help.

Mignonette

Just a small part of a bench sown to Mignonette now is bound to pay next February and March. You may not wish to grow all you need for the want of room but the great thing is to have plants to cut from when you need the flowers most. Mignonette does equally well in a solid bench or in 4ins. to 5ins. of soil, as long as the soil is rich and the house cool. The more space you allow and the fewer spikes on the plants the larger the spikes, but with most of us the plants pinched back several times and bringing only moderate sized spikes, but a lot of them, pay best. Keep on pinching out the side growth on the flowering shoots of the early sown stock and don't overlook supporting the plants so as to avoid crooked stems.

Calendulas

Calendulas do best in solid beds where the roots can go down into the soil. They are cold house plants but need all the sun that shines. Plants in flower now may be made to keep it up all Winter. Small plants planted now won't produce good flowers and fair stems until the end of February. Allow at least a foot of space between the plants. If you intend growing them in a shallow bench provide good soil and do not let them want for water. A hot, dry house and Calendulas don't go together, but in a cool house and on a solid bench it is fun to grow them. Just what soil you use matters little.

The Pathos of Distance

(By E. T. Meredith, member American Mission to Great Britain and France, in Hardware World.)

In England and France I have seen things which I wish could be burned into the conscience of every business man in the United States. I have seen factories in ruins, office buildings blown to bits, commercial districts, miles in extent, lying deserted and silent, grass growing in the streets like places of the dead—everything that years, perhaps hundreds of years, of patient industry had built up and passed on as a heritage from father to son—all vanished.

We in America have known nothing like this. We can know nothing like it. Thanks to our Allies, these experiences will be kept from us. That factory of yours in New England; that mine of your neighbor's in Michigan; that farm down in Iowa—they are being protected today by the untold sacrifices of the soldiers, the business men, the women of England and France.

Why then should we complain? Why should we protest that our business is ruined? Why should we bewail lessened profits, cavil at high prices, inconveniences, hard conditions? Why should we rage at the disaster that overtakes our business?

Our business. Let me tell you something more of what "our business" means in England and France—as I have seen it. I talked with business executives, past their prime, men so old and weary that they would be glad to stop a bit and rest before they die. Yet they carry on. They, like those famed old legionaries of France, "have no time to die." They battle with conditions which in a month, a week, a day, may sweep everything out of existence. I saw a great shipbuilder, a fine old Briton, at his work—all three of his sons gone. At his side stood the grandfather, now in his 80th year, doing what he could. I talked to a barber—the sole survivor of four brothers. I was chauffeured by a one-time British capitalist—it was his own car—and one of his legs, a soldier's reward, was Made in the United States!

These business men overseas, our Allies are war weary. The strain is great, the enemy strong. Bitter is their lot. But do they protest? Do they despair? No! Grimly they carry on. Again and again they send their sons to the battle front. Their daughters—they see them rise at 6 in the morning to search the casualty lists for the name of a brother or sweetheart, then depart for a long day's work in factory, field or office. They themselves—even their nights are not given them for rest. When evening comes they report for special duties. In the British capital 30,000 of them—bankers, lawyers, lords and sirs, the shopkeepers of London, men too old, too crippled, too sick to serve at the front—police the darkened city streets.

I was in London when sons of these men gave their lives to plug up the neck of Zeebrugge Harbor. I felt then, as I know now, that by that heroic deed they defended not only the Thames and the coast of Kent, but the harbors of Boston, New York, Charleston. Those lads over there stand on guard before our mills, our stores, our homes. Their spirit—their will to win at any cost is emulated by their business elders at home.

Our business? Our profits? Our lives? Good God, will we ever open our eyes to see the truth? Can we ever repay the debt we owe? The time has come for us, the commercial men of this country to relieve our French and British Allies overseas of their appalling burden. Their soldiers are now our soldiers, as truly as if they wore our uniform, and our boys are theirs. Business over there, too, is American business. It is fighting the battle that will save us, along with the people of England and France, from destruction. A British or French plant wiped out is an American plant wiped out. A French town bombed is an American town bombed. Blood drawn there—we bleed also. We are one allied people in this fight. And united we stand on both sides of the sea!—The answer to this stirring article is to buy Liberty bonds and War Savings Stamps in order to maintain our armies and those of our Allies.

When Circulation Starts

The force which produces the circulation in gravity hot water systems is the difference in weight between the water in the boiler or the flow mains and the water in the return pipes. This difference in the weight is caused by the difference in temperature between those two columns of water. The water in the return pipes being cool is heavy, so as soon as the water in the boiler is raised in temperature it becomes lighter and the cold water in the return flows to the boiler and forces the warm water from the boiler into the heating pipes. In other words as soon as the temperature of the water in the boiler changes, circulation commences. The circulation is continuous as long as a fire is kept in the boiler to reheat the returning water.

Saving Salvia Seed

I would like to know the best way to save Scarlet Sage seed. If I wait for it to dry on the plants I lose all the seed, and if I cut it while it is in full bloom the seeds are white and I am afraid they will not germinate. Do you think that if I pull the plant up that the seed would ripen? I wish you would let me know in the next issue as I have some fine plants to save seed from.—C. S. C., N. J.

—Pick the spikes of flowers off the plants as soon as the blooms begin to turn slightly, to a light brown color on their edges or any part of them, and spread them in a dry, airy place. The seeds will still be white when you pick the flowers, but will be black when you rub them out later, after the flowers are dry. After the seeds are rubbed out of the blooms and cleaned of the chaff, they should be spread until you are sure they are thoroughly dry, and then placed in mouse-proof receptacles. In fact, it is necessary to carry on the drying of the blooms and the seeds in a place where they will be safe from the depredations of mice.

French Bulbs Arrived

The long expected French bulbs have arrived at an Atlantic port. The number of cases is estimated to be in the neighborhood of 15,000. This arrival represents the bulk of the crop, perhaps all of the French bulbs which will arrive this season. However, some bulbs were left on the pier in France, so it is possible that more may be sent by next steamer. Whether or not they will is a matter of conjecture. The bulbs just arrived are reported to be in good condition notwithstanding the long delay.

More Dutch Bulbs Arrived

We have previously reported the arrival of a steamship having on board 6000 cases of Dutch bulbs, and of a second steamer having Dutch bulbs, but without any papers for clearing these through the customs. It is now known that this steamer brought 2000 to 3000 cases of bulbs which are being cleared under "bank guarantees" in large amounts for the production of papers only. About 50 per cent. of the bulbs arriving on these two steamships had been moved up to Monday of this week. A third steamship has arrived bringing probably not more than 2000 to 3000 cases. Entries were being made of these cases on Monday of this week. A fourth steamship is expected to bring about 2000 to 3000 cases more Dutch bulbs. Should these arrive, the total of Dutch bulbs coming to the country this season will be from 16,000 to 18,000 cases.

Van Bourgondien & Sons of Arlington, N. J., report a brisk demand for Dutch bulbs they have in stock at their Washington warehouses, which they think largely due to the fact that many bulbs have been used for feed in Holland this year, bringing high prices; consequently many of the customers here of the Dutch bulb growers received short shipments or none at all. The firm has also received a large consignment of French Roman Hyacinths and Paperwhite Narcissi, and they will get from the docks as soon as possible.

Nearly or quite all the New York seed houses now have their Dutch bulbs actually in their warerooms, and are busy filling them out to fill booked orders. This makes matters in those stores somewhat like previous seasons.

Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., 128 Chambers st., is busy executing advance bulb orders. It reports a considerable demand for its well known strain of Japanese seeds. Perhaps this has been stimulated by the imminence of the passage of the "Plant Exclusion Act."

The new location of Max Schling's Seed Store has been changed just one door, namely from 22 to 24 W. 59th st. There is the subway station at the old number, 22. The entire store force is very busy shipping out bulbs.

Frank Sutherland of the vegetable seed department of Peter Henderson & Co., 37 Cortland st., was bereaved of his wife on Monday, Oct. 14, and his sister-in-law on Thursday, Oct. 17. Mrs. Sutherland leaves two young children.

Miss Helen Whittingham who has for some years been employed as a stenographer at J. M. Thorburn & Co., 53 Barclay st., died of pneumonia, after a short illness, on Saturday, Oct. 12.

It is with regret we chronicle the death of Ralph M. Ward, for many years a well known and conspicuous figure in the Japanese Lily bulb import business. An obituary of Mr. Ward appears in this issue.

Chicago Seed Trade

Seedsmen are getting their stores in order to receive their first shipments of French and Holland bulbs that arrived in New York the past week. This stock is expected to reach Chicago before the end of the week. There is a strong demand at retail stores. Wholesalers have booked heavily for shipment immediately the stock arrives.

Wm. Reid, formerly of the W. W. Barnard Co., in England on his way to the front writes friends that he is well pleased with army life and the treatment the soldiers receive everywhere in the allied countries. He is with a Canadian regiment.

The report of the death of Ralph M. Ward was a surprise to his friends in this city where he had visited on several occasions. A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., left immediately for New York to attend the funeral.

According to Morris K. Smith, the W. W. Barnard Co. is sending out return post cards to all florists and dealers who have placed orders with this company for both Holland and French bulbs asking if freight or express shipments are desired. Owing to the lateness of the arrival of bulbs and slow transportation especially by freight, express shipments are urged whenever and wherever practicable.

Winterson's Seed Store has on display a fine lot of Darwin Tulips and single early varieties as well as Daffodils and other bulbs for Fall planting. Dutch bulbs are moving from New York.

Vaughan's Seed Store presents an attractive appearance with numerous specimen Caprice Chrysanthemum plants from the greenhouses at Western Springs. This variety shows a wide range of color and is highly adapted for pot culture. The stock is well grown and profusely flowered.

Frank Quiett and family, of Hoermann Seed Co., at Terre Haute, Ind., spent several days in Chicago the past week. Patrick O'Mara, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, was also a visitor.

Dr. R. T. Vaughan, eldest son of J. C. Vaughan, has been assigned to Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., for temporary medical service.

The W. W. Barnard Co. reports that slow freight and long confinement of Onion sets in freight cars for long distance shipments during the recent warm weather have caused the sets to sprout in transit. Fred Lempke, a well known traveling salesman of this company has the sympathy of his friends because of the death of his brother, Private Paul Lempke, who was about to leave for overseas when taken ill, but died at Camp Merritt, N. J., on Oct. 10, of pneumonia.

Leonard H. Vaughan, chairman of the Chicago Seedsmen's Liberty Loan Committee, says that the florists have gone well over the top. Complete figures are not obtainable at this writing.

A suit that had been pending against the Gundestrup's Seed Store in a damage suit of $10,000, brought by the Everett R. Peacock Seed Co., seedsmen, on Milwaukee ave., for alleged insinuation against the credit of the Peacock Co. by the Gundestrup Co. has been decided and the Gundestrup Co. was found not guilty.

Kentucky Seed Notes

Peace talk has caused some of the speculators to take interest in Kentucky field seeds, such as Bluegrass and Orchard grass. There have been some reports heard concerning export buying, but it is too early to give any credence to such rumors. However the buyers feel that if exportation does begin prices will go much higher, and all stocks will be in demand.

During the past few weeks Orchard Grass seed has been in such keen demand that, it is claimed, there is practically no stock in the hands of the growers, and the cleaners have turned virtually all holdings over to the jobbers. No. 1 Orchard Grass is quoted at $3.25 to $3.50 a bushel, with several actual sales in car lots made at $3.50. No. 2 is worth about 25c. a bushel less, but under No. 1 practically all seed is sold on sample.

The demand for Bluegrass has also been good, but not quite so active as Orchard Grass. According to the local trade there is considerable speculation among the large dealers. However, there is still a good deal of this seed in the hands of the growers, and the cleaners are having no trouble in locating it, although prices are high. Recleaned 21 lb. Bluegrass seed is worth about $2.75 a bushel, and 19 lb. seed is worth 5c. to 7c. less, according to sample. Cleaners have been buying more freely, but the crop was a good one, and probably ran every bit of 500,000 bushels, in spite of numerous reports of a 400,000 bushel crop or less. Prominent seedsmen feel certain that the crop was heavier than anticipated, and there was probably more seed carried over than was thought.

Red Top has been showing more activity than usual, as this is another seed that will be very active in an export way if peace is declared. Cleaners have been quoting 12¼c. and 12½c. on this seed, while jobbers have been getting around 13½c. The market is slightly stronger, and inquiries generally better.

Timothy has been moving more freely, with jobbers finding retail dealers buying freely for Fall planting demands. Timothy is selling at around 10½c. a pound at wholesale.

Clover is moving lightly just now, with first class Red Clover seed quoted by the jobbers at $20 a bushel. The crop was estimated to be a big one, and $20 seems to be a high price, but the market is firm.

Onion Sets

The demand for Onion sets fell off a little, due to the high price, and the growers finally realized that with the demand light for immediate and Spring delivery, and little stock moving to the South, it would be necessary to do something. Therefore colored sets have dropped about $1 a barrel, or to $8 to $8.25. White sets also dropped proportionately, and are quoted at $10 to $10.25 by the grower. Dealers are shipping out on a 32 lb. bushel basis, at $2.25 to $2.50 for yellows and $3 to $3.25 for whites. Some dealers are getting $3.50 for whites for immediate delivery. Spring delivery, that is from Jan. 1 to March 1, is quoted at $2.35 to $3 for colored sets and $3.85 to $4 for whites.

The 1918 crop of Potato seed in Jefferson County still promises to be the largest on record. The crop is beginning to come on the market.

Edward Patton of New Albany, Ind., a seed salesman connected with Hardin, Hamilton & Lewman, Louisville produce and seed merchants, died recently at Olney, Ill., of heart trouble, following a short illness. Mr. Patton was well known, having traveled for the seed house for twenty odd years. He is survived by his wife, two married daughters, a brother, a sister and his aged mother.

Seeds on Export Conservation List

Garden and vegetable seeds have been added to the export conservation list by the War Trade Board, the restriction to be effective as of Oct. 19. Individual licenses for shipments of 50 lbs. or less, however, will not be required for Canada and Newfoundland.

The Bureau of Markets of the Dept. of Agri. is cooperating with the War Trade Board in granting licenses for the exportation of vegetable seeds. In order that the advice furnished the board may be complete and accurate, the bureau seeks facts as to the kinds and total quantities of vegetable seeds for which export licenses are required. To form accurate records, the seed reporting service has instituted an inquiry as to the exports of such seeds to Canada, our other allies and to neutral countries. Complete figures have not yet been compiled, but it is believed that exports by several concerns will be greater than in 1917 in some cases five or six times greater.

Gambling With Seeds

It is not too early to prepare for next year's production. Look over seeds on hand. Find out by test whether or not they are worth saving. Estimate your total need of seeds for the coming season. Make out an order for this, carefully specifying the varieties and the quality you will accept. Place this order with your regular dealer and ask for delivery in February. When seeds are delivered, put them where the rats and mice cannot reach them. Just to make sure of their quality, test them. All this helps to take the element of chance out of crop production. Gambling with seed quality is poor business.

Use High Denomination Postage Stamps

The Post Office urges the public to use stamps of the highest denomination suited to the amount of postage required. For example, use a 3c. stamp instead of three 1c. stamps. The exercise of care in this matter will effect a large saving to the Government in the cost of producing, transporting and cancelling stamps, and save business houses time in affixing them.

Normal Time October 27

All clocks will be turned back as hour at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning October 27th.

The Daylight Saving Law, which set the clocks ahead an hour at 2 o'clock the last Sunday in March and provided that they should be set back again on the last Sunday in October was adopted as a war measure. Its purpose was to save fuel by decreasing the necessity of using it for lighting purposes. Incidentally it gave workers an hour more daylight to be devoted either to labor or to recreation.

The new law apparently has proved a complete success. It is continuous, so that unless repealed the clocks will be set ahead again for an hour on the last Sunday of next March.

Vegetable Crops Under Glass

Greenhouse Grown Endive

Under the Fuel Administration regulations the amount of coal which may be consumed in greenhouses makes necessary radical changes in the general plans of growers of vegetables under glass for the coming season, and doubtless for the duration of the war.

In view of these conditions, writes Mr. S. N. Green, in the Monthly Bulletin of the Ohio Experiment Station, it is thought advisable to report progress of experiments with new greenhouse crops, particularly Endive, conducted the past few seasons. As this crop in the garden has already assumed some importance as a substitute for Lettuce during late Summer and Fall months, when Lettuce culture is difficult, it may be used to replace Lettuce. When economy in coal necessitates the lowering of temperature to a point where the growing of Lettuce in the greenhouse is a questionable venture, Endive may be considered.

Endive is one of the recent additions to our vegetable crops, it being only within the past few years that it has been generally grown. It is increasing in favor and is beginning to appear in markets in commercial quantities. In an unblanched state it finds a ready market among foreigners, who make extensive use of vegetables in soups, stews or as "greens;" when blanched it is a welcome addition to the list of salad plants and as its merits become known it will become a standard crop with truckers and greenhouse men.

The crop has not been reported as grown in greenhouses, except in a limited way in the East. The ease with which it can be forced, however, should induce growers to give it a trial in order to acquire the necessary experience to grow and market it successfully. Experiments at the station have shown conclusively that the crop can be grown in the greenhouse, but there are many points yet to be worked out in its commercial culture and marketing.

Various Types

The types of Endive tested have been those cataloged by American and English seedsmen. The "French Endive" or Witloof Chicory, a near relative, was not included as it cannot be called a forcing crop; however, it has been grown in Ohio successfully by gardeners and greenhouse men. Escarole is a term applied to blanched Endive, under which name the southern grown product is often listed in market quotations.

Garden varieties of Endive may be grouped into curled, broad-leaved and white types. The curled or fringed varieties are perhaps the most generally grown and are to be preferred under most conditions in greenhouse forcing. The broad or round-leaved varieties however, are gaining in popularity, as when blanched they resemble Witloof Chicory, which has found a large demand in some markets. The white types do not seem to require blanching, the color being almost that of Lettuce, and are worthy of careful trial under glass.

Cultural Methods—Blanching

Treatment given Endive has been almost identical with that given Grand Rapids Lettuce. The seed is sown in flats beginning the latter part of September. When the second leaves show the seedlings are transplanted into other flats 1in. apart each way. As soon as the plants acquire fair size, and the ground is available, they are transplanted into the permanent beds, spaded 7in. x 7in.. They then make rapid and satisfactory growth under ordinary greenhouse conditions and have not as yet been subject to serious disease or insect attacks.

The blanching of the greenhouse grown crop is the most difficult part of Endive culture under glass. As yet no perfectly satisfactory method has been found. Where the soil is damp, the air moist and the ventilation slow when blanching by any method, loss by rot is sure to occur unless much precaution is taken. Careful ventilation and temperature regulation are necessary. In a general way, the lower the temperature the slower the blanching process, from two to three weeks or more being necessary. We have found for our conditions that a paper covered frame gives satisfactory results. This excludes the light, allows fair circulation of air and there is little loss from rot.

Blanching is the point at which coal consumption may be reduced. If the crop is properly hardened blanching may be conducted at a temperature slightly above freezizng. Endive is a hardy plant; the outside crop will often stand a considerable drop in temperature.

With the white types no blanching seems necessary, and the elimination of this troublesome process may bring white Endive into favor for greenhouse culture. In the 1917 trials white Endive was blanched by the same method as the green type, but resulted in a complete failure because of rotting. In 1918 the Model, which is a white type, was not blanched, but being cut at the same time gave as good a weight as the best blanched. The white type for a long period shows a delicate growth but makes rapid gain in weight during the last period of growth. The unblanched white Endive makes an attractive dish or garnish and nearly approaches Lettuce in quality.

Length of Season—Marketing

The table gives time required to mature the two regular crops of Endive as grown at the station. The total requirement is about that of head Lettuce grown at the same season and only a little longer than that of Grand Rapids Lettuce. It is a short, cool season crop and for this reason fits well into average greenhouse schedules.

When the green types are blanched, or the white type is full grown, the crop is cut and packed the same as Lettuce. The common ten pound Lettuce basket has been found a suitable and attractive package. The weight per plant does not equal that of Lettuce and for this reason it is necessary to secure a greater price per pound.

As with most new crops, the great difficulty in securing profitable returns is not so much in growing, but in satisfactory marketing. If a grower after a small trial finds he can grow Endive successfully a larger planting coupled with advertising should find a sale for forced Endive in practically any local markket. The crop, being a new one under glass, deserves in advertising a distinctive name, such as "Liberty Salad" to enable the grower to create a demand for the produce and reap the benefits of pioneering.

"Wages and salaries are higher in America today than ever before. Those who spend everything they earn are not only living in a fool's paradise, but are doing a grievous injury to their country, because the same degree of prosperity cannot be expected to continue upon the return of peace, when the inevitable readjustments of all industries must take place; and because only by saving can we provide our Government with the money which it must have to buy the essential supplies for our military forces."
Secretary William G. McAdoo.

Vegetable Growing as a Side Line

Whether or not the National War Garden Commission is correct in its estimates that in 1918 home gardeners produced $525,000,000 worth of vegetables may seem of small moment to florists. It is not, however, to those men who have already developed, or are now developing vegetable growing as a side line either out of doors or under glass. During these war times people have learned to conserve meat and to consume large quantities of vegetables. When peace returns they will doubtless continue to do so. Hence vegetables will probably be in great demand. But when business returns to healthy channels upon a far grander scale than before, salaries and wages will doubtless continue high; hence countless people who for patriotic reasons are now gardening will become buyers instead of producers. They will be all the better customers for having had their gardening failures and successes because they will have learned from actual experience that production of high quality crops demands skill and hard work, thought and capital. Hence they will be the more willing to pay good prices for vegetables grown by other people. Here then is a side line that should prove highly profitable to florists who care to develop it.

Those of our readers who do vegetable gardening and have been hard up for help may be interested to learn that several growers have used Boy Scouts. In at least one case that has come to our attention the grower arranged with the captain who gave the necessary orders. As the rules do not allow of paying the boys, the money they would have earned was turned over to the Red Cross. As labor problems next year may be worse than in 1918 this plan may be workable in other places.

Fertilizers in Greenhouses

Results of Experiments with Acid Phosphate, Manure and Nitrate of Soda on Lettuce, Tomatoes and Cucumbers—Test Plots Described —Effects of Each Kind of Material Presented

One of the early experiments under glass at the Ohio Experiment Station was with the use of fertilizers in the greenhouse (Bul. 43, 1892). The conclusion was drawn that there is likely to be no profit arising from the use of commercial fertilizers in greenhouses.

This opinion, according to S. N. Green, who reports findings in the September Monthly Bulletin of the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster, is still current so commercial fertilizers have not as yet, been used in a systematic manner nor in large quantities in vegetable greenhouses. Of late, however, conditions have been changing so rapidly that it has become necessary to review standard practices and revise methods to meet present requirements.

We no longer measure our vegetable houses by the square foot but by the acre. An acre of glass will shelter 128,000 Lettuce plants set 7in. x 7in., or 10,900 Tomato and Cucumbers, 2ft. x 2ft. apart; thus it will be realized how an increase of a hundredth part of an ounce for each Lettuce head or a similar fraction of a pound to each Tomato or Cucumber plant means a monetary return that no up to date grower can ignore. We cannot judge yields from appearance to the eye or weight in hand, but measurements per plant must extend to the second decimal.

As vegetable greenhouses are now almost always built directly over the surface soil, the original beds are of the fertility of an ordinary truck patch, or often that of a common field. Heavy applications of manure are given at once and continued so the soil may be brought up to a condition as to fertility demanded in intensive, under-glass cultivation. The heavy applications of manure which greenhouse soils receive, in time, radically alter their characteristics. Such applications tend to make a soil which is nearly identical in analysis to that of manure alone.

Manure, when considered as a fertilizer is not well balanced. It may be ranked as a 2-1-2 fertilizer while the standard for vegetable crops is 4-8-10. A soil, therefore, which is tending to become similar in composition to that of manure would also show the same deficiency as to phosphoric acid.

A soil that meets the ideals of the greenhouse vegetable grower must be balanced as well as contain an abundance of available plant food. To secure the necessary phosphorus through manure alone very large quantities are necessary. As manure becomes scarce and the cost of securing and applying increases, the plan of the grower should be to use less, reinforce the small quantity with acid phosphate and at the same time supplement, if need be, with other chemical fertilizers.

On experimental plots at the Ohio station two crops of Lettuce and one Spring crop of Tomatoes have been grown annually. On an adjoining house on an old soil a similar plotting was made at the same time, the difference being that in place of Tomatoes in the Spring, Cucumbers were grown. This allows comparison in the set of experiments between the three principal crops grown in our houses, namely, Lettuce, Tomatoes and Cucumbers.

On Lettuce crops no marked increases were secured on soils which had previously received manure; in fact, on new soil showed a decrease. However, in the straw mulch plot, which gives indications of lacking sufficient plant food, the application of nitrate of soda was beneficial. With Tomatoes following the Lettuce crop the effect of the nitrate of soda was marked on all soils, which tends to show that a moderate application of nitrate of soda would be profitable on greenhouse Tomatoes. The result is unlike that secured with Cucumbers, where in no case did nitrate of soda bring results.

The application of acid phosphate showed a consistent increase on the Lettuce crops in every case, with the exception of the straw mulch plot, where the conditions are such that phosphate does not seem to be the limiting factor. On the Tomato crop the results are similar, with the exception that, for some unknown reason, possibly disease, no increase was secured on the manure mulch plot. With Cucumbers the increase was considerable.

Acid phosphate is the only commercial fertilizer which, at present, can be procured at reasonable prices. The results secured with this plant food element, with hardly an exception, are encouraging.

The average price received for Lettuce is about 10c a pound, for Tomatoes 10c a pound and Cucumbers 60c a doz. Acid phosphate has a present value of about $24 a ton.

Conservation

This word is of tremendous import but as a rule not appreciated unless we are brought up against a leak, occasioned by carelessness somewhere in our own business.

Enclosed in a recent bill from a New Jersey water company was a statement giving the amount of water which would be wasted through leaks of various dimensions, as follows: Water just dripping from a spigot wastes 15 gallons a day, 105 gallons a week and 5475 gallons a year. Water leaking through a thirty-second of an inch aperture will cause a waste of 264 gallons a day, 1848 gallons a week and 96,096 gallons a year, while water leaking through one-sixteenth of an inch aperture will waste 835 gallons a day, 5845 gallons a week and 303,940 gallons a year.

Not much wonder that constant dripping will wear away a stone!

General Trade Notes

PHILLIPSBURG, PA.—Russell M. Morris, landscape gardener of this city died here on Oct. 12, at the age of 29, after being due to pneumonia.

BEACON, N. Y.—Benjamin Hammond, well known in the trade, writes interestingly in the Beacon Daily Herald of Oct. 15 of his recent trip through Canada.

TAUNTON, MASS.—Edward Anderson, for the past two years in the employ of Victor B. Olson, the Bay Street Greenhouses, died here at the hospital on Oct. 11, of pneumonia. Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden, Oct. 20, 1882, and arrived in this country in 1909. He was employed as grower in several places in the United States and Canada before being engaged by Mr. Olson. Mr. Olson himself has recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia.

Houston, Texas

Florists have been busy the past week with funeral work, but are meeting the many demands as best they can.

Kerr, the Florist, has had as much as he can do, if not more, to keep up with orders. His office force is in better shape now, as both Mr. Eichling and Mr. Walker have returned after brief illness. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr were compelled to forego their trip to Willis to participate in the birthday celebration of the Pansy King of Texas, both because of bad weather and because Mrs. Kerr was ill. Visitors to the store were Mr. and Mrs. Newell, who came from Kansas City to visit their sick son, an aviator at Ellington fields. Mr. Kerr was unable to attend the F. T. D. convention, because he was needed here by the R. C. Kerr Co., who are putting out some good Roses and will have 30,000 to 35,000 'Mums in bloom in the next ten days.

Mr. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses has had a big rush and has found difficulty in getting enough flowers to supply the demand.

The Q. & S. florists have been working day and night to supply the demand. Practically all their work has been for funerals and filling orders to send flowers to the sick.

The Library has been calling for Crape Myrtles, but the Houston Hort. Club has not been able to hold a meeting because all meetings are banned, so the project of making Houston the Crape Myrtle City will have to rest awhile until conditions get back to normal. C. L. B.

Charleston, W. Va.

Business is good in this section. J. W. Dudley & Son Co. are busy and have abundance of Roses cut from their own houses. Their Clarksburgh store is also busy and well supplied. All their stores have a good stock of 'Mums.

Miss A. Mortin of Huntington, with Mr. Beale as manager, is doing a good business with lots of flowers.

In Charleston the Winter Flower Store is as busy as can be; so is the Charleston Cut Flower Co., 19 Capitol st. It is a miniature bee hive. Shortage of help makes the present force work extra hard.

T. J. Nolan of the Burlington Willow Ware Shop has called on the trade in Charleston, Parkersburgh and Huntington, also Clarksburgh, Cumberland and Hagerstown, Md., on his way South, and is well pleased with his business.

A. Flower.

Louisville, Ky.

Nothing like the present heavy and steady demand for flowers has ever before been known in Louisville. Orders have been so heavy that florists have had great difficulty in supplying the demand, and have been working overtime. Getting stock is a serious problem as local growers cannot supply it and answers to telegrams to Chicago, Detroit and other markets have shown that all stock on those markets was cleaned out.

Boys at local military camps have made up collections to buy flowers for company brothers who are ill, or have died. Numerous telegraphic orders are placed by soldiers for delivery at point of interment, while telegraphic orders are coming in numbers for local delivery. Never before has the telegraphic delivery proposition been worth to the florist what it is today.

Simon G. Pontrich, Jr., aged 22 years, on October 23, was added to the list of Louisville's soldier boys who have died for their country before being given an opportunity to fight. His father is a florist. He entered service on May 25 and was sent to Ft. Riley, where he trained with the 311th Cavalry, and later transferred to the 67th Field Artillery, at Camp Knox, West Point, Ky., on September 1. He was on duty at West Point when taken ill, and sent to the military base hospital at Camp Taylor for treatment. He is survived by his father, mother and five brothers, including three in the service. Before answering the call he was employed by his father.

The Kentucky Society of Florists has not held a meeting this month, and will hold none probably until later.

Adam Heitz of Louisville has been planning a fishing trip into Northern Indiana, but due to the rush of business has been unable to get away. Mr. Heitz is a great hunter and fisherman, and generally gets away for a few days of each sport during the season.

George Schulz, of Jacob Schulz Co., recently exhibited a check calling for $270 worth of work, that he had merely figured upon and hadn't done yet. This was some landscape work for Judge Robert Worth Bingham, one of the wealthiest men of Kentucky. Paying for work before it is begun is out of the ordinary, but as Mr. Schulz remarked: "Judge Bingham knows who he is dealing with."

Local stocks are scarce, and almost all florists have had trouble in securing supplies. One of the leading growers reported that he was cutting nothing but Roses, Carnations and 'Mums. Wholesale prices run 3c. to 15c. for Roses; the high priced ones being Columbias and American Beauty. Carnations are selling at 4c each, and 'Mums at $1.50 to $3 a doz.

Anders Rasmussen of the North Side is erecting a large new garage, having added additional cars.

An ordinary bunch of flowers used in decorations at a speaking of Gov. A. O. Stanley and Senator Beckham, was recently auctioned off for $75, Senator Beckham making the first bid of $45. The flowers were secured by ex-Senator Charles Ecton, the money being donated to the Red Cross. Several hundred dollars was raised a short time ago in the Seelbach Rathskellar, in Louisville, when Dr. Ben L. Bruner sold a bouquet several times for various amounts. Shortly before 12 o'clock the bouquet was broken up and distributed among the ladies present.

The Woods-Stubbs Co. of Louisville, operating a nursery at Arterburn station and a seed house in Louisville, has been featuring considerable advertising of Fall plantings of hardy perennials, fruit trees, shrubs, etc. The company has competent men who advise customers concerning plantings and go over their grounds.

Washington, D. C.

Extensive studies are being made by the Department of Agriculture of the distribution, natural habits and economic importance of the flora in national forests and purchase areas. Forest service officers have collected more than 35,000 specimens, representing 4,800 species of plants. The data collected is to be used in detecting, eradicating and fencing poisonous plant areas. It will also be useful in the study of natural range reseeding, and other questions.

The sympathy of the trade is with Jake Minder, a grower, of Cottage Hill, N. E., Washington, D. C., who has suffered the loss of his wife Mrs. Daisy Minder, who was ill but a few days with Spanish influenza. She was only 40 years old. Besides her husband she is survived by several children. E. A. D.

Embargo on Arsenic

The War Trade Board has placed an embargo on the exportation of white arsenic, in compliance with a request of the National Food Administration. The main aim of this order is to protect American fruit and vegetable growers against a shortage of arsenical insecticides.

The S. A. F. Publicity Campaign

In the November, 1918, issue of the Metropolitan magazine appears a poster color page "Say It with Flowers," effectively suggesting the use of Chrysanthemums during October for weddings, birthdays, social functions, etc. The poster is illustrated with white and yellow blooms of the Autumn Queen, and in the lower right hand corner is given the calendar for the month, with the wording above, "Whose Birthday is in October?"

Middle Atlantic States

Buffalo, N. Y.

There has been a heavy demand for floral work. All stock is cleaned up on its arrival.

Buffalo Florists "Over the Top"

Subscriptions tendered by the Buffalo florists in the Fourth Liberty Loan totaled $85,350. The committee in charge as well as every other contributor in the business were officially thanked for their fine work, by the general managers of the campaign. "Buffalo Never Fails," this city's official slogan, and adopted by many of the local florists, carried a special significance in the drive. Despite unfavorable conditions Buffalo exceeded its general quota of $61,648,000 by more than $3,000,000, and has flung out the honor flag with its four blue stars at City Hall. The florists' quota, $85,000, was exceeded. The active workers among the florists in the campaign included Messrs Eiss, Anderson, Palmer, Robert Scott, Werrick, Weise, Schoenhut, Reichert, J. H. Rebstock and Sievers.

S. A. Anderson, Buffalo florist, is a candidate for county treasurer at the coming elections. He is using aggressive and original advertising in his campaign and looks like a sure winner. His personal following, if counted, would total a small army, and he will undoubtedly be supported by the members of the local trade on Election Day.

Coal for Private Growers

Buffalo's fuel administrator has received the following notice from Washington: "All private greenhouses are privileged to receive coal in any amount to equal half their normal requirements, but under no conditions are they to receive or be allowed to burn anthracite coal."

"Serve Yourself" Flower Stand

The "serve yourself" flower stand has made its appearance outside the flower shop of W. J. Palmer & Son in Delaware ave. The outfit consists of a small table with a vase of Roses and a street railway fare box on it. "Help yourself," says a placard; "five cents each." The newspapers have commented favorably on the idea.

Joseph A. McGuire.

Lancaster, Pa.

Retail conditions have changed little; there is a continued demand on the florists for more flowers than can be secured.

H. A. Schroyer reports that he has to continue on the delivery job. Miss Carrie Steckmen, who manages the store, is busy most of the time locating flowers to fill orders.

At the B. F. Barr store Mrs. Barr is helping out during the absence of the manager, Mrs. Spera, and for two weeks they have been working from 7:00 a.m. until midnight.

The Rosery is also busy. Mr. Moore is laid up with influenza, but they manage to get the work out by working long hours.

Mrs. Geo. Goldbach and Walter Hammond are up to their ears with work and there seems to be no letup.

The number of cases of influenza is on the downward trend. Fortunately for Lancaster Mrs. Herr registered a regular army of women for nursing several months back, and has been able to supply nurses and helpers wherever needed in this epidemic.

Good cuts of first class 'Mums and little pompons are coming fast into the market, in good shape, at prices that seem almost beyond reason.

J. C. Seibold has been sick, but is about again.

The Florists' Club meeting was postponed until some time in November, at the request of the Board of Health. The stores were closed down tight from Saturday night at 6 p.m. until Wednesday morning, but in the flower shops funeral orders were made up with closed doors so that customers could not come in.

Club Buys Liberty Bonds

The Florists' Club took $300 worth of Liberty bonds in addition to the individual subscriptions, which will be collected or reported at the November meeting, and we hope the returns will show up well for our little bunch of fellows.

Edward G. Beck died on Sunday morning, Oct. 20, at 6 o'clock. He was formerly an advertising man with a national bill posting concern and for several years worked with Thos. Fries of this city in the florist business. After his marriage he leased a place in the southern end of the city and built up a nice trade, but on account of the coal situation last winter he decided to close the place, and took a situation as gardener with a private party in York, later on working for the B. F. Barr Co., where he made a wonderful success as a salesman. He leaves a wife and three children.

Albert M. Herr.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The flower business is even greater than it was the past two weeks. Flowers are not as plentiful as formerly, except 'Mums, which are coming in larger quantities. They are welcome as they can be used in place of Roses and Carnations and sell at high prices, but they fill in better than any other flower. Roses Ophelia, Russell and Columbia are of fine quality especially. Very few short Roses, but these are in heavy demand. Long stem Roses are plentiful and sell at high prices, $6 to $8 per 100. Am. Beauty are also selling at good prices and clean up every day at $50 per 100 as the top price for specials. Few Lilies this week. Most growers do not have them during 'Mum season. The supply of Dahlias continues to be heavy. There have not been enough to meet the demand this year even at the high prices. They were never so fine in quality or so popular as this year. The colors are beautiful. Some good 'Mums are now coming in pink, white and yellow. Some pompons are seen in white and yellow which are very much in demand. All kinds of greens are selling fast. Not nearly enough Galax, Leucothæ or ferns are reaching this market. Asparagus plumosus and A. sprengeri are also scarce. Almost all the supply houses are sold out of artificial flowers on account of the scarcity of cut flowers. The manufacturers of wire designs are rushed to their fullest extent and overtime is nothing unusual. All shops are completely sold out and the demand for baskets is exceptionally heavy.

Glimpses Behind the Greenery

The entire force of Randolph & McClements has been working overtime every night on account of the heavy demand for funeral work.

Henry Ludwig and Rudy Lager of the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. have been on the sick list.

Dave Hill received a letter from his brother James, who is with the A. E. F. in France, saying he is well and enjoying the country.

Miss Katherine Antonette is now with the floral department of Kaufmann's big store. This store has been having a grand display of Dahlias furnished by the McCallum Co. N. McC.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the past two weeks the demand for flowers has been unprecedented. It has been difficult to fill orders. Owing to the lateness of the Chrysanthemum crop the market has been practically bare except for Roses and what little outdoor material can be got together. A few 'Mums are coming in now, but the scarcity of stock is still apparent and promises to remain so for a time at least. Prices have taken a rise. Roses are selling at 10c. to 30c.; Carnations 6c. to 8c.; 'Mums $2 to $6 per doz.; Asters $1 per bunch. Asparagus is scarce.

Owing to the epidemic the regular monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Ass'n was called off.

Charles Lee of Barnards, N. Y., who has been laid up for two months with rheumatism and has been unable to attend to his duties, is now much better, and able to get around but not do any work.

Wm. Galentine is cutting first rate Asters which are in great demand. They are from a late sowing made in drills in the open. They have helped out wonderfully during the present scarcity.

H. B. Stringer.

Corfu, N. Y.—Harry Francis, an employee of David J. Scott, is just recovering from typhoid fever, having been confined to a hospital at Batavia for the last few weeks. His wife has also been ill with typhoid fever.

SAVE COAL!

GROW THE NEW IMPROVED PRIMULA MALACOIDES

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, is one of the most profitable economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For October and November delivery:

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Geo. M. Quackenbush, one of the Boldt-Lundy store men, is enjoying camp life. He is at Camp Sheridan, Ala.

George Lloyd Mercer, member of the Cleveland (Ohio) Florists' Club, has entered the military academy at Staunton, Va.

James Hill is with the forces in France. He writes that he is in good health and spirits and is enjoying the country.

Dr. R. T. Vaughan, eldest son of J. C. Vaughan of Chicago, has been assigned to Camp Taylor, at Louisville, Ky., for temporary medical service.

Ambulance Driver Renick recently gave the St. Louis Florists' Club a talk on his experiences at the front where he lost a right arm in the service.

Gerald Wallace, of Batavia, N. Y., is in limited service at camp at Syracuse, N. Y. He writes that he likes it and has gained four pounds. A. A. K.

W. Walker, formerly with the Munk Floral Co., of Columbus, Ohio, has been at home from naval duty on a week's furlough. He expects soon to go across.

Charles Wilmore, who is with the U. S. Tank Corps at Gettysburg, Pa., recently returned to his home at Denver, Col., with the body of a comrade who died in camp.

Joseph O'Donnell, assistant salesman for Thomas Roland at the Boston Co-operative Flower Market, Boston, Mass., joined the Colors on Oct. 21, and is at Fort Warren, Boston.

Peter Rusconi, eldest son of Dominick Rusconi, the bulb and seedsman of Cincinnati, O., is serving as interpreter with the Engineering Corps of the United States Army in France.

Wm. Reid, formerly of the W. W. Barnard Co. of Chicago, is with a Canadian regiment in England on his way to the front. He writes that he is well pleased with army life and with the treatment soldiers receive.

Private William E. Kirchoff, Jr., Batavia, N. Y., is now stationed at Camp Eustis Newport News, Va., and expects to leave shortly for overseas. He has been connected with the growing of Gladioli all his life. A. A. K.

All four sons of M. P. Dilger, of Waukegan, Ill., are in the service. Arthur is a ship builder at Oakland, Cal. Paul is a tool maker in the Government shops at San Petro. Nick is in the merchant marine and Bob is with the expeditionary forces in France.

Wylie Troy, son of John H. Troy, of New Rochelle, N. Y., is a second lieutenant and instructor in the U. S. Aviation Corps. He is but 21 years of age, and recently, after having been discharged from a hospital in Texas where he had been sent owing to having caught a cold which he feared might develop into influenza, he sent the following telegram to his father: "Dear Dad: Discharged from hospital yesterday. Feeling O. K. now. Spending the week-end with my friends, the Mungers. Please buy $1000 worth of Liberty bonds in New Rochelle for me, as I want my home town to get credit for it. I will repay you as I receive my subsequent pay checks. Love to mother and yourself." Wylie Troy is anxiously awaiting summons to go abroad and do real fighting.

Extract from a letter from the front written by Sgt. V. A. Di Clemente, formerly monotype operator for THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE: "'La Belle' is an appellation that well befits France, for to me it is a wonderful kaleidoscope of natural beauty, horticultural, floricultural and agricultural. Needless to say it is worth fighting for and I am happy to be one of the lucky ones to have the opportunity of doing my bit, even though it is only a little bit."

"A glorious death is his
Who for his country falls."

We regret to learn that John W. Montgomery, formerly a florist at Lowell, Mass., was drowned on Oct. 9, while serving as second class quartermaster on the U. S. Destroyer Shaw, which collided with a British ship in English waters. Quartermaster Shaw enlisted in the Navy last April. He is survived by his parents and two brothers.

We are sorry to learn of the death of Private Walter A. Knecht, Fort Wayne, Ind. It is reported that he is the first florist soldier of that city to die while in service.

Simon G. Pontrich, Jr., of Louisville, Ky., died at Camp Taylor whence he was sent when taken sick at West Point, Ky. He is one of four brothers in the service.

St. Paul, Minn.

During the past week all classes of cut stock have been at a premium. It is safe to state that never before at this season has stock been so scarce and prices ruling so high. In fact, during the past week Christmas prices have prevailed. The large home grown Chrysanthemums coming in realize from $3 to $5. Carnations have raised as high as $7 per 100. Violets are good and as high as 2c. Some Mignonette sells readily at 6c. Lilies are rarely seen. A few Callas reach the stores. All green stock is scarce. Pompon and single Chrysanthemums have made their appearance but in small quantities. Probably business has never been so brisk as regards funeral work. The demand for stock far exceeds the supply. It is probably an isolated instance where the Greek store has been able to cut prices and offer cheap stock. Its prices differ little from other stores. Lakewood cemetery greenhouses are cuting good 'Mums. Mazy have two houses of early Pompons.

Mr. Mazy motored to the devastated fire district in Northern Minnesota to ascertain whether the family of one of his employees was safe. He found the fire had turned owing to a change of wind when it had reached the outbuildings leaving the home in safety. Florists from nearby sections have telegraphed for flowers of any and every description. All the local growers are suffering acutely for want of help and getting the work done is proving more of a problem every day.

Operations in landscape and nursery planting are not progressing favorably owing to the prolonged drought. In all this section we are badly in need of rain and it is feared if we do not get it much of the stock will be Winter killed. Days have been sunny and the weather warm during the past two weeks, ideal for all stock under glass.

Merriam Park greenhouses have a good stock of Cyclamen, some being in 5in. pots. Poinsettеas also look promising. Present indications are that the Dutch bulbs will not arrive in the Northwest any earlier than last year, too late for outside planting. Many growers have discarded their bulb forcing and are reverting to old fashioned cold growing stock.

Chris. Bussjaeger has his stock in fine shape especially Carnations. One bench of Matchless is in full crop of good sized clean white flowers.

J. Christensen's Rose houses are just coming into crop after having been rested and pruned back hard. Mr. Christensen will get this crop off and after Christmas run just enough heat to keep frost out.

Tom Hall of Minneapolis is one of the first florists in this section to engage a girl for his auto delivery truck.

Gus Colburg has severed his connection with Holm Olson. E. C. T.

National Publicity Campaign

Eighteen national magazine advertisements are included in the program for campaign publicity as arranged by the committees for the remainder of 1918. With the general average of readers of these magazines taken into account, 20 millions or more persons will receive our message in various forms, all emphasizing our slogan, "Say It with Flowers." These advertisements are to occupy spaces ranging from whole to quarter pages. The copy matter used has been so carefully considered that the desired results are confidently expected to materialize. If we could add the duplicated circulation naturally coming from an advertisement used as many as three times in one magazine, we may safely estimate, on the very lowest basis, that these advertisements will be seen 60 million times. Gong further, when it is considered that a favorite magazine is looked over by a subscriber several times it is easily guessed that one hundred million perusals ought to be the lowest average we might expect.

Here is the program, let anyone figure it out:

It was to finance this publicity that our committees have made weekly appeals to the florists to help us complete our $50,000 fund for 1918. The fund is not completed, but the committees have sufficient confidence in the trade to meet the deficiency and to warrant its going ahead with the program as prepared.

From every section of the country subscriptions to our fund have come, but many florists are yet to be heard from. If you who read this are among the number, can we not persuade you to add your mite. No matter where you are located, you are benefited by this publicity. Look over our list of magazines. You will find all of them circulating in your neighborhood. Surely it is not too much to expect that you will contribute something within your means.

Think it over now, before the matter again slips your mind.

Department of Plant Registration

Public notice is hereby given that The Elm City Nursery Co., Woodmont Nurseries Inc., of New Haven and Woodmont, Conn., submits for registration the new plant mentioned below.

Box Barberry, seedling of Berberis Thunbergii, dwarf, upright, foliage one-half less in size than type, growth more slender. Foliage green changing to intense red and orange autumnal tints, with an abundance of bright red berries. Originated at the company's nurseries about twenty years ago. As hardy as parent type. Box Barberry is an ideal dwarf hedge and edging plant, serving purpose similar to dwarf border Box. Its autumnal glory adds an unique feature to the garden border.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the Secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Public notice is also hereby given that as no objection has been filed against the registration of Asparagus Fletcherii (densifolium) by F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass., and Orlando, Fla., the same becomes complete.

Toronto, Ont. Canada

Cut flowers are scarcer than ever before in the history of the flower business. Managers of floral concerns state that while there is an unprecedented demand yet the chief cause of the shortage is the lack of coal. Last year when flowers should have been planted the coal situation made it impossible to get the necessary supplies to heat the greenhouses. The price of flowers has therefore increased considerably. The shortage is being relieved to some extent by the generous use of wild flowers. Mr. Waters has worked up a considerable trade in this line.

Club Meeting.

The Retail Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 15, when arrangements were made for the annual 'Mum show, which will be held this year on Nov. 8 and 9. Special window display cards, posters, stickers, blotters, enclosures for letters, etc., are being printed and will be distributed among members. The Dale Estate, Brampton, states that they will have a particularly fine selection of 'Mums ready for the show. President George Geraghty of the club says that next year an attempt will be made to organize the florists of the Dominion in order that they may enjoy some of the benefits of the Toronto club.

Cannot Import Baskets

Mr. Geraghty asked that the attention of United States florist's supply firms be drawn to the fact that shipments of supplies containing baskets cannot be imported into Canada, and such shipments will be returned. Requests to the War Trade Board to have the ban on baskets removed have been unavailing.

The stores of H. G. Dillemuth, King st. West and those of J. J. Higgins, Limited, on Yonge st and King st. West, have been overhauled and redecorated.

The "Little Grey Flower Shoppe," 13½ Queen st. East, has been registered. The interior decorations and furniture are in keeping with its name.

Several Toronto florists have been ill with influenza, recent victims being Mr. Grace of Simmons & Son, J. A. Neal and Mr. Carter. Mrs. Moore of the Peoples' Florists is also ill.

Mr. and Mrs. James of the Peoples' Florists, Queen st. West, have returned from a two months' trip to Atlantic City and New York, a month being spent at their Summer home on Long Island, N. Y.

Fred Good, superintendent of the Eastern District of the Parks Dept., who resigned, has been presented with a mantel clock by the employees in his district. G. C. K.

Worcester, Mass.

Although florists have had a steady call for flowers this past week, the big rush experienced the three previous weeks has been broken. Flowers are a trifle more plentiful and consequently prices have dropped accordingly. Carnations brought from $2 to $4 per 100; Roses $3 up; 'Mums $1 to $3 per doz.; Lilies $12 per 100; Violets $1 to $1.50. Asters and Gladioli, outdoor grown, although scarce and of poor quality, brought $2 to $4 per 100; other outdoor flowers taken to the stores find a ready sale. The only potted plants offered for sale at present are ferns, palms, Crotons and a few 'Mums which are selling well.

It is the general opinion among wholesalers here that the cut flower market prices will go down very little this season because so many have either closed up their greenhouses or branched off to other crops such as Tomatoes. F. M.

Dismantling of Large Greenhouse

The big greenhouse of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., of Westerly, R. I., one of the largest in New England, is to be sold and wrecked for the 250,000 sq. ft. of glass and thousands of feet of piping. The Katz House Wrecking Co. of Hartford is negotiating with Judge Herbert W. Rathbun, receiver of the Reuter estate for the purchase of the greenhouses and fixtures. After the mortgage is foreclosed the land will probably revert to the Washington Trust Co. The Reuter Co. went in bankruptcy some months ago and the estate is in progress of settlement.

Scilly Isles Mourn King

The Scilly islanders are mourning the recent death of "King" T. A. Dorrien-Smith who ruled the 145 islands in much the same way as a landed proprietor on the mainland would. He inherited the islands from an uncle who rescued their inhabitants from poverty by introducing the culture of bulbs for their flowers which, in season, were shipped into the English markets in huge quantities. The Dorrien-Smith estate at Tresco Abbey, reputedly the most remarkable in the kingdom, excited the intense admiration of the late King Edward, who visited the islands when on a yachting tour. The Scilly Isles are just west of Land's End on the extreme Southwest Coast of England.

The Truth Concerning California

MANY a family has gone broke; lost every dollar they had, when immigrating to this State, by listening to the plausible tales of interested real estate agents, of fabulous profits from cultivating the soil. The great diversity of soils and of climates make it possible to grow all sorts of tropic and semi-tropic plants, but not all of them in all sections of the State. Money invested in advice from one who knows about all of these things will be wisely spent.

Five dollars, please, if you wish to know.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN—President, J. R. MAYHEW, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. EDWARD MOON, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. HILL, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, CURTIS NYE SMITH, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

Grouping

To form a pleasing group of one kind of plant is usually a much easier task than when several dissimilar kinds are employed. How often have we admired the graceful outlines of Forsythia, Weigela, or Thunberg's Spiræa, used alone in a well formed group.

In such a case practically the only point to be considered is the right relation of the group to the surroundings. In a mixed planting, however, we have the additional problem of making sure that the plants in the group conform in shape and color and are in general accord with each other. It is a common sight to see groups and plantings spoilt by a mixture of many sorts which do not harmonize; it is better to use only one kind than a discordant jumble of many sorts. To quote the words of an old gardener: "'Tis hard to see what's going to be," which is a truism. We must have foresight, and this springs from insight—the knowledge gained in the school of experience and observation.

While much has been said against a mixture of evergreen and deciduous plants, the writer has seen plantings, which although mixed, were nevertheless satisfactory. The illustration herewith is a pleasing example of such grouping, wherein both evergreens and deciduous plants are used to good effect. The writer will admit that the group is lacking in some desirable points and suffers perhaps most of all from the fact that some of the foreground plants are too stiff in outline. A much more pleasing finish would have resulted if those in the foreground were of the tabular or drooping kind. The effect, however, viewed from a distance, is strikingly beautiful.

Perhaps an analysis of the group would prove interesting to readers, many of whom will doubtless recognize at once the prominent units in it. First, we have a background of deciduous trees, among which are Maple, Ash and American Beech, with several White Dogwood to the right in the picture. These trees are really part of the boundary planting of the property. Directly in front of these is seen a tall White Pine; in triangular formation are placed Koster's Blue Spruce, Oriental Spruce and Concolor Fir. Several medium sized Japanese Cedars (Retinosporas) have been used to fill intersecting spaces and set in the foreground of the Concolor Fir is a dwarf Weeping Spruce. To the extreme right is the dainty red Fern-leaf Japanese Maple, which forms a pleasing finish to the group in that direction.

The three most conspicuous plants occupying the foreground are specimens of the golden form of our common California Privet, but of a rich, yellow not often seen in this plant. Now, despite what has been said pro and con regarding the use of the highly colored leaf plants, and even admitting that they should be subordinated to those of the natural green, the writer believes that the combination of color in this mixed group is really good. By referring again to the analysis of the group, we can readily see why the arrangement of this planting could very well pass the censors.

First, there is enough green foliage present to admit of the use of plants with foliage of brighter hues, and the introduction of the latter into the group does not produce an extreme or violent effect, but rather one which was in the nature of a gradual blending of green, gray, silver and gold, producing a pleasing harmony.

The thought, then to have in mind when using a tree or shrub with variegated or conspicuous foliage is that it should not come into the landscape too suddenly, but should rather be led up to it by its neighbors whose coloring gradually assimilates with its own.

For the nurseryman's or florist's show border this principle can be, perhaps, set aside for the reason that in this particular instance the object is purely to attract attention to individuals by sharp contrasts. We must therefore allow the same license here as we would to the exaggerations of the Spring poet's effusions or to the startling advertising poster. When, however, we practice the art of grouping in permanent plantings we must have in mind a well balanced picture of tones and shades, which not only claims attention but creates the desire to produce a similar effect.

Magnolias, Native and Oriental

From an address by John Dunbar, Asst.-Supt. of Parks, Rochester, N. Y., on "Some Hardy Ornamental Flowering Trees," concluded from page 621 of "The Exchange" of Oct. 19

In ornamental flowering trees China and Japan have contributed nothing more beautiful than Magnolias. The hybrids which have been developed many years since from two Chinese species and known as Chinese hybrid Magnolias are gems of the first water. In all parts of this country wherever they prove to be hardy and do well the fact is indeed a fortunate circumstance. I often think that if these Magnolias had never been introduced from Asia, what a serious floral blank would have occurred in our parks and gardens today. We were pleased to observe last Winter that although a number of flower buds were killed, a sufficient number of buds escaped to make a presentable display and there was no wood injury; even the large-leaved Magnolia from the South was not injured.

All the Chinese hybrid Magnolias do splendidly in Rochester and its vicinity. There are many of them throughout the city which are at least 30ft. in height. On Oxford street the space in the center 1800ft. in length is entirely devoted to Magnolias. The variety is mostly speciosa, with a few others interspersed. On the particular Sunday when they are in full bloom crowds of people go especially to see them, in much the same way as the Japanese go to see their Cherries in bloom, in particular Cherry plantations in Japan.

Magnolias love an abundance of light, sunshine and air. They cannot fight for existence nor succeed when their roots are crowded among those of other trees. Nor can Magnolias flourish in partial shade, as Shade Trees can, or the White Flowering Dogwood, or as Hawthorns can to a certain extent. Magnolias need a deep, cool, moist, well drained, medium, light loam to be at their best.

The following hybrids all succeed well here: Alexandrina, alba superba, Andre Leroy, Brozzonii, Norbertiana, rustica flora rubra, Soulangeana, Soulangeana nigra, speciosa and Verbanica. The Japanese species, stellata, hypoleuca and parviflora are lovely flowering sorts and do well with us. The Chinese Yulan Magnolia, now known by botanists as Magnolia denudata, is perhaps the most beautiful species in existence. A well developed tree, covered with its pure white flowers is certainly an attractive sight. Four American species do well with us, namely: acuminanta, (native here) Fraseri, glauca, macrophylla and tripetala. The native Cucumber Tree, M. acuminata, while its flowers are not as showy as many other Magnolias, is nevertheless a handsome tree.

We have been almost entirely dependent upon the continent of Europe for the importation of Magnolias for our parks, cemeteries and gardens. Under the stringent law which will soon be enforced by our Government prohibiting with a few exceptions, the importation of nursery stock, and which is particularly strict in regard to plants with balls of earth about the roots, Magnolias can no longer be imported, and American nurserymen will have to rise to the occasion by beginning industriously to propagate Magnolias in quantity, for we need tens of thousands of them for the parks, cemeteries and gardens of this country.

The Plantsman Who Knew

A nurseryman looking over a fine collection of evergreens very much surprised the owner by remarking: "that Nordman's Fir is a very fine specimen; it evidently did not get a setback when you transplanted it in 1910."

"Yes that is so. It was planted there in 1910; I remember it because I added that strip of ground to my lawn in the Spring of that year, but how did you know it?"

"Oh that is simple enough. Do you see the growth it has made this year, about ten inches. The year before that it was about the same, but the previous year the growth was shorter, indicating a dry Summer or some such cause. Now if you will follow on down you will see from the growth of the Summer of 1910 that the tiers of branches come very close together, the leader made being not more than two inches. It is very evident that the tree was moved at that time, as, during the year previous, it made a good growth. By going on down you will see the indications of its having been transplanted twice before that; once when it was five years old and again when it was eight.

"All the coniferous evergreens carry their histories in their growth so that they may be read very easily; in fact all plants do to a greater or lesser extent, especially while they are young and branched near the ground. When they get older and lose their lower branches it is not so easy to tell their age except by counting the annual rings in a cross section of the trunk.

"Most plants keep a diary of events that affect them which is easily read by the close observer who understands their habits. While trees are young the pages are open and may be read at a glance, but as they get older the records are filed away in the archives of the trunk."—National Nurseryman.

Yucca filamentosa

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Referring to your article on Yuccas in THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 21: Mr. Matthews did not mention Y. filamentosa variegata. I have been growing this variety for 25 years and it is a great addition to any garden, as it is beautifully colored and holds its bright color throughout the Winter. As it withstood the cold of last Winter it may be regarded as perfectly hardy. I have never known it to revert to the green type. It does not come true from seed.

This Issue Delayed

Owing to wage demand made on printers and publishers by the Press Feeders' Union which it was impossible to concede, no current periodicals were mailed out of New York for the week ending Oct. 26. Hence the delay in mailing current issue. The men returned to work Oct. 29, pending the settlement of the wage question by the War Labor Board, into whose hands it was originally submitted by the employers, on Monday, Oct. 14.

Prepare for Peace

Now is the time to prepare for peace. When the war ends men and companies who have looked far enough ahead will be ready to reap a fruitful harvest. It will not do to wait like Micawber for something to turn up. The war will not last always. Good will cannot be built in a day. So now is the time to make plans for peace, to advertise goods that will be in still greater demand when the world turns from its war industries to lines of saner production.

Mr. Florist, Mr. Seedsman, Mr. Nurseryman, how are you going to keep your name before the public and build a demand for your goods that will insure a satisfactory business the minute peace is declared? In a recent address Val Fisher, a member of the London Chamber of Commerce, made the following significant remarks that apply just as much to producers of horticultural products as to manufacturers of other goods. We quote:

"The war has taught the manufacturers and business men of Britain that advertising is not only the least expensive way to sell goods, but that it also has the far more important function of building good will—a good will whose benefits, especially in critical times, can hardly be measured. British business men have also learned that advertising can be used in time of war to stop the sale of their goods, and at the same time retain and even increase the good will of the public. In a few cases British corporations have realized when it was too late, and after irrevocable damage was done, that advertising would have saved them.

"These are times of rapid and tremendous change. No man can rest on his laurels. Those who were leaders last year, those who are leaders now in their respective business lines, may be surpassed next year by far-seeing, efficient and thoroughly prepared competitors who have laid their plans a long way in advance."

If it be true that straws indicate the direction of the wind, florists will be interested to note that last week Senator Weeks of Mass. introduced a resolution proposing the creation of a special Congressional committee on after the war reconstruction. In speaking on this resolution the senator declared that the end of the war may come sooner than expected, a statement that seems to have gained force since he gave it utterance because of recent developments at the front. It is, therefore, as he said, necessary that the country should be prepared with a program to meet the exigencies that will come with the ending of hostilities; for unless the country takes advantage of the present to provide for the future, it will be caught in the same condition of unpreparedness for peace as it was unprepared for war.

Here is a special hint to florists. Now is the time to plan for vigorous after-the-war-business upon a sane and healthy basis.

Plant Exclusion

A further opportunity was given florists, nurserymen and others interested to be heard before the Federal Horticultural Board in the matter of the proposed exclusion of plants, the hearing being held at Washington on Oct. 18. The florists were represented by some of their best men, among them Charles H. Totty, President of the Society of American Florists, William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., J. D. Eisele of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia and E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind. Since then testimony has been voluntarily offered this office to the effect that no fairer hearing was ever tendered a body of men than that given the florists on this occasion.

Our special representative at this meeting has given us the story in full and it will be found in another column. It will be noted that J. D. Eisele, as representing one of the firms most largely to be affected should Exclusion go into effect, made several statements of facts which appeared to be new to the Board. As the house of Dreer is to be classed as essentially working for the best interests of American horticulture, we have a fair hope that Mr. Eisele's statements will be given full consideration.

It is the consensus of trade opinion that the entire proposition should be postponed until after the war is over, at least so far as it deals with the so-called florists' flowers.

Immediately after the conclusion of peace new commercial treaties will be entered into by and between all countries, which will furnish the opportunity for adjudication of existing problems, many of which may be settled on a basis of which we have no present idea.

As we have repeated more than once, if Exclusion went into effect June next, the Allied Governments under their present stress, would have cause to consider the act an unfriendly one and so far as Holland and Belgium are concerned, in particular, their countries would undoubtedly make great efforts to cancel the entire act, except possibly in those specific cases where it could be shown without dispute that pests or diseases had been brought into the United States on plants imported from these countries.

A Big Tree and a Great Florist

The illustration herewith is unique in that it shows a giant Redwood, one of the largest of its species remaining among the grove of Redwoods within six miles of Capitola, Cal. Originally the tree was 385 feet high but is now but 310 feet, 75 feet of the top having been broken off many years ago and now lying on the ground. It is 75 feet in circumference. There are several other trees surrounding it which are nearly as large. The gentleman sitting down on the right is John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y.

James A. Brown (standing) and John Lewis Childs (sitting)

In the background will be noted one of California's giant trees. The photo was taken near the Brown Bulb and Berry Ranch, Capitola, Cal.

The gentleman standing is James A. Brown, manager of the Brown Bulb and Berry Ranch of Capitola. This was Mr. Childs' first visit to any of the big tree groves in California, although he has visited the State several times. Mr. Brown, who kindly sent us the photograph, offers to show this grove to any member of the trade who may happen to be out his way.

We cannot think of losing this war. We cannot run the risk of an agriculture controlled by a headstrong unmoral state, such as would be imposed on us if Prussia were to succeed. Agriculture lies at the foundation of our systems of democracy; its opinion must count in our public policies. This means that farmers must take such an active part in the maintenance of the war that they will have a right to be heard. They have taken this part thus far, and I know they will be steadfast to the end—L. H. Bailey.

Obituary

Walter R. Siebrecht

Walter Robert Siebrecht, youngest son of Henry A. and Emma S. Siebrecht, died in Brooklyn, N. Y., of pneumonia on Wednesday morning, Oct. 16, at the age of 28. The funeral services were held at his late residence, North ave., New Rochelle, N. Y., on Saturday, Oct. 19, at 3 p.m. Interment was in the family cemetery at New Rochelle.

Mr. Siebrecht, several years ago, was a member of the firm of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, wholesale florists, New York City, and later of the Walter R. Siebrecht Co., Inc., wholesale florists, New York City. Since he severed his connections with the latter company he has spent much of his time in California with his brother. Mr. Siebrecht was a member of the New York Florists' Club and of the Masonic Order. He is survived by a widow and two children.

James and Paul Campas

It is with deep regret that I announce the deaths of James and Paul Campas within three days of each other the past week, both from pneumonia. James, who passed away Oct. 14 at the age of 28, was in business at 15 East Main st., Rochester, N. Y., as a florist. He was a veteran of the late Balkan war. Since returning he has made Rochester his home. For a time he, with his brother, worked at the above place of business until about a year ago when Paul opened the Rosery Flower Shop on Clinton ave. South. Paul died Oct. 17. He was 34 years of age, a member of the Rochester Lodge of Elks and known to hundreds of Rochester flower buyers in the early days on Main st. as the Smiling Florist due to his always being so gentlemanly and courteous to his customers. Both these young men possessed qualities which made them highly respected everywhere. Honest, industrious, in the prime of life and making their way in the world, the news of their death came as a great shock to their many friends. They leave mother, father, two sisters and a brother, who I believe all reside in Greece. H. B. S.

Dominick Rusconi

Dominick Rusconi, the well known Cincinnati bulbman and seedsman, passed away on Saturday, Oct. 19, at his home in Covington, a few hours after he had suffered a stroke of apoplexy at his store.

He located in this city more than forty years ago, following a couple years spent in the South selling bulbs to the private trade. He continued his same line of business when he located in Cincinnati, except that he catered to the florists and the retail trade. By his untiring efforts and diligence he built up a large and successful business.

His friends are many, due to his kindly and charitable disposition, his general fairness, and his willingness to lend a helping hand to every one in need. His domestic life was beautiful and he derived great pleasure from doing all he could for his family. A few years ago he sent all of his children abroad at one time to finish their education. Mrs. Rusconi accompanied them on that trip.

Mr. Rusconi leaves his widow, two daughters, three sons, the eldest of whom, Peter, is in the service of the United States and is stationed in France as an interpreter in the Engineering Corps of the Army. His death is mourned by a large circle of friends who sympathize with the family in their bereavement. TEDDY.

Mrs. Josephine Rasmussen

After an illness of seven months, Mrs. Josephine Rasmussen, 48 years of age, wife of Anders Rasmussen, one of the most prominent growers of this section, died of heart trouble at the family home, 1108 Vincennes st. Her death marks the passing of one of the most charitable residents the city has ever known, and her removal repre-

nts an irreparable loss to hundreds of needy persons hom she befriended. She was born and raised in New lbany. For many years she was a member of the lutchinson Presbyterian Church, the Woman's Club, the 'ortnightly Club and the Coterie, by whose members she as greatly beloved as well as the board of directors of ie Cornelia Memorial Orphan's Home, where she ren- ered very efficient service. She is survived by her hus- and and one son, John Rasmussen, a student at Illinois 'niversity; also her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Cad- allader, of New Albany, and one sister, Mrs. Earl S. win, of Louisville, wife of the president of the Ameri- an Southern National Bank.

Mrs. Rasmussen was prominently connected by family s well as social ties, but was one of those high minded omen who was friendly with everyone, regardless of ieir position in life. The florists and members of their amilies in Louisville knew her well as she had been resent at numerous outings and meetings. They realize iat New Albany has lost one of its finest and biggest earted citizens.

Louis E. Schmutz, Jr.

Louis E. Schmutz, Jr., of 442 Clarkson st., Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., whose death was briefly announced in THE EXCHANGE of Oct. 12, died of a complication of iseases on Tuesday, Oct. 8, after a sickness of several ionths.

Mr. Schmutz was born in Brooklyn in 1874. He was ngaged in the wholesale plant growing business all his fe, at the time of his death being with his father in latbush, Brooklyn, whom he helped in the two green- ouse ranges of the Schmutz establishment to build up a irge wholesale plant growing business. Earlier in life e had been for a time with Siebrecht of New Rochelle, . Y. He was popular with the trade because of his vial disposition. He was a member of the New York lorists' Club, of the Brooklyn Eighteenth Assembly emocratic Club; of Midwood Council R. A., Flatbush onclave, I. O. H., and the Foresters of America, but r all of that Mr. Schmutz was a home man and de- oted to his family.

The funeral services, at which there were many beau- ful floral pieces from the craft, were held on Friday ening, the Rev. David A. McMurray, pastor of the enox Road Baptist Church officiating. Mr. Schmutz is rvived by his wife, Martha Schmutz, two daughters, loise and Martha; his father, Louis E., and his mother, lie, and by four brothers, Gustave, Alfred, Harry id Frederick Schmutz.

Corp. William Wallace Wilmore, Jr.

"A glorious death is his

Corp. William W. Wilmore, Jr., of Wheatridge, Colo., ied in a military hospital in France on Sept. 22, fol- wing an operation on a shrapnel wound, according to formation received by his father, W. W. Wilmore of ie well known Dahlia farm near Wheatridge. Corporal 'ilmore was connected with a machine gun company and id been through several of the great battles on the 'estern front before receiving his death wound. He as married and in addition to a wife, leaves two small children. Corporal Wilmore would have been 30 years old next month. A letter from an interne in the hospital in which Corp. Wilmore died, states that he was buried by Colorado men. The letter in part reads as follows:

"Corporal Wilmore was admitted to our hospital today. He had a shrapnel wound in the abdomen and a compound fracture of the right arm with severe hemorrhages. The shrapnel case was about an inch square. He died shortly after leaving the operating room. He was very weak, due to loss of blood and peritonitis resulting from the wound. He was operated on and cared for by Colorado men, who did everything possible for him, but as he said, 'This is a big rough game and someone has to get hurt.'"

Corporal Wilmore left Denver on April 26, going to Camp Funston, where he remained only three weeks before going overseas. Before entering the service he was employed on his father's Dahlia farm and also conducted a flower shop on 17th st. in Denver. His genial and cheerful disposition and his consideration for those with whom he came in contact made him a host of friends, among whom the news of his death was received with the deepest regret. C. F. E.

The late Louis E. Schmutz, Jr.

Ralph M. Ward

Ralph M. Ward, founder and owner of the firm of Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York City, importers and exporters, and specializing in Lily bulbs, died at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday, October 17, of pneumonia, following a brief illness.

He was born towards the end of August, 1880, in Marshalltown, Iowa, and was the son of Charles and the late Cora A. Ward. His father was a railroad telegraph operator at that time, and like a number of other men of similar profession in those days, rose from the ranks to prominence and success in the business world. The boyhood days of Ralph M. Ward saw him a somewhat sickly child, and after he had suffered an attack of diphtheria while at school, the family removed to Los Angeles, Cal. In 1887, when his mother took sick, the family returned to Iowa, and there she died shortly after. Because of this he was placed under the care of his mother's parents at Davenport, Ia., until 1898. He had gone to school and then studied law in local offices, but his ambition was too great for the small city of the Middle West, and he began to think of the big East.

The next period of his career is told best in his own whimsical way, reprinted from an advertisement in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE of Jan. 28, 1911.

The Story of a Freckled-faced Kid

A little over twelve years ago a freckled-faced boy of nineteen years arrived in Philadelphia over the B. & O. from the West. He had the usual school smattering with a few sprinkles of law and stenography thrown in. His prospects in the West were small and in the East no better, as far as outside influence was concerned. He was poor, and so applied for a position with the Pennsylvania Railroad. The kind old railroader told him it was no place for an ambitious youth without influence, so he obtained a job as grocery clerk at $3.50 per week. It was at a branch store and the work was hard but healthy. It happened that both the manager and himself had keys to the store and both keys had to be used at once to gain admittance. One fine morning, after slinging flour until midnight the night before, he overslept himself and the store opened at nine instead of six a.m., so when Saturday came he was "docked" for time and fired. He then "answered ads" and on Oct. 4, 1898, received a postal to "Please call at once" from Hagemann & Meyer.

He was right in line and after being inspected was given a chance to "try it." Now, Mr. Meyer had just become a partner, and, with Mr. Hagemann, conducted a business in bicycles, typewriters, Valley pips and Harrisii bulbs, down in a little office on South Third st. Mr. Hegemann was king and came in about 11 a. m. and looked around to see that we were all there and busy. About 1 p. m. they both went to lunch, which often lasted until three (German style), after which the rest got a bite. We did not usually close at 6 p.m. either, but the salary was $5 per week, which paid the old German lady on North Sixth st. for board and laundry and left a tiny little bit besides. Business improved, and a little later it was decided that New York was the only place for a bulb business, having many advantages, and the removal was announced.

Now, in making this important move it was a "toss-up" whether to take this fellow along or not, for meanwhile he had struck for a dollar raise in salary. However, it was decided to move him with the fixtures, so he was given expenses for the trip. So it was that Mr. Hagemann, Mr. Meyer and this youth came to New York the first of June, eleven years ago, and located at 55 Dey st. From that time on business increased and the youth got better acquainted with things, for the Hagemann school was a good school, the king being a wise king and a good business man. The salary finally reached the topnotch, $900 per year, and in the course of time other employees were brought into the business, which caused the office atmosphere to change as from the clouds to the subway, resulting in a dissolution of partnership in 1902.

This youth then secured some capital and with Mr. Hagemann formed the firm of Wm. Hagemann & Co. The contract was for a year as a trial and was very satisfactory, but when it came to a long term contract conditions were not so promising, for there was a prospective son-in-law in view, so the youth thought best to sail his own canoe, and in 1903 the house of Ralph M. Ward & Co. was established. The business was that of importers and exporters of bulbs, etc., for direct sale to growers, and quality was the basis rather than price.

The late Ralph M. Ward

At first it was hard hoeing, trips abroad were frequently necessary and expensive, and sales of course at the start were very moderate. By hard work, persistency and the aid of good employees, the business has grown until today it is the largest of its kind in the world. This youth, of course, was Ralph M. Ward, and while he is the sole owner of the business, he is only a part of the organization. The business is conducted openly and above board—no secrets from employees. Every man is a vital part of the business and must know all; cooperation and honesty of purpose is what makes any business successful, and every man selling the Horseshoe Brand knows his goods are the best to be had, and that they are full value for the money.

Since 1903 the business has grown steadily, the development of the use of cold storage Lily bulbs playing a large part in its expansion. Mr. Ward was the pioneer in blazing the way for florists to become accustomed to using cold storage bulbs the year round, and he was also the first to import the bulbs into a number of the larger cities throughout the country, where they were kept in cold storage awaiting withdrawal at regular periods by the customers of the house.

Mr. Ward was known all over the country through the unique advertisements written by himself for the trade papers. A great many of them show the keen humor and kindliness of the man, together with a very real insight into human nature. It was, in fact, at least partly through the magnetic quality of these advertisements that the reputation of Horseshoe Brand Lily bulbs was established and made known wherever there was a commercial florist.

The requirements of business made Mr. Ward a great traveler, and he had been practically all over the world in quest of new ideas and new business. A branch office was established in Rotterdam, Holland, in 1916, but the increasing difficulty of shipping on account of the world war prevented the anticipated growth there. Other offices were established in Japan and China.

One side of Mr. Ward was probably known to but few of his friends; he was a wide and hungry reader. His personal library was composed not only of standard works, with which he was thoroughly familiar, but also of works on psychology, science, advertising, personality, etc. To the trade at large he was known as a keen but just business man; to his many friends and family as a man of the greatest ambitions, with the ability to attain the pinnacle to which he looked forward.

Mr. Ward was a 32d degree Mason and a member of numerous other organizations, including the Railroad Club, the Elks, the Society of American Florists, the New York Florists' Club (life member), etc. He was also an officer of the Bound Brook (N. J.) Trust Co.

Besides a wife, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Ward, and a daughter, Miss Cora, he is survived by his father, Chas. W. Ward, and a brother, C. Wayne Ward. The funeral services were held at his late home in Bound Brook, N. J., on Sunday, Oct. 20, and were simple but very impressive. Floral tributes were many and beautiful. The funeral was private, the family, a few of his closest friends and the office staff, most of whom had been both employees and friends for many years, being the only ones present. Interment followed in the Bound Brook cemetery, New Jersey. J. R. L.

Dard's Fourth Liberty Loan Window

represent the call of the Army and Navy to the people to "Prove Your Right to Be Called Freeman, Buy Liberty Bonds." In the center is an electric sign surmounted by flags, calling on the people to "Lend." Back of the electric sign is a silvered ball representing the world, underneath which is the legend: "Liberty Bonds or German Bondage." Farther back to the right and left of the center and of the buglers are figures representing "Uncle Sam" with the legend "Lend." In the extreme background is a large figure of "Uncle Sam," with money in the form of bills in his hands, and the legend "Lend"; above him is a spread eagle. Other legends occupy several places in the window.

In short the entire make-up of the window calls emphatically the attention of the public to the necessity of subscribing to the Fourth Liberty Loan. The illustration on page 649 gives some idea of the forcefulness of this appropriate and timely window display which we are assured was not so expensive as to be beyond the means of any florist who had the disposition to make such a display.

Henry Penn's Narrative

The best known retail florist advertiser in the country tells our readers frankly how they can follow in his footsteps and achieve as great a success in business as has fallen to him. The story is told simply and without a trace of egotism, as characteristic of all big men. Incidentally, Mr. Penn is the chairman of the Committee on Publicity of the Society of American Florists

As a boy I learnt early in life that success in business can only be brought about by doing things just a little better than your neighbor and then letting the public know it.

My earliest experiences date back to the time of my first position in a little shop when but a lad where I had the opportunity of selling flowers and meeting customers personally. This gave me a great opportunity of studying human nature and its desires, so in time it was very easy to suggest ideas in flowers that soon won for me many friends who are still customers on our books. This personal touch is the finest kind of advertising as it is the means of recommending others to you and thereby creating a link that continues to grow providing you do as you would be done by.

Following my lead along these lines for about four years and determining upon starting on my own career I soon learnt that while success can be had in the manner already mentioned and that, generally at that time, all flower shops felt that advertising was not ethical, although at the same time any free advertising would be appreciated, I soon felt that the proper advertising and the kind necessary to produce results is the legitimate kind you pay hard earned money for. So with this thought in mind a small appropriation was made for advertising flowers to the Boston public.

One of my early experiences was caused by the remark of a very wealthy Bostonian who, whenever he purchased flowers would say to me, "Well, Penn how much are you going to soak me for a dozen Carnations today?" This remark caused me a lot of thought as to why a customer should associate the purchase of flowers with the idea that he was being "soaked". It led to a series of advertisements which tended to overcome that kind of thought. Then came our street-car advertisements which are still running. I believe we are credited with being one of the most persistent of street-car advertisers. The idea of using street-car advertising for flowers came to me on account of having to be modest in expenditure (by necessity). I could create the same effect as the large national advertisers because all car-cards were uniform size and Penn's ads. were given the same importance as all others. This idea grew on me and we have steadily increased our total number of car-cards used.

Next came the painted bill-boards in selected localities that were preferable on account of passing automobile traffic as well as being in direct line with car travel which doubled the importance of our car-cards—this a good point to remember when starting a campaign. If you can cause your advertising to stand constantly in the eyes of the public you are sub-consciously creating your name in the public's mind. That brings me to our newspaper advertising, which is the quickest and most effective manner of reaching most of the people in the shortest possible time.

One thing must be remembered: Once you attempt newspaper advertising you must determine to keep it up, as it is productive only when by proper advertising copy and good business methods, constantly used, that results will be obtainable.

Feeling that the florist business was to be my future calling I determined to learn the essentials of success. If we were to expend money for advertising of flowers we must learn something about advertising too, and so it was the logical thing for me to join an advertising club where I soon began to get saturated with advertising in its various phases. By mingling with men of various advertising clubs I soon got a clearer conception of the art and, coupled with a fair knowledge of flowers, I made the combination work for me. One of the best investments I ever made was when I decided advertising was essential to the sale of flowers and also that newspapers are the logical channel through which to do it. Although it is the most expensive, it is the most productive. We have great faith in the fellow who has the spark of optimism at this time, who will keep up his advertising and not falter. That fellow will win success, but the man who doesn't sense the success that advertising plays in his business will let some other fellow walk past him some day.

This reminds me of what Lloyd George said some time ago; "Minds running in the same course for a long time get rutty, and the weightier the mind the deeper the rut. You require fresh mind to lift the cart out of these furrows." How well this exemplifies some of the failures of those who were successes in our line in the past generation!

The man who sticks to the florist business and who doesn't spend money wisely for advertising is one of the kind who will one day wonder why he didn't succeed. The Government is placing the greatest confidence in it for winning the war, and as winning the war is our first and most important function for success, may we not expect that if advertising is good for Uncle Sam and all his problems, it may solve those of the florist, too? Use advertising when you have flowers aplenty and also when they are scarce. The result must always end with ultimate success.

Some men who haven't yet reached the point in business of having seen the necessity of advertising to help them remind me somewhat of the man who said: "Yes, I go without meat for the sake of keeping the Allies well supplied," and five minutes later, remarks, "I live mostly on vegetables—don't care much for meat". Then remember, that when you cut down your advertising your neighbor has a better chance to get the business providing he keeps it up. So once your advertising is started, keep it up regardless.

Soldier Gardening

Lance Corporal T. A. Weston, formerly on the staff of an English florists' trade paper, and whose articles in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE are familiar to our readers, recently favored us with quite a number of photographs taken at his camp in England. As we understand it, this is a supply depot and not an army cantonment, and it is due to being stationed permanently at this one point that Mr. Weston has been able to accomplish the work in flower and vegetable growing which he describes and depicts by means of his illustrations, of which we reproduce one only—that facing the camp entrance. The annuals around some of the tents are largely Clarkias, Godetias, Linums, Nasturtiums, Amaranthus, Candytuft, Eschscholtzias, Linarias, Alyssum, Cornflowers, etc., mostly from a seed patch raised by Mr. Weston. Of Poppies, Mignonette, Centaurea, etc., he says that it is usually reckoned they will not transplant, but through his own method of planting out, he did transplant and lost nothing, despite the fact that from May to early August there was no rain. Of the Dahlias he says, "These have been the greatest success of the season. They started to flower in June, when but a foot tall, and have never left off. (His letter is dated Sept. 16). We have cut sheaves of bloom and even now the plants are but 18in. or so. The Nemesias (Dobbie's strain) are a veritable triumph for bedding, showing most wonderful colors. The Fuchsias have been very fine. I have some hundred Carnation plants in thirty odd varieties. They were only late struck plants, so I never stopped them but let them run up. Despite this they have made quite a lot of growth. The Violas have never ceased flowering since planted in early May. Veritable little picture plants are the Begonias in red and pink; the white varieties are slower to flower and less free."

When it is understood that Mr. Weston has done all this work with his own hands, and such as he could impress to help him, and after long daily hours of Government work and that all the money spent was £2 ($10) to cover the cost of Geraniums purchased, what better evidence could one have testifying to the result of one man's efforts on behalf of floriculture?

Mr. Weston says, "We have lots of visitors, including ladies, and have cut a good many bunches of flowers to give away. I am sure that we have more flowers in our camp than could be found in the whole village, numbering some hundreds of houses. The allotments around here are plentiful but devoted mainly to vegetables." Of the latter he says, "I have just harvested two bushels of Onions in very good shape from my allotment. It is not really mine but belongs to the billet; I simply take command, get the seed, plant it, and so on. This is a terrible district for Onion maggot and mildew, but I beat them both this season. Of spuds (Potatoes) on the plot I have lifted about 6cwt. (672 lbs.) which will keep the allotee's family going. Never had better spuds. Some hundreds of tubers weighed over one pound each. These were planted from specially selected seed, most of it of my own growing." Of American varieties Mr. Weston tried out Carman No. 1 and 3, Rural New-Yorker, Sir Walter Raleigh and several others. These were all so good that he is giving them all another trial against King Edward and Arran Chief, which have been trumps. Continuing, Mr. Weston states "Irish Cobbler, by the way, went sick, but then we had a lot of that mysterious early dying, probably the Phoma disease referred to in THE EXCHANGE. Dry weather is the main cause, without a doubt. Of Beans the plot has produced piles, so may of the Boston Pea Bean that I am ripening them off for Winter use."

Mr. Weston relates that all the water used had to be drawn from a well, there being no water laid on. Most of the ground occupied was wasted land and not promising

A Vegetable Song

At the luncheon given to visiting F. T. D. members on Tuesday, Oct. 8, by the Cleveland Florists' Club, Seamar Jack Barker, who acted as entertainer and scored rounc after round of applause, sang a parody which originatec through the movement that was made in England tc supplant flower gardens with vegetable gardens, whicl evidently did not appeal to the early training and sym pathies of the Tommies, so they got off the following:

Come to my garden of Par-si-nips,
Come where the Cauliflower blooms;
I cannot give you Forget-me-nots
But take this beautiful package of Kar-riots.
Walk with me 'round the Kab-ba-ges,
And then the As-pa-ray-gus we'll seek.
Marry me soon—
On our honeymoon
We'll have six Po-tat-toes every week.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Advertising is Keynote of Business Success

This is a conclusion from page 628; herein Herman T. Knoble of Cleveland, O., at F. T. D. Convention presents well devised campaign of publicity to cover entire year, month by month—Makes most of church, national and other events—St. Valentine's and Mother's Days, weddings, funerals, graduations, etc.—Insists that ads run close up to event—Shows cumulative effect of advertising—Disparages direct by mail campaigns as usually too costly—Favors but does not use bill boards and street cars—Declares window displays best of all methods—Deprecates theaters as mediums—Requires promptness, neatness, cleanliness.

The greatest correction I might suggest is that the majority of florists have the mistaken idea of advertising only periodically. A well devised program should be laid out, covering every month of the year. Let me hurriedly run over the twelve months and make a few suggestions. These should be closely adhered to. By so doing you will have a simple schedule for the year that can be changed more or less, but will answer the purpose sought.

January: Suggest that people buy cut flowers to use in their homes in the dreary and stormy days. Tell them of the wonderful varieties of blooming plants and the coming of the bulb flowers. Intersperse occasional copy on funeral flowers. Here and there remind the matrimonially inclined that flowers are essential to a complete wedding.

February: You have St. Valentine's Day which gives you an opportunity to ask every one in your city to remember his wife or sweetheart with the most appropriate valentine on earth, flowers. After Valentine Day talk about Tulips, Daffodils and Hyacinths, in the early expressions of Spring, and their influence in the home.

March: You have St. Patrick's Day. If Easter does not fall in this month, then run some copy on funeral flowers. Suggest to the business man that a few blooming plants in his place of business will inspire his sales people and encourage his business.

I am not a great believer in direct by mail advertising as particularly applied to us; but many times I have thought it would offer a remarkable opportunity for us to go after the merchant in other lines of business and tell him the advantage and benefit of having flowers in his particular place of business in some more or less conspicuous place, and thereby produce a more pleasing environment both for customers and sales people. That flowers have a beneficial psychological effect cannot be denied. While Mr. Floyd E. Waite, Cleveland Director of Public Safety, was addressing the audience I felt that he drew the best part of his inspiration from a beautiful basket of Roses, because I observed the attention he seemed to pay to them. Flowers really often perform just such an office; a fact I am satisfied that the nation at large understands and feels; otherwise we would not be in business today. People have ostracized many businesses apparently more necessary than the florist's business, merely because they recognize the psychological effect and the beneficial influence that flowers exert upon humanity.

F. T. D. window of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., winner of the silver cup given by Chas. H. Grakelow and awarded at Cleveland, Oct. 9, 1918. See p. 670

April: Granted that Easter falls in this month, talk about the wonderful use of flowers for the holiday occasion. Do not feel that you are already doing more business than you can handle. Personally we have never yet reached that stage. It is easy to add additional help in the various departments, so all the business you can corral will be properly handled. A serious drawback will result if you advertise much for these holiday occasions and then fall down in the handling of these orders. Bear in mind a certain class of people buy only at these times, and their opinion of the floral business is greatly formed from the manner in which you handle these holiday orders. We use extreme caution to satisfy our customers in every regard on these days. When we have complaints it is our desire to adjust them to the entire satisfaction of our customers.

A few years ago it occurred to me that we were doing all the business we possibly could on holidays, and doing it well. It was then that I started to study this situation very seriously in order to satisfy myself as to what are the fundamentals that go to make up the business. One may add additional delivery boys, sales people, order clerks, or additional repairs and enlargements, and he should do so in order to take care of any special business on the day when people are inclined to buy. In order to satisfy myself more fully I did a little experimenting; I ran ads. for holidays up to within about a day of the holiday; for instance, before Christmas I ran my Christmas ads up to the twenty-fourth, and we did a big business. Then as the next holiday approached, I said, "I will cut those ads. out to within a week. People are satisfied. If they are going to buy flowers, they have made up their minds to buy them, and what is the use of spending this additional money?" The result of that experiment was that we did a big business in the early part of the week, but it fell off suddenly the latter part.

The point I want to make is this: How many of you realize that outside of your own business few people really know about these holidays that we speak so much about at various times? They do not know about Mother's Day; they do not know about Thanksgiving Day, and they do not know about St. Valentine's Day, in relation to flower giving on these days. Few of them know about even Christmas and Easter, although a good many of them do know of course about Christmas. It is up to us to tell them and keep on telling them up to the last minute. If you will do that you will reap big returns. That is a thing I have thoroughly tested and found out. Believe me, I shall advertise up to the very last day at all times. Of course, that naturally does not apply in the same degree to national campaigns in which you cannot run your ads. up so close, because the papers do not come out those particular times.

May: Do not forget the wonderful possibilities of the newly invented holiday, Mother's Day. This is going to be one of the biggest days in the flower business. Immediately after Mother's Day talk funeral flowers, following that up with wedding talk. For the last of the month those of you who are especially prepared for Memorial Day, go after this business strong, and those of you who do not especially cater to this end of our line, talk about that part of it which you are in a position to handle.

June: Confine yourself to weddings, graduations, débutante parties, and more or less, social functions. I find that is always a good idea which works in harmony with the general thought of the people. If you play on their heart strings you will get returns from it.

July: Funeral flowers with an occasional wedding copy. August: the same. September: the same, adding a few suggestions about buying foliage plants to use in residences. October: wedding flowers, funeral flowers, and foliage plants for the home, not forgetting Hallowe'en in the latter part of the month.

November: For those of you where All Saints Day brings a big demand, go after that business. To others talk about weddings, funeral flowers, and, during the latter part of the month tell about Thanksgiving flowers.

December: Funeral flowers, early in the month, and Christmas and New Years for the balance of the month.

How Long a Campaign Should Last

I might say in connection with that, that we plan our Christmas copy early, but continue it right up to the last minute. Get people to buy as early in your store as they do in other stores. You may not be able to sell them roses on December 10 and deliver to them then; but you may sell them a jardiniere, or a plant, or a basket of plants on which there is a good profit. Go after them, get their money; you will have the best proposition on earth for Christmas gifts, and you ought to go after it.

Occasionally we play on our old bachelors who have twelve or fifteen lady friends and are not seriously attached to any one, yet who feel that they ought to be remembered. In such a case I suggest to them, "If you send your picture they will get to comparing notes and find out about it six months afterwards. If you send them something else they may not like it, but send them a box of cut flowers or a basket, and when they receive it they will think you are a fine fellow even if two weeks afterwards it is forgotten; but you have done your duty." That works out well.

This affords a schedule of operation for the entire year. Properly handled you will be surprised at the results. You might run occasional copy during the year, directed specifically to the business man, suggesting the advisability of sending an occasional basket of flowers to some of his customers who are branching out in their line. This is good business, and will show remarkable returns. The average business man is ready and willing to spend from $10 to $25, and, of course, this is a desirable account.

We are starting a campaign of that kind now. I do not hesitate to mention this in Cleveland. I am willing to let the other fellows know it, because I will get my share just the same. Any time I can help the other fellow along, he can always call on me. I am willing to give anything that I think will help the profession. Let me cite a little illustration: Suppose, for instance, a certain man in a certain line of business has a birthday. A man who is selling him a large quantity of material for this particular business reads my ads. from time to time containing this suggestion. The ads. create an impression and he says to himself, "Now this friend of mine has a birthday coming soon and I am going to send him a $5 or $10 box of flowers on that particular day. I am satisfied that it will be a good investment for me." He looks at the commercial side of it.

The fellow who receives it says, "Well, John Smith & Co., is certainly a fine concern to remember me in this manner on my birthday. I sure will never forget them"; and turning to his purchasing agent, he says: "Whenever you have anything to buy in the line carried by John Smith & Co., just remember them and give them our business." There is along these lines a wonderful opportunity for the development of business which we are trying out. We have done it now for only about two months. I think we have had six ads bearing on the subject. We have already gotten three replies. It shows that the public is receptive and will spend from $10 to $25 no matter what the occasion is. Firms are liberal, they handle big money, and they can afford to do it. They consider that it is mighty good business.

Make Copy Natural as Possible

Now that I have covered the subject of newspaper advertising in a general way, having pointed out when this copy should appear and the nature of it, let me caution you again on how to prepare the copy. Do not try to do something unnatural. Merely sell yourself, dress up this sale in ordinary good words, and arrange it in good shape. Use liberal space, by that

I mean from six to twenty inches in your newspapers, and you are bound to get excellent results. There are very few in our business who cannot use newspapers successfully. In a large city the florist in the outskirts should not buy newspaper space, he wastes altogether too much of the circulation. Those who live in small communities that have weekly publications must be extremely cautious in the preparation of their copy, or it will not produce. Most of you have seen these country ads, and even some in the city, advertising Chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving in February. This is not exaggeration, but an actual fact. It is one of the real reasons why so called advertising does not pay.

Do not expect too much immediately from advertising in the newspapers. It is just as I said about starting a new store. Of course, you know there are occasions when you can start a new store and make it pay from the very day you open the doors; but that is not the general rule, it is rather the exception. So it is with advertising. Advertising when done well is cumulative in its effects, it piles up year after year. If you continue to conduct your business on sound principles you will continue to reap returns from your advertising. No matter what you do you will not be able to stop business from rolling into your doors.

Direct By Mail Method

Direct by mail is a form of copy that is very good for certain concerns where location has much to do with the business. The florist who caters to neighborhood trade, out of the city mail order business in small communities, all those in large cities who make a business of landscaping and other forms of outdoor planting, can use this advertising to good advantage. The relative cost of direct by mail to them is less than newspaper space, while to those who are in a position to cater to the entire city, the newspaper space is very much cheaper. The average metropolitan daily will sell you space from ½c. to 1c. per inch to each one thousand people reached, while the direct piece will cost from 3c. to 5c. per person reached. Naturally, of course, this is a more intensified method, and for that reason those before described are in a position to use this form of advertising. To them it is much cheaper than newspaper space, since they could only hope to reach from one to five per cent. of the entire circulation with their copy. I do not mean to insinuate in any way that direct by mail is not good advertising for those who can use it, but in this as in newspaper, great care should be made in the preparation of the copy.

Let me just here suggest that I have yet to see really good, high class direct by mail copy up to this time. It does not seem to be inspired or permeated with the idea that the man is trying to put over. It does not seem to get it down properly on paper, I do not know why. I have not seen any real direct by mail advertising copy as yet; but as I say there are times and occasions when it can be used successfully. I was talking to a certain party recently who told me that the firm he represents has used a great deal of direct by mail advertising successfully. He said they have out of town agents. I am satisfied that they could use it there because their out of town agents naturally read the copy because they make money by it. The real trouble with direct by mail advertising is that it costs too much to get it to one person, too much per capita. The average business man is so busy he has not the time to read a lengthy story about our goods. How can one best approach him? If you reach him through the newspapers, you can reach him for a less sum of money per capita than in any other way. You can reach the entire population of the city, and you can keep on continually pounding in some good idea or thought until people see your point. Eventually they will take it to heart and get interested in your proposition.

Bill Boards and Street Cars

We believe bill boards and street cars are essential factors in helping newspaper publicity. They reinforce and focus the attention, assisting the transient public to fix in its mind your name and business more closely when your copy is read in the daily papers. Personally we have never done this advertising because we felt our appropriation could be more judiciously spent in the newspapers. However, we are planning some day to use these two mediums.

Window Displays and Location

Make every effort you possibly can to keep your windows attractive at all times, feature special decorations; they need not bear especially on the selling of flowers, yet it will be the means of impressing the passerby with your name and your place of business. In window displays you have before you the best possible means of publicity at the lowest possible price, but too few take advantage of it. A big effort in your windows will pay handsomely.

Some man in London, Ont., I believe, states that he does no advertising but depends a great deal upon his window displays. He encloses a letter received from somebody who had seen his window and who commented on it, saying how wonderful it was, and how grand it was that some one had suggested the particular idea illustrated in the window, so that as a psychological result particular persons and others were favorably impressed and would remember his place when they wanted something in that particular line. That doesn't go all the time, but it helps.

Motion Picture Theatres

We believe this to be poor form of advertising. People are not in a receptive mood to buy when they go to a theatre, and naturally dismiss the serious side of life. We, ourselves, do not use this form of advertising, and would not suggest it as a paying proposition.

Some years ago I had a friend who owned a moving picture theatre. As a matter of fact I sold it to him originally. I told him when he wanted to buy it that I considered it a "lemon," that he had better not buy it; but I couldn't drive him away, and he finally did buy it, and to my surprise made a success of it. That shows you how much of a moving picture expert I am. But he gave me all the liberties that I wanted to take with his theatre, and I ran ads there and in all the theatres in Cleveland on some specific thing, but I never sold enough to pay for half the cost of it, so I concluded that the theory of advertising in motion picture theatres is all wrong. People go to moving picture houses to be entertained, they do not care to have their attention drawn to something not connected with what they go to the moving pictures to see. You cannot pound anything else in with a sledge hammer.

Social contact is a form of publicity most of us have used since the business was originated. I presume it will continue to be one of the big essentials as long as business is conducted, and needs no comment from me.

Store Arrangement and Deliveries

Let me caution you again on these two very important elements of business success. So many times I have visited florists and have actually been ashamed of the condition of their places of business. Be prompt with your deliveries, as near as possible, and confine yourself to the promises made. Occasionally do things out of the ordinary to satisfy a customer. I merely mention a few of these latter items to impress more firmly on your minds the fact that all are advertising features of your business. If there is anything that puts a negative condition in the mind of an otherwise receptive customer, it is to find a slovenly place, a place where the mirrors are cloudy, where the plants are drooping in their blossoms or where they are being drowned out, or where the flower jars are in such a condition that the stench from the water knocks you over; or where there is a lot of litter lying on the floor and not swept up carefully. These are conditions which you must avoid as much as possible.

We make it a business in our store on holidays, for instance Easter Sunday, to work up to noon, and immediately that afternoon put on a wrecking crew to get busy, so that on Monday morning you would hardly know that we had been doing any business the Saturday before out of the ordinary. The place is normal, presents no unusual features. We try to do that as much as we possibly can. Once in a while possibly we slip on it; but there is one thing that I absolutely insist upon around our place, everybody must be clean. I cannot have anybody working for me that is otherwise.

In closing, let me suggest that all of us go back to our place of business with the determination to do more and better advertising than we have ever done before, knowing our reward will come.

The Gasser Co.'s F. T. D. Window

The F. T. D. window display of the J. M. Gasser Co., of Cleveland, shown during the recent F. T. D. meeting in that city, and which won the silver cup offered by Charles H. Grakelow of Philadelphia, was simple and effective. The design, as will be noted from the illustration on another page, was based on the proposed F. T. D. emblem, which, however, as previously noted, was not accepted. The immense globe was covered with green Oak leaves, the contents being composed of closely set yellow Immortelles. The wings were of white plaster of paris and Russell Roses were attractively used at the base of the arrangement.

Salt Lake City's New "Home of Flowers"

The formal opening reception of the Miller Floral Co.'s beautiful new retail store at 10 East Broadway, Salt Lake City, Utah, occurred Saturday, Sept. 14, and in point of public response and admiration it was a gigantic success.

Over 18,000 of Farmington's famous Roses were given away as souvenirs to an admiring and appreciative throng of visitors who kept the store crowded all day long and until after 11 o'clock at night. Sales were practically impossible owing to the immense crowd, and several times the management was forced to discontinue the distribution of souvenir Roses in order to reduce the crowd and prevent serious damage to the extensive display of blooming and decorative plants which were most artistically grouped throughout the store.

The store is a large, bright roomy one, with a fine mosaic tile floor and abundance of natural light. The walls are in dove gray and the fixtures in a warm egg shell ivory. The entire window and a long display ledge are inlaid with Autumn leaf tile of Oldbridge design. Over 40 French bevel plate mirrors, 6 ft. square, form a beautiful background, stretching from the front window line back to a mammoth refrigerator display case. The latter is of solid plate glass sides, front and doors and the floor is composed of old red quarry tile, set in wide margins of black cement. A handsome illuminated art glass sign, 22 ft. long, extends across the rear of the salesroom, bearing the phrase "The Home of Flowers," and two mammoth panoramic photo views of the firm's immense greenhouse range located at Farmington, fifteen miles from Salt Lake City.

An unusual abundance of rare and staple decorative plants were in evidence and from the many expressions of wonder and delight, it was evident that the flower loving public of Salt Lake City were enjoying a treat which they keenly appreciated.

A little more than eight years ago, Robert Miller began in a modest way at Farmington, Utah, the erection of a modern and practical range of greenhouses; today this range comprises sixteen houses, with a total of over 250,000 sq. ft. of glass and a new brick office and service building and 6½ acres of fertile ground devoted to various uses, including a fine lot of hardy perennials and annuals used for cutting. It is one of the finest greenhouse establishments in the West and for cleanliness and efficiency it is perhaps unsurpassed in this country. The success of this enterprise is based solely on Mr. Miller's steadfast determination to produce a high quality of stock. He did not build "better than he knew," but he did build "the best he knew how." His Roses have a well earned reputation for an invariably high quality; if they were not of such excellent substance, size and color, he could not ship them steadily to Los Angeles, Pasadena and Southern California points, as well as to Butte, Spokane, Seattle and all over Idaho, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming and Utah.

In securing the services of Robert Newcomb as store manager, Mr. Miller feels that he has made a wise choice; in proof of this statement he points with just pride to the new store, considering it both from an artistic as well as a practical standpoint. Mr. Newcomb has probably as wide a national acquaintance as any young man in horticultural lines, having traveled for years in the interests of well known firms. That he surely has hosts of friends throughout the country who wish him success in his new field was proved by a thick pile of congratulatory telegrams received on the opening day. To say that he deeply appreciated these messages of good will would be putting it very mildly indeed.

A beautiful new Dodge panel car will aid greatly in maintaining a prompt delivery service. "Say it with Flowers" appears in large white aluminum script on the top of the car and this unique scheme of advertising has brought no end of favorable comment. A one ton truck brings daily an abundance of cut stock and potted plants from the firm's big greenhouse range at Farmington.

Canton, O.

J. R. Cowgill has an attractive store at 306 Tuscarawas st., East, in connection with his greenhouses at Alliance.

The Zettler Co., has gone out of business; its greenhouses on N. Clarendon ave. have been purchased by Vail Bros., who moved them to the corner of Broad and Twelfth sts. Vail Bros. were formerly in the vegetable growing industry but for the past three years have been growing flowers, making a specialty of Chrysanthemums and bedding plants. They have about 10,000ft. of glass all of which is equipped with the Skinner Irrigating System of watering. J. M.

Akron, O.

Jas. J. Salmon, who has been in business here for over 20 years, will close his greenhouses for the Winter. At the F. T. D. convention in Cleveland he presented Secretary Pochelon with a check for $10 to be used as he saw fit for the benefit of the society.

W. P. and L. C. McFarland report business good. They will operate all their houses to full capacity this Winter, having solved the coal problem.

The Gilbo Floral Co., which conducted a flower store at 12 W. Market st., has gone out of business. It will be succeeded by Hammerschmidt & Clark who will conduct the store in connection with their greenhouses at Medina, Ohio.

D. L. Hollinger has a substantial business on W. South st., where he makes a specialty of Chrysanthemums and Cyclamens. Last Summer one section of his greenhouses was rebuilt along more modern lines. This will make a handsome show house for special occasions.

The Heepe Co. has moved from its old stand to new quarters on one of the principal streets of the city. The new store is attractive; the inside finishing of the walls is a beautiful rock effect. Projecting ledges of irregular height are used for a drapery of English Ivy and other vines. The office work and stock room fixtures are all of splendid material, the entire store being fixed up with good taste.

The Imperial Greenhouses, of which W. F. Ahern is proprietor, report good business at their store, 565 Bowery st. J. M.

Cleveland, O.

Meeting of Cleveland Florists' Club at the Hollenden Hotel, Nov. 4, at 8 p.m.

Now that the loan campaign is over and the Sixth City gloriously over the top, many of our florists who have been working night and day in the campaign will have a chance to get down to business. While the amount subscribed by the local trade has not been separately tabulated as in some of the larger cities, it is substantial, as the wealthier florists purchased liberally and those in moderate circumstances went as far as their means permitted. To employ a phrase once popular with John Grandy of Norfolk, Va., "they will be there with the big mit" when the call is sounded again!

Business is excellent; never before better at this time of the year. Practically everything coming into the market moves at a price commensurate with the cost of its production. The economic truth that the price of an article should be governed by the cost of production, though hitherto unappreciated by florists, is dawning. If it endures it will be ample recompense for the combined adverse conditions brought about by the war.

Receipts of Chrysanthemums are still light, prices running from $1.50 to $4 per doz. The Carnation supply is inadequate to the demand. During the past two weeks business has been chiefly sustained by splendid cuts of Dahlias which sell at $4 to $6 per 100. Fine Russell, Columbia, Hadley, Ophelia, Sunburst, Winnett, Richmond, Killarney, Ward and various miniature Roses are to be had, the ruling prices being from $6 to $15 per 100. Hudson River Violets are being offered but meet with a slow sale as do single sorts. Adiantum has grown scarce, so the price has advanced to $1.50 per 100 for the better grades.

Pebbles on the Beach

George Lloyd Mercer, son of Mrs. G. W. Mercer, and a member of the Cleveland Florists' Club, has entered the military academy at Staunton, Va.

Richard Rolston of the staff of the J. M. Gasser Co., retail store, has taken a position with George Weinhoeber of Chicago. Mr. Rolston, who came to Cleveland from Detroit about a year ago, had made many friends in local trade circles.

H. B. Evans, for the past year connected with the Smith and Fetters Co., has entered the employ of W. H. Temblett, who operates several flower stands in the 105th and Euclid ave. market.

Louis Hody, who recently opened a retail store in Lorain, O., reports business as heavier than expected, his chief difficulty being to secure sufficient stock.

Mrs. Frank Rigo, the Lorain st florist, who has been confined to the hospital for several weeks, is rapidly recovering and will be able to take personal charge of her business again in the near future.

Joe Williams, veteran employee of the J. M. Gasser Co., at Rocky River, O., met with a painful accident Oct. 19. A rapidly moving automobile collided with his wagon at Ninth and Superior aves., throwing him to the street, bruising him and lacerating his face.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Wholesale Florists Credit Association Oct. 18 current business was transacted.

The next meeting of the Cleveland Florists Club will be held at the Hollenden, Nov. 4, at 8 p.m.

Columbus, O.

Never have florists' flowers been so scarce as in the past few weeks. The heavy funeral orders cleaned up all stock. Some days florists even had to turn down funeral orders, as they had no flowers of any kind. Telegrams from nearby cities came in asking for stock regardless of price. As there had been no heavy frost Dahlias, Cosmos and other outdoor flowers were used to a great extent in all kinds of work. Good cuts of Roses of fine quality brought wholesale 5c. to 20c., but not nearly enough to go around. Carnations have been small and always ordered days ahead at 4c. to 6c. 'Mums are coming in slowly and not enough to fill the demand at $2 to $3 per doz. Growers expect heavier cuts the coming week. Few pompons are seen on the market. The last few days some fine Sweet Peas of the old grandiflora type helped to fill the orders. Florists are all looking for a good 'Mum season, but nearly all varieties seem to be later than usual.

Tattlings on the Trade

W. Walker, formerly with the Munk Floral Co., now in the U. S. Navy, has been home on a week's furlough. He expects soon to go across.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. is completing its rebuilt Carnation house.

The Columbus Floral Co. is cutting rather heavily of 'Mums.

Emil Metzmeier and Mrs. W. Metzmeier are much improved.

The Munk Floral Co. is getting a fine cut of Roses from its greenhouses.

W. J. ENGEL.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Conditions on the cut flower market showed a substantial improvement over those of several weeks previous. The supply of flowers increased considerably, because of the abundance of sunshine. Although many of the florists still report a shortage, especially in Carnations and Roses, yet with the fine supply of 'Mums coming on, not many orders are turned away. The varieties: Wm. Turner, Halliday, Poehlmann, Chieftain, Chrysolora, Tiger and Touset, have arrived on the market and excellent pompons are also being received; all find a splendid sale. 'Mum plants are plentiful, retailing for from 75c. to $2 each. Pompons bring $1.50 and $2 per doz., and the double varieties retail from $3 to $6.

Carnations are still much on the short side, and bring high prices even for short stemmed stock, the lowest retail price being $1 per doz. Locally grown Roses are coming in well, in all the leading varieties. Rubrum Lilies are more plentiful, both cut and in pots, the potted plants bringing from 60c. up to $2, and the cut stock retailing from $1.50 per doz. Fine locally grown orchids are offered.

Pompon 'Mums are being used largely in basket work; Snapdragon is also being utilized for this purpose. Easter Lilies are not nearly equal to the demand. The call for funeral work has been heavy, although not so heavy as it was the week previous. However, the florists had all they could handle.

Notes

Miss Catherine Vesey has gone to Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., to act as nurse there. Miss Margaret Vesey is also at this camp, where she has charge of a hostess house.

The representative of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, called on the trade.

The A. J. Lanternier Co. is showing the new 'Mum Tiger.

Two foliage wreaths tied with red, white and blue ribbon, made by the Flick Floral Co., were dropped on the grave of a soldier here by two airplanes last week.

Edgar Wenninghoff had a good call for flowers for anniversaries and wedding work.

The funeral of Private Walter A. Knecht, first florist soldier of this city to give his life for his country, was held in this city on Wednesday morning, Oct. 16, at the family home. The services were private. The handsome floral pieces indicated the high esteem in which the young man was held. D. B.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Market conditions are still strenuous in this locality and prices are soaring around holiday levels. There has never before been a week with such a continuous flow of funeral work in which all florists, growers, wholesalers and retailers participated. Even the supplies of staple articles, such as ferns, Asparagus and other greens, have been depleted. The large markets are obtaining unheard of wholesale prices for their goods and medium grades of Roses bring as high as $25 per 100, wholesale.

The number of 'Mums received is growing larger daily and is largely helping the market to maintain itself. The wholesale price of 'Mums ranges from $3 to $6 per doz. Good Carnations bring $5 to $6 per 100, single Violets $1 per 100, Lilies $20 per 100, and Dahlias $3 to $4 per 100.

The demand for special pieces such as flags, blankets, fancy wreaths and patriotic baskets with prices ranging from $5 to $100 is unprecedented.

Denver, Col.

No change in market conditions since the last writing. Cut flowers of all kinds remain scarce. Wholesalers are obliged to turn orders away, even from regular customers as it is impossible to secure stock. They have been dividing the stock received to best advantage among regular customers but fall short at that. Funeral orders both in and out of town have been extremely heavy. Calls for designs, such as broken wheels, gates ajar, broken columns, harps and lyres have come to the front. Many stores have worked overtime to keep the pace. Florists in this city are always willing to help each other out in a pinch at ordinary times but now one cannot get enough stock to care for his own demands.

About Town

The account of the death of W. W. Wilmore, Jr., will be found in the Obituary Column.

Francis Cash, grower for Ben Boldt, was on the sick list for several days, but has returned to his duties again.

Mrs. Ben Boldt is able to be around again after being confined to her home for four weeks.

D. S. Grimes & Son have been busy with funeral work.

Geo. Brenkert is enthusiastic over his new Carnation Brenkert Jr., which is of the Enchantress color. It is a good producer, keeper and rooter and he would be satisfied to have his whole range planted in this one variety for a money maker. He also has four benches of Matchless coming in fine condition. 'Mums will be late with him this season having about 2500 plants of yellow and white Turners to draw from.

The Boldt-Lundy House of Flowers has its window arranged in artistic shape. Baskets of 'Mums and Gladioli, 'Mum plants, ferns, Crotons and green velvet are used in the display.

A fire, thought to have been started by burglars, to cover up their work, gutted the greenhouses of M. H. Erickson, 140 Cook st., early Saturday morning, Oct. 12. The boiler shed was completely destroyed causing damage estimated at $1500. The damage represents a dead loss to Mr. Erickson as he carried no insurance on the enterprise. The blaze had gained considerable headway before it was discovered and the fire department was further handicapped by poor water pressure.

Conrad Lengenfelter finds ready sale for the yellow pompons which he is now cutting.

N. A. Bensen of the Denver Wholesale Florists Co. is receiving over 500 good 'Mums daily from his growers. At that he cannot keep up with the demand. He has been sending on an average of 25 to 35 telegrams a day refusing orders for stock.

Herbert Clauson of the America Flower Shop, who is in Class 1-A, has passed the physical examination and is waiting to be called.

A lieutenant from one of the nearby camps entered a leading downtown flower shop and said, "I want a five dollar corsage sent at once." The clerk wrote out the order and asked, "Any card, sir?" "Yes, and what ever you do, don't lose it. This is a birthday gift and enclosed with it is a $100 Liberty bond."

Denver went over the top with eighteen million to her credit to back up her boys in service. It was the largest sum of money ever pledged here. The three other quotas have been unflinchingly met, and two Red Cross drives magnificently oversubscribed.

Our boys have never wavered, and so Denver has been staunch, though the quota was stupendous. What the future needs of our country maybe none can foretell, but whatever the need, Denver will respond. C. F. E.

The Market

Roses have shortened in supply somewhat since last writing. Those that do come into the wholesale houses, together with everything else in the market, sell readily and many more could be used if available. Carnations, too, are somewhat scare. Chrysanthemums are in a good supply and are finding an excellent sale. Yellow, white and pink may be had in the various sizes. Dahlias and Cosmos continue plentiful and both prove good property. Baring a frost they will last for another fortnight. Other offerings include Violets and a few Pansies.

Trade Jottings

The local trade is sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. A. Rasmussen of New Albany, Ind. She passed away on Sunday.

William Sunderman is cutting excellent white and yellow Chrysanthemums.

Recent visitors were Daniel M. Rosenfeld, representing Werthheimer Bros. of New York City. TEDDY.

Club Meeting

The St. Louis Florists' Club met on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 10, at the store rooms at W. B. Rowe's greenhouses, Kirkwood, Mo. About 50 members were present including all the officers. President August Hummert presided. After the routine business Ambulance Driver Renick, who had lost his right arm in service, gave the members a little talk on his experience. An interesting essay was read by W. W. Wors on "What to do when a glut comes and the part the grower, as the producer, should take in it."

President Hummert appointed Messrs. Beneke, Wolfe, Guntley and Lawrie to pass on a display of Dahlias exhibited by E. A. Michel, Kalish Bros., O. C. May, Joe Hauser and W. R. Rowe, all of St. Louis County, also some specimens from Shaw Gardens. We were honored by having among the visitors at the meeting Patrick O'Mara from Peter Henderson & Co. who spoke on the war situation and the loyal way in which the florists of the country are backing up the Government. After adjournment a fine luncheon was enjoyed, and three cheers and a tiger given W. R. Rowe for his hospitable entertainment. W.

Greenhouse Heating

A booklet of 52 pages, containing a reprint of four prize essays on the subject, which passed through the columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE several years ago, with comments by John McArthur, heating engineer for Hitchings & Co. There is also included a collection of answers to pertinent questions on greenhouse heating.

The problem of greenhouse heating is a vital one in the face of the 50% fuel restriction order, and all growers desiring information upon the choice of a boiler, the installing of a proper amount of piping, both as to the quantity and the proper placing of it, the stoking or feeding of the furnace and the general management of the heating apparatus should be in possession of a copy of this valuable little pamphlet.

Practical Landscape Gardening

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

> "I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

Second Edition Just Fresh From Our Presses

Magnificently illustrated with 91 photographic reproductions—pictures which teach—67 sketches and 33 plans with planting keys. The book is not only at your command for the information desired, but it is as well a splendid book to interest your customers in. It encourages them to buy your products, for they feel they must emulate at least some of the good landscape features they see scattered so freely throughout its 266 pages. The Market

Oct. 22.—The supply and demand [illegible] in the wholesale cut flower market [illegible] the same this week as last. The most exception is the increased arrival of large flowered and especially fancy Mums, extra pompons and sprays.

American Beauty Roses are in full supply. The demand for these, relative to that of other flowers, is moderate. Special grade blooms are selling at 15c. to 25c. each and those of other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses are in medium supply. The demand is fair and special grade blooms which are selling at 8c. to 25c. each is far below that for No. 2, No. 1 and extra grades. No. 2 grade blooms are selling at 4c. to 6c. each.

Arrivals of Carnations are not over large. The demand is active except for reds which are moving slowly. Prices range from 2c. to 6c. each, with occasional sales of extra choice blooms at 8c.

Cattleya orchids, in a little smaller supply, are meeting with a stronger demand at prices up to 50c., and occasionally 60c. each for the best. White and pink Lilies are both in short supply. The demand for whites is strong at $20 per 100, and for pinks weak at $4 to $8.

The usual short supply of Lily of the Valley is meeting with a weak demand at $10 per 100 for the best.

'Mums show a largely increased supply. The large flowered varieties are selling at $1 to $6 per doz., with a few sales of exhibition blooms at $9. The demand is active except for the yellows which are accumulating, but prices show signs of weakening. Bunch 'Mums are arriving freely, but moving rather slowly at decreasing prices, which now range from 15c. to 75c. per bunch. Dahlias are nearly out of the market; the few arriving realize about $2 to $5 per 100. Cosmos is plentiful at 8c. to 20c. per bunch. Other miscellaneous flowers selling at quoted prices are Delphiniums, Antirrhinums, Tritomas, Wild Asters, Calendulas and Candytuft.

The few double and single Violets arriving are moving slowly at 25c. to 50c. per 100.

There is a fair supply of all kinds of greens which are meeting with an active demand.

Quota Exceeded

New York City florists in the Liberty Loan drive "went over the top" with purchases of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds through their committee to the amount of nearly $400,000. Of these bonds about 525 subscribers in New York purchased $288,000 worth and 575 subscribers in Brooklyn $101,500 worth, making a total of about $389,500. On account of the regrettable sickness of G. W. Allen, Bond Adviser of the Florists and Allied Trades Liberty Loan Committee, we have been unable to obtain a list of those florists who purchased $500 worth or more of bonds subsequent to Tuesday night, Oct. 15. J. S. Fenrich, 51 W. 28th st., purchased $4000 worth of bonds, which, we think is not included in the total amount just mentioned.

George L. Stillman's Dahlia exhibition was continued at the store of George E. M. Stumpp, Fifth ave., at 58th st. Many beautiful blooms were shown.

Victor B. Olson, proprietor of the Bay Street Greenhouses, Taunton, Mass., writing to a correspondent in this city says: "It may interest some of my friends around New York to know that I've been laid up for three weeks with influenza and pneumonia, but that I pulled through and am at present able to run the business again."

On Sunday, Oct. 27, "Glory be!" we will turn the clocks back to normal time, and then we (the men) will shave, and everyone will have real daylight. To change Hamlet's words a little "The time is out of joint" now but soon we are going "to set it right." The author of the "out of joint" time which was desirable to most of us in Summer became infatuated with his idea, and tried to inflict this "out of joint" time on the people all Winter, but failed.

The Annual Spring Flower Show

The Society of American Florists' office at 1170 Broadway, whereat John Young, its vigilant secretary, is always on duty, is becoming more and more recognized as a center for all trade activities. Here, on Tuesday last, was held a well represented meeting of the New York Flower Show Committee and at which the expression was general that the annual flower show had done much for publicity and trade interests and that, while it was inopportune to do any preliminary work at this meeting should a fair opportunity arise the committee will use endeavor to shape a show in 1919.

This week the S. A. F. office was also used as headquarters by the executive committee of the American Rose Society.

Fifteen Loads of Floral Tributes

At the funeral of Harold Lockwood, the well known movie star, last Tuesday, 15 carriages were used to convey the floral tributes from New York City to Woodlawn Cemetery. According to a New York paper practically every motion picture actor actress, director, stage hand, property and camera man in the city was in attendance. They sent most of the flowers.

Soldier Florist's Appreciation

Secretary John Young of the New York Florists' Club has recently received the following letter. Sergt. Major Manda is the son of Jos. A. Manda of South Orange, N. J.

"I am real sorry and ask your pardon for my delay in not writing to you sooner to express my appreciation and many thanks for the box of tobacco and cigars sent to me by the New York Florists' Club. I have been continually on the move since my departure from the good old U. S. A.. Am now located in a lively sector which has kept me exceptionally busy; hence the delay.

"My work at headquarters has been highly interesting during a very sucessful drive. I have been living in a cave about 50ft. under ground and saw very little day. My work has been the reciving of important communications of all sorts, including those dropped by aeroplane, which keeps one on the jump day and night.

"I have been over a lot of territory previously occupied by the Huns; where towns were once located are now piles of brick and stone, surrounded by a few trees with the tops all shot off by shell fire.

"Among the things that interested me were the little vegetable gardens of the American soldiers. These gardens were planted by the American soldiers in the Spring and at that time were within range of the big guns. Now these boys have routed the Huns and are a good many miles away but there still remains nice patches of Cabbage for their comrades who are awaiting their opportunity to do their share.

"One of the most wonderful surprises I have had since I have been in France was that of meeting brother, who has been here with the Marines, and whom I had not seen for nearly two years. He has been in France now 14 months, has been thrice over the top and has now just returned from the hospital, having been wounded at Chateau Thierry, but is now well and in the best of health.

"I have lots of other experiences to write but I will leave them until I get back home.

"Wishing the Club every success and expressing the hope that by this time next year I will be with you again, I remain, Sincerely yours,

REGIMENTAL SERGT. MAJ. EDW. MANDA.

Boston

Oct. 22.—In addition to what flowers were grown locally, for several weeks quantities have been shipped from Philadelphia and New York to this city. Now we have about enough to take care of the business. American Beauty Roses are in moderate supply and in good demand. Prices for special blooms are 40c to 60c each. Other grades sell at lower figures. Hybrid Tea Roses are in increasing supply and seldom of better quality at this season. A better supply of Roses is cleaned up early at the markets. Fancy blooms sell at 8c. to 16c. each. Other grades from 4c. to 6c. Carnations are more abundant but no decrease in the price is noted; 6c. to 8c. will serve at 50c. each. Cattleya orchids are more plentiful, but there is an excellent demand for them; prices are 40c. to 60c. each. Lilies are still scarce and in good demand at 20c. to 25c. each. A few L. rubrum sell at 6c. to 8c. each. 'Mums are becoming daily more plentiful. Probably they are more welcome this season because of the heavy call for all kinds of flowers. They sell at $3 to $4 per doz. Pompon 'Mums are offered freely and sell well. Dahlias still come but a frost in some sections last week cut most of them down. Gladioli have few flowers open on the spikes. Single and double Violets are available. Plenty of short stems at Prices. Bouvardia is offered in small lots. Snapdragons in various colors sell well. Some Chinese Asters grown under glass are arriving. Native Asters have sold better this season than ever before. Greenery is in a fair supply. Plants are selling well. 'Mum plants are especially good, compact and well flowered. Ferns in small sizes are selling well.

The wholesale flower stores are busy shipping stock, and it is still hard to get enough material to fill orders.

In Penn's window on Tremont st., he has on exhibition a bust of the late Captain John Lauder; the sculptor was Hugh Cairns of Boston. The bust is to be sent to Scotland and placed on the estate of Harry Lauder. Another interesting exhibit is a bunch of Heather which the card says came from the Birks of Aberfeldy, Scotland. At Penn's they are busy with funeral work.

Wax Bros. on Tremont st. have had unusually heavy business this Fall, and funeral work has exceeded all previous years.

Malcolm Emmons, a salesman for the Budlong Rose Co., died on Oct. 9, at his home in Everett, Mass. He leaves a widow and three children.

Joseph O'Donnell, assistant salesman for Thomas Roland at the Boston Cooperative Flower Market, joined the Colors on Monday, Oct. 21, and is at Fort Warren, Boston.

At Welch Bros. Co. shipping trade is just as large as it has been for weeks, and they say that there is still difficulty in getting sufficient flowers to fill the numerous orders. I noted there excellent 'Mums and an abundant supply of Gladioli, Lilies, Roses and Carnations.

Mrs. William H. Ward of Montvale, Mass., who has been ill for many weeks, at the New England Hospital is now home and convalescing nicely.

The fine dwarf commercial Chrysanthemums which Willam H. Elliott is growing may be seen now in many of the principal retail stores in the city.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., report shipping business much larger than usual at this season. Their wire department has never been so busy. They are receiving excellent flowers from their growers and the supply is increasing.

There are very few Dutch bulbs in Boston yet. The Boston bulbs are held up with other freight in New York. If they do not come soon they will be too late and such delays are not likely to help their condition. R. C.

Unprecedented Market

The scarcity of stock, coupled with unprecedented demand during the past two weeks is without a parallel in the history of the local market. It has been impossible to come anywhere near filling all orders received and the prices stock is bringing never before at this season touched the present figures. Telephone and telegraph orders from out of the city have exceeded anything in these lines ever noted on the market. Large buyers from other cities sent representatives here to pick up whatever they could in the way of cut flower stock. The local retailers, who had been having a large run on funeral work, also kept a close watch on the market, their efforts to get stock to get their orders out frequently, however, being without result. Decorated Magnolia leaves and artificial flowers in many varieties were used either in connection with fresh flowers or separately to satisfy the trade, thus keeping the supply houses busy. Purchasers at the retail stores had no choice; it was simply a case of taking whatever they could get.

On Monday it was noted that the tightness of the market was breaking the increasing supply of 'Mums and the ban on the use of flowers for funerals where death was caused by influenza has helped the situation very much. At first this looked like a setback for the trade but by many of the retailers the order was regarded in a different light. Many of them have worked long hours and until late at night and will welcome a let up in trade.

American Beauty Roses are getting to be in larger supply and some fine stock is to be had, which brings as high as $7.50 per doz. In other varieties the supply is better than it has been but is still far short of the unprecedented demand. Short stock is selling at from $4 to $6 per 100; medium stock brings from $8 to $10 and $12, and select stock has sold as high as $20 per 100. In the case of Mrs. Russell and Columbia the price of $35 per 100 had been secured. These prices have no precedent on this market during the month of October.

Carnations are scarce and those that do come in are picked up immediately at good prices, ordinary stock bringing $5 per 100, with $6 for fancy stock. Few, if any, regardless of quality, are sold for less than $4.

The supply of 'Mums is daily on the increase. They are to be had in all 'Mum colors and from medium to extra fancy stock. Pompons have also made their appearance in quantity; stock from the Pacific Coast has supplemented the home grown supply. This stock has so far not met the same disapproval with which it was regarded in former years, this no doubt being because of the general scarcity of stock. As soon as the home grown crops assume their full supply this California stock will be in little favor with buyers. Medium blooms are selling at from $3 to $4 per doz., and fancy from $4 to $6. Pompons are selling at from 50c. to 75c. per bunch of a dozen stalks.

Gladioli and Asters are over for the season. Easter Lilies are scarce, as it is customary with the growers so to time their crops that they will not be heavy during the period in which 'Mums dominate the market. Some good Cattleya labiata are coming in from local growers and find a ready sale at from $8 to $10 per doz. where stock is good. Home grown Violets are bringing 75c. per 100 and the Hudson River doubles $1. All the Valley that comes in moves readily at from $5 to $6 per 100. The first of the Winter flowering crops of Sweet Peas are arriving.

Calendulas, Pansies and Daisies are to be had, all of which sell freely. Wild flowers have been used to some extent to fill in for funeral work and with a proper blending of choice stock the effect is not bad. The wholesalers rarely have to put much into their ice boxes, stock selling as quickly as it is received. The rush has caused a strong demand for ferns; on some days, when shipments are delayed, those who have any ferns on hand can get fancy prices for them; as high as $4 and $5 per 100 was paid the past week. The first of the Eastern crop has already commenced to come through.

Splendid Liberty Loan Record

The florists and allied trades of Chicago and vicinity, not including seedsmen and nurserymen, have gone "over the top" in the Fourth Liberty Loan. Fred Lautenschlager, president of the Chicago Florists' Club, and chairman of the committee, was an indefatigable worker for the success of the loan in the division to which the florists belong. There were 2294 subscriptions in all, totaling $392,050, thus exceeding the quota of $300,000 by more than $90,000.

John Lang, who had been conducting a range of greenhouses on Melrose st., has decided to close them up for the Winter. He has been calling on the local trade during the past week to dispose of his stock.

Ove Gnatt, of La Porte, Ind., was in the city a few days last week in the interest of his factory. He reports a strong demand for Magnolia foliage and other decorative material in preserved stock.

Fritz Bahr, of Highland Park, Ill., is sending to E. F. Winterson Co. some splendid stock of the old favorite Bouvardia Humboldtii that brings as high as $25 per 100. It has a touch of elegance that attracts the eye of critical buyers and is a good substitute for either Orange blossom or Stephanotis. Mr. Bahr says that as much as he has said and written about it growers seem slow in undertaking its culture on anything like a moderate scale.

M. P. Dilger, of Waukegan, Ill., has only four sons, all of whom have gone into the service of their country. Arthur is ship building at Oakland, Cal. Paul is a tool maker in the Government shops at San Petro. Nick is in the merchant marines, and Bob is with the Expeditionary Forces in France. Although well along in years Mr. and Mrs. Dilger do their own greenhouse work and attend to the requirements of their trade.

C. H. Fisk, 1581 Ogden ave., said his stores had been working 15 hours a day, but could not stand the strain much longer.

A. Lange, 25 E. Madison st., is the first of the local retailers to start advertising in the local papers in display form. He had a patriotic ad. in the Daily Tribune last Saturday featuring Chrysanthemums.

Members of the examining committee for Chicago for the Chrysanthemum Society of America for this season are: N. J. Wietor, chairman, E. A. Kanst, and Thos. W. Head of Lake Forest. They meet every Saturday at the wholesale store of Wietor Bros., 162 N. Wabash ave. All having new varieties for this committee to pass on are requested to make shipments so that they will be on exhibition every Saturday while the season lasts.

Herman Dreiske is dismantling his range of greenhouses near Ravinia Park. He will go out of flower growing for the present. The land on which the greenhouses stood is a valuable tract which belongs to Mr. Dreiske who believes he can turn it into something more profitable in the future.

Health Board Ruling

The Board of Health, on Saturday the 19th, issued a ruling prohibiting the sending of flowers to all funerals until the epidemic of influenza is stamped out. On inquiry at the office of the Health Dept., it was stated that the ruling covered all funerals regardless of the cause of death, the only exception being that flowers may be sent to the cemeteries but not to the home.

There was a special meeting of wholesalers at the C. E. Amling Co. store, on Monday noon, to discuss the situation. A committee consisting of Geo. Asmus, Peter Reinberg, L. R. Bohannon and Geo. Winehoeber was appointed to call on the Health Dept. to see if the order cannot either be modified or rescinded. As the situation stands the order will retard local buying but will not interfere with the shipping trade.

Should the order remain in force for some time the florists may establish a central point where all funeral flowers will be received and a delivery service maintained to the various cemeteries. Florists who have several orders for a funeral can afford to make deliveries to cemeteries, but small florists could not stand the expense as nearly all the cemeteries are from eight to ten miles from the business district of the city.

Philadelphia

Change in Market

Oct. 22.—The market has undergone considerable change, the most noticeable feature being a large and increased supply. The demand also shows a slight falling off.

Prices have eased off in general. There is a larger supply of 'Mums, Roses and Dahlias, and a slight increase in Carnations. There is a steady supply of Am. Beauty Roses, with a slight falling off in price. Other Roses are coming in freely, with the heaviest demand for the short and medium grades; long and specials are hanging fire. Prices are all showing a downward tendency.

'Mums are now coming strongly to the fore with the arrival of the mid-season varieties in all colors. Pompons and hardy outdoor 'Mums are also to be had. Dahlias are still arriving in quantities and meet with brisk takings.

There is a fair supply of Easter Lilies, which clean up daily. There is a large supply of Cosmos, and this has helped out the market considerably during the last few weeks. Some Gladioli are still offered. Orchids and Violets are increasing in supply. There are some new crop Sweet Peas, which are taking quickly.

Never before in the history of the cut flower market in Philadelphia has there been so great a demand for flowers as there was for the first two weeks of the current month. The market in general is in a better condition, as it is now possible to fill orders to a certain degree of satisfaction. The situation in greens and foliage also shows a corresponding improvement.

Florists Exceed Quota

It is a great pleasure to be able to state that the florists' quota for the Fourth Liberty Loan for the local district has been oversubscribed. The original quota called for $250,00, but this was later raised to $390,000. This included the florists, seedsmen and allied interests. The entire amount subscribed amounts to approximately $420,000, thus going "over the top" by about $30,000. Chairman Arthur A. Niessen is deserving of great credit for his untiring efforts in helping to make the loan a success. Robert Kift also gave unstintingly of his time.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., will close its store until the firm has disposed of all its orders for Dutch bulbs. A similar plan was adopted last year. J. Otto Thilow states that the firm's full supply of bulbs has been received.

Arthur A. Niessen likens the cut flower market of the past two weeks to the Stock Exchange; its fluctuations were hourly.

The Henry F. Michell Co. reports the arrival of its full quota of Dutch bulbs. Some of the company's early orders are already being sent out.

Chas. Zimmer of West Collingwood is keeping the market well supplied with a good quality of Oak foliage.

The Overbrook Flower Shop, lately conducted by L. A. Geiger, is now under the management of Richard Van den Hengel.

I. M. Bayersdorfer has returned from an extended trip and comments on the excellent business florists are having everywhere.

Strafford Flower Farm is cutting excellent large 'Mums and pompons, both from indoor and outdoor beds.

Portland, Ore.

The demand for flowers has increased so that at times there is almost a shortage. The out of town florists are in a similar situation and many times their calls for flowers can be only half satisfied. In connection it might be said that the express service is uncertain and some shipments are received too late, causing the florist much anxiety and financial loss. All in all, however, it looks like a banner month for October.

The Carnation cut has been good and heavy, but the demand has sent the blooms up to 4c. for the select and 2c. for the shorts. 'Mums are beginning to show themselves in the local market, but in insignificant numbers, so that we still are looking to California for the bulk of our 'Mums. Roses are in fine crop and bring from 4c. up to 10c and 12½c. for the fancy. White seems to be the short color. Inasmuch as Ophelia is used largely for wedding orders this shortage is not felt accutely.

The Fall rains have set in and as the weather is mild the Dahlia is called into service for all kinds of funeral work; this flower lends itself remarkably well to this purpose. Cosmos has also appeared on the market and sells where something cheap is wanted. Outdoor Zinnias are also still with us and fill a want. Bouvardia and Baby Roses are coming in in limited quantities. The Violet has made its appearance. Orchids and Gardenias are in limited supply.

Correcting the news item in last issue relative to Fred Young: he will continue to do business in Thos. Ellingham's location until next Spring, instead of moving the range as previously stated. Mr. Young will move in the Spring.

Clarke Bros. are cutting an excellent crop of Roses. Russells are especially good.

August Zitzewitz is now in the employ of the Martin & Forbes Co., in his former position in the potted plant department. Frank Neurockie left this position to work in the shipyards.

The White Floral Gardens are kept busy cutting Dahlias for the local demand.

George Rosia of Rosia Bros. of Seattle spent a day in the city en route to California for a two weeks' stay. He reports business in Seattle fine with flowers scarce.

The Tonseth Floral Co. report business brisk and say that their cut of 'Mums will be better than ever this year.

H. NIKLAS.

Hailstorm at Ada, O.

The greenhouses of Samuel Eichler, Ada, Ohio, were wrecked by a hailstorm on Oct. 5, in which 13,122 sq. ft. of double thick glass out of a possible 14,500 sq. ft. were broken. Prompt payment for the loss was made by the Florists' Hail Ass'n.

Notice to Growers Using Our Advertising Columns

It is vital, to ensure the good will of your customers, that you faithfully observe

THE FOLLOWING RULES

1. Stop your ad as soon as sold out.
2. Acknowlege orders same day as received.
3. Answer all questions by return mail.
4. Pack carefully, securely, yet lightly.
5. Ship same day as order is received or send postal notifying day you will ship.
6. Ship by least expensive route.

Following these directions will make you friends and keep your business enlarging.

☞ When convincing proof reaches us that an advertiser is not doing squarely by his customers, these columns will be absolutely closed against him for good.

NOTE:—Advertisers will do well to ask for a business reference before shipping when order from unknown party is not accompanied by cash.

Mr. Sutherland's mother and three brothers live in Edinburgh, Scotland, and a married sister in Kansas City, Mo.

SCARSDALE, N. Y. John F. Burfeind has filed a petition in bankruptcy; assets $330; liabilities $10,173.

WYNCOTE, PA. By the death of Dorr Schober the S. A. F. and O. H. loses one of its most affable and amiable members and the firm by whom he was employed one of the best palm growers in the country. Modest and unassuming he was a genial friend and loved by all who knew him intimately. His place is not easily to be filled. JOHN G. ESLER.

Some Apple Crop

A few years ago the writer had the pleasure of being driven for what seemed to be miles along a roadside at the bottom of a 1000ft. hill, which was covered almost to its summit with Apple trees bearing the choicest fruit. Help was in plenty and packing and loading into waiting railroad cars was progressing merrily. This year the work will be done by 75 students from Baltimore. The orchard is situated at Hancock, Washington Co., Md., well north of Washington, D. C., contains 1000 acres and will yield, this season, 40,000 barrels. The orchard is managed on scientific lines and will well repay a visit. There are many other similar Apple orchards running south from this point along the mountain chain. The property mentioned is that of the Cohills, father and two sons.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

These leaves are prepared in our own factory. They are flexible, do not mold, and are of a fine color. Cycas are very scarce, and we have been fortunate to have some on hand. War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

WAX FLOWERS

Mr. Florist:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

WE ARE DIRECT MANUFACTURERS OF

CYCAS, BASKETS, WAX FLOWERS, WAX DESIGNS, MAGNOLIA WREATHS, SPRAYS, SPECIAL FLORAL PIECES, and WIRE FRAMES

We carry a full line of FLORISTS' SUPPLIES

Prices will certainly not be any lower than they are now. Therefore, stock up now for your winter needs and save considerable money

ONION SETS GROWERS FOR THE TRADE

The Coal Situation—Modifications of Rulings

Florists are now permitted to receive and burn bituminous coal, steam anthracite or coke breeze to the full 100% of their requirements. Private greenhouses in New York State are privileged to receive bituminous coal in an amount equal to one-half of their normal requirements. Commercial greenhouses in New York State not allowed to use domestic sizes of anthracite. Pennsylvania State growers authorized to use all sizes anthracite coal below No. 1 buckwheat

Through a modification of the restricted coal order, issued Oct. 26, considerable relief has been afforded to those of our florist growers who are in a position to use the kind of coal released, making it that these, at least will be able to pass through the Winter on a full supply of fuel, restoring to them advantages which hitherto had been confined to the florists of Illinois, Indiana and other Western states, bringing to mind once again most clearly Wm. F. Gude's oft-repeated remarks "Ninety per cent. of the troubles we worry about don't happen."

The first of the modification orders is the most important one, inasmuch as it embraces the entire country. This order, it will be noticed, is signed by H. A. Garfield, National Fuel Administrator, and the order is directed to the attention of all State fuel administrators, in effect allowing florists to use up to their full 100 per cent. requirements whenever there is a surplus of the kinds of coal mentioned. [See notice in panel.]

Follows another order which applies to New York State private greenhouses only. It is issued by the U. S. Fuel Administration, Bureau of Conservation, and is signed by Morris W. Montgomery, Restricted Industries Section, and has been promulgated by Delos W. Cooke, New York State Fuel Administrator. This is its contents as it applies to private greenhouses:

All private greenhouses are privileged to receive bituminous coal in an amount to equal one-half of their normal requirements, but under no condition are they to receive or be allowed to burn anthracite coal.

It will be noted that this privilege extends only to the use of bituminous coal. There has been considerable trouble, particularly in Westchester Co., through the refusal on the part of the local administrator there, to furnish the private gardeners in that county with coal, or to allow them to burn either anthracite or bituminous, as we understand it, despite the efforts made by John Scheepers and others to obtain remedial measures to the extent that private gardeners could burn their 50 per cent. allowance of coal. The situation in Westchester county is looked upon as being abnormal, and in a letter from Wm. F. Gude to Mr. Scheepers, that gentleman expressed the hope that before freezing weather came, he expected to see an order put through allowing the gardeners to burn their 50 per cent. of coal, and that those who had none should be enabled to get enough to keep going.

Following on the heels of the modifications already noted, we got into touch with F. R. Pierson of Tarrytown, N. Y. (also in Westchester Co.) who has been interesting himself on behalf of the many small growers in New York State, who, while privileged to burn bituminous have no facilities to that end. They have furnaces equipped for anthracite in the domestic sizes, but not for anthracite screenings. Mr. Pierson had had an interview with the State and local fuel administrator in which he placed the situation of the small growers before these gentlemen, and the reply, which had just come to him by mail, read as follows:

Acknowledging your courteous favor of Oct. 29, commercial greenhouses in New York State will not be allowed to use domestic sizes of anthracite coal. It is permissible under the ruling made by Delos W. Cooke, State fuel administrator, for them to use No. 1 buckwheat or lower grades of anthracite where their facilities will allow them to do so. Where greenhouses have anthracite of domestic sizes on hand, and no other fuel, they are privileged, for the purpose of preventing a freeze, to use such portion of said domestic anthracite on hand as is necessary before substituting bituminous or lower grades of anthracite as above indicated.

In this connection it is imperative that commercial greenhouses which have not already arranged for their supply of bituminous should, according to the previous ruling, immediately get in touch with their local fuel administrator and arrange for such supply.

(Signed) M. W. MOSELEY,
Assistant State Fuel Administrator

In view of the fact that this decision still leaves the small grower, hitherto using anthracite, still up in the air. Mr. Pierson was to immediately get in telephone communication with the S. A. F. representative at Washington, Wm. F. Gude.

On behalf of the Pennsylvania growers Frank P. Myers of Myers & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Pa., on Oct. 23, addressed a letter of protest to Dr. Garfield, giving facts prevailing at that time in the coal market of Philadelphia, and showing that buckwheat coal was then a drug in the market. He presented facts and asked why it was allowable to force this coal onto people who did not want it and to refuse it to florists who did want it. He contrasted the conditions in Philadelphia with those in the West where the growers had been allowed to purchase all the byproducts of bituminous coal they wanted, disclaiming any intention of being selfish or desiring to have his Western brothers shut off if the Eastern men could not obtain the same privilege. He pointed to the patriotic action of the Philadelphia district, which had gone over the top with a credit of $430,000 on the last Liberty Loan, much of it borrowed money, and asked for the coal so that these men could make their borrowing good. He asked also for immediate action so that the small sized coal should be obtained before freezing weather came along, which would delay the releasing of the cars.

On Oct. 28 Mr. Myers reported to us that his action had been instrumental in an order having been issued to release for his section all sizes of anthracite coal below No. 1 buckwheat to florists to the full limit of their uses, disregarding further the ruling of some weeks ago limiting the amount which could be stored.

Washington, October 26, 1918.

TO ALL STATE FUEL ADMINISTRATORS:

Until further notice State Fuel Administrators may permit florists to receive and burn bituminous coal, *steam anthracite, or coke breeze, without having such fuel apply on their fifty per cent. quota, as defined by Fuel Administration curtailment order of April twenty-fourth, nineteen eighteen, whenever there is a surplus of such fuel which, in the opinion of the State Administrator, can be spared for such purpose.

H. A. GARFIELD,
National Fuel Administrator.

Steam Anthracite, as we understand it, is anything below No. 1 Buckwheat up to fine dust.*

Shedding Light on Trade Problems

In connection with the two official orders received from Mr. Gude just as we go to press, there was also enclosed a letter to "The Florists' Exchange" which we feel satisfied that gentleman will have no objection to seeing in print, inasmuch as what he says will be helpful to many; it discloses some new conditions and reiterates information which we have previously made public but which it seems so many of our readers have failed to grasp

I am being bombarded with letters about labor troubles, coal troubles, wire troubles, box troubles and heaven knows what not.

No Truth in the Conscription Story

You will remember showing me the slipping of an Associated Press story about the florists having to close up and all labor must be conscripted into war businesses. This happened in St. Louis in front of the Jefferson Hotel, in August, and my answer to you then was "I do not believe everything I see in print." When I came home and interviewed General Crowder you saw there was absolutely no truth in this press story. Only Sunday last I received a special delivery letter from Denver, Colo., with a newspaper clipping enclosed, claiming that unless everybody from 18 to 45 did not get into the army they would be conscripted and put to war work. This is scaring the florists to death.

With further reference to the coal and labor situation, I succeeded in getting a hearing with headquarters yesterday of the Federal Trade Board of the United States of America. At a very pleasant interview I was told that General Crowder was absolutely correct in what he said: "Every business was essential and should be conserved if possible." With reference to the Denver situation I hope to have some statement in today's mail that I can give direct to the papers from the Federal War Industries Board.

As I said at the Cleveland meeting, and have previously said, "No one can tell what is going to happen tomorrow." I have done everything I possibly could for the florists and allied trades and expect to keep on doing so.

The Call for a Florists' War Ex. Com. Meeting

There has gone out from the National Chamber of Commerce a call to all the large cities to send two florists as representatives to meet at a convention to be called later. This is something new and unpractical to the best of my knowledge and belief. I have heard from several cities about these letters. You may state that this simply means that the florists are to be represented on the War Industries Board to be created of business men of the United States of America. After talking with the head of this department for five minutes I convinced him that there was no possible way he could reach the florist better than through the machinery we already have; that is the S. A. F., and its allied trades, which they knew nothing about. So, therefore, all that will be necessary is for President Totty to appoint a committee of five members, three to be members of one of the organizations and two of the biggest men he can get with no affiliation with any organization whatsoever. These five men to meet with the United States Government Committee at the time and place set. So that will take care of that question.

Burning Bituminous on an Anthracite Grate

Telephoning the Lord & Burnham Co. of New York City for advice as to how a grower who has heretofore been burning domestic sizes of anthracite coal can best adapt his grate to soft coal (bituminous), Wm. R. Cobb of that company advises us that the grower should lock the grate so that it cannot shake, and stoke the fire with a poker. Soft coal, as is well known, does not give the same heating units as anthracite does; it cakes when it is fired and this allows the use of the poker to stoke the fire. That bituminous coal can be burned in an anthracite grate admits of no question, according to Mr. Cobb, but it calls for much greater attention on the part of the grower and such a fire should really have the services of a night man, because the best results are only to be obtained through frequent firing in small quantities.

Growers can change their anthracite grates for bituminous in a very short time, dependent upon the make of their boiler. If a grower has a good boiler it would not take over an hour to make the change. The cost of a special grate to burn bituminous coal will run from $25 up; in very few cases would it cost as much as $100.

Plenty of Chilean Nitrate

According to Carlos Castro Ruiz, Consul General of Chili to the United States, "there is enough surveyed nitrate in Chili to last nearly 300 years at the present rate of consumption." The United States is using more than ever before in its history, but for purposes other than agricultural. The scarcity of shipping is the real reason why farming has not enough. "There is a vast amount of unsurveyed nitrate ground on the Chilean pampas, known to contain immense quantities of nitrate of soda," and in the areas already surveyed "there are probably, in round numbers, 1,000,000,000 tons of nitrate in the deposits." Doubtless "large quantities also exist on lands now but incompletely prospected. The surveyed and certified tonnage opened up at present ready for extracting is fully 250,000,000."

"You call that patch a war-garden?"—"Hasn't it the appearance? Since the drought hit it, it looks like a section of No Man's Land."—Washington Star.

HYBRID TEA ROSE Los Angeles

In addition to the wonderful reputation that this Rose has made for itself as a bedding proposition during the past three seasons, it has this year also been awarded the Grand Prize in the Trials at the Bagatelle Gardens at Paris.

Every plant we sent out of this variety in the past has been a live advertisement, and without any special solicitation we now have more advance orders on file from our retail customers for "Los Angeles" than for any other variety.

We are sole distributing agents for the introducers for all points east of the Mississippi River and are now booking advance orders.

The price for strong two-year-old California field-grown plants for 1919 will be $1.50 each at retail. The general wholesale price will be $1.25 each, but we are prepared to book orders now for lots of fifty plants or more at the rate of $100.00 per 100. Delivery of these to be made as soon as stock arrives, which will be late in November, or early in December.

While we have a large supply, there will be no surplus and if you intend to catalogue it, we would advise you to cover your requirements now.

Dutch Bulb Stock

Polyanthus Narcissi and Roman Hyacinths

At this writing many of us are busy unpacking, checking up, and planting our bulb stock from the other side. As stated before, due to the long time the bulbs have been on the road, whether intended for early or late forcing, the sooner they are planted the better. They are not benefited in the least by lying about and drying up. Get them into the soil as fast as possible. For the retail grower the advanced price of the stock this year means little; in fact, if it will result in taking better care of fewer in number in most cases more money will be made than in former years where we got into the habit of planting many times more than we really needed, but did it just because the bulbs were cheap. The bulbs have not gone up in price any more than other things connected with running greenhouses so if we don't know how to advance the price of the flowers we sell it is no one's fault but our own. Grow fewer but better and charge accordingly. We will all have to come to it. If you have to pay $20 per 1000 for Tulips you used to buy at $10, grow just as many this year but try to make 95 per cent. of them worth while flowers instead of 50 per cent. going to compost pile. Grow what you think you need and not what you can get rid of. There is a difference between the two. The bulb bill comes in one lump, while you sell the flowers 50c. and 75c. worth at a time and charge to a good many different accounts.

Forcing Bulbs for Profit

To my mind three things are to be considered in forcing bulbs for profit: First, to select only desirable sorts; second, to grow them properly and not any more than is wanted; third, arrange it so that when once the season for cut bulb stock has begun a constant supply of flowers is being produced up to Easter at least. Out of all the many beautiful sorts of Tulips, Hyacinths and Narcissi there are after all only a few which form so to speak the backbone of florist sorts, so if you force on a small scale don't overload yourself with too many different ones. To force almost any bulb you must have well rooted stock and for Narcissi and Darwin Tulips the deeper the flats the better. Darwin Tulips in shallow flats are bound to prove a failure. So will plants not properly rooted. But when planted in not less than 3in. of soil, well rooted and not exposed to too high temperature, reasonable success may be expected. Whether you have use for 100 or 3000 cut Tulips or Narcissi a week is for you to say. It should therefore be an easy matter to figure out pretty closely just how many bulbs are to be planted and arrangements made so as to bring into the forcing house just so many flats each week during the coming Winter and Spring in order to produce what is wanted. If you have to carry the bulbs outdoors you need a good system of labeling and protecting them so as to make it possible to get at the ones you need and whenever you need them.

Storing Bulb Stock Outdoors

While hardly two florists agree as to the exact size flats to use for bulbs, we nearly all agree that flats should contain three inches of soil for almost all sorts of bulbs. I would rather have a small sized flat than a large one especially when the bulbs are to be stored outdoors; for when one has a large flat to start out with it is unhandy to manage in bad weather. This usually means rough handling and often damaging the contents. If the flats are to be stored outdoors always select a high and dry place where it is possible to get at them no matter how much rain, ice or snow may come. Bulbs once planted and started into growth must never be allowed to suffer for want of water; on the other hand they must not stand in the wet. Place pieces of 2x4's or boards on the ground to rest the flats on. After thoroughly watering cover the planted flats with 6in. to 8in. of soil which also should be moist. Cover this with manure or straw during severe freezing weather. Boards laid on top of this covering will make snow shoveling easy. Substantial labels made of 1x4's and long enough to project well above the covering should be placed between the soil. If each flat has a small label in it so much the better especially if the large labels are pulled up or broken off.

Roman Hyacinths

To the retail florist Roman Hyacinths are valuable around Christmas and New Years because they adapt themselves so well for filling dishes and pans, small baskets and hampers. When used with Adiantum or Asparagus plumosus and a few red berries they make as fine a Christmas arrangement as can be had. Bulbs planted at this time can still be had in flower for Christmas week. Allow plenty of space between them in the flats. After planting place in a cool house below a bench where they can remain for several weeks. Don't wait with forcing them too long. Plants grown in a moderate temperature are stocky and hold their flowers up well.

Paperwhite Narcissi

While there isn't a great profit in forcing Paperwhites we can always make good use of a few during Midwinter. Bulbs planted now will give flowers during December and January. After that if you plant plenty of Freesias you may not need many Paperwhites. For the out of town florist it isn't a bad idea to plant a few bulb pans with Paperwhites for Christmas. There is always a chance to dispose of such when well done, especially if a few days before Christmas to each pan a few red berries are added, and a few small ferns or Asparagus are planted around the edges. Not every patron would want such an arrangement, but there are always some who do. If you shouldn't get a chance to dispose of them in that manner use them as cut flowers.

Grand Soleil d'Or Narcissi

While Grand Soleil d'Or Narcissus belongs to the Polyanthus group and is often called the Yellow Paperwhite, it hasn't the strong perfume of the latter, but its rich golden color and earliness make it a desirable florist flower. If you want to grow a few hundred I suggest making use of bulb pans. In such the plants will do better than in shallow flats. It is not very likely that bulbs planted around the first of November will flower for Christmas, so rather than sacrifice a lot by hard forcing one will be money ahead to let them come along in a moderately warm house and accept a little less for the flowers a few days after Christmas.

Trumpet Major Narcissi

The French grown Trumpet Major Narcissi are especially well adapted for early forcing and are usually the first of the larger Trumpet sorts of the season; but with the Grand Soleil d'Or or any others it doesn't pay to overforce if you can get only a couple of dozen fair stemmed flowers out of a flat of 100 bulbs. You won't get your money back. While it means a lot for the specialist to be able to produce extra early flowers and realize a fancy price for them, besides pleasing his customers, it doesn't pay the smaller grower to attempt such forcing. He will be money ahead by not doing it. To force so as to obtain the highest percentage of good flowers out of his bulbs will pay best.

Single Early Tulips

Today the same as for ever so many years La Reine is still "the queen" of all early forcing Tulips. It is the bread and butter Tulip of the florist, reasonable in price, easy to grow, easy to sell and useful for almost any purpose. Early Tulips as a rule don't require a great deal of space and the bulbs may be planted closer in the flats than almost any other bulb we force. Yellow Prince is a fine early yellow. Chrysolora is another great favorite. Among the reds we have Belle Alliance and Artus, the latter somewhat cheaper in price. There are several good pink sorts of which Proserpine is the most expensive but a splendid sort; Rose luisante, a fine rose colored one and good forcer; Pink Beauty and Cottage Maid, beautiful names, and equally beautiful flowers. You need a few Keizerskroon. It is a showy sort, scarlet edged with yellow; so is Duchesse of Parma. For a pure white, White Hawk is perhaps the best. But if you should have room or use for only one let it be La Reine. When well done your patrons will never grow tired of it. Force plenty of it and just a small amount of each of the others.

Early Narcissi

Golden Spur and Double Von Sion

Among the early large flowering Trumpet Narcissi we get from Holland Golden Spur is better known and more used than any other. It forces easily, has a good stem and flowers with deep yellow coloring. You may have plants in bloom from the middle of January on by planting now, so you should plant enough to have flowers to cut right along during the Spring months. Among the double Narcissi none is more popular than the Double Von Sion or Daffodil. This also is an excellent forcing sort and may easily be had in flower by the end of January. As of Golden Spur, every florist forcing bulbs at all should plant freely of this fine sort. A panful of Daffodils is as appropriate an Easter plant as almost anything one might mention. Of the many other beautiful Narcissi as well as the double Tulips and the Darwins for late forcing we will write about later and also of the Dutch Hyacinths.

Another Cause of Poor Dahlias

Recent numbers of THE EXCHANGE have contained notes on Dahlia troubles, giving as causes the white fly, and over propagation. I pray you, gentlemen, do not overlook the ever present but evasive tarnished plant bug (Lygus pratensis). Twenty years ago, or thereabouts, the entomological Department at Cornell University found that the failure of the University planting of Dahlias was due to the work of this miserable pest. Prof. C. R. Crosby, of Cornell has made a special study of this insect, and has written a big bulletin telling all that is known, and all that has been said or surmised about it. But so far as I am aware no one has yet devised a successful method of fighting the bug. Dahlias have been tried in many places on this estate, but have succeeded in only one spot. This is at the mouth of a wooded glen, where the air is always moisture laden. These bugs do not frequent such places, being found mostly in the open fields. At this season the bugs are sluggish and may easily be found. They have a yellowish-brown color that renders them inconspicuous. In size about 1-5in., shaped like the squash bug.

Plants that have been injured by this insect have the appearance of having been repeatedly "pinched back." That is, in effect, what really happens. Tip growths that have been punctured cease growth, sometimes turning black, and the resulting growth gives the plant a bunchy appearance. There is a difference in the susceptibility of different varieties of Dahlias to injury by this plant bug. In a field where a general collection is grown some will be seen to escape injury while the plants in an adjoining row of another kind will be stunted almost beyond recognition. My experience was confined to a county where the rainfall is exceptionally light. Under such circumstances the tarnished plant bug is most in evidence. Many acres of Asters in Western New York are severely injured by this insect every year, although the injury is much less in showery seasons. Localities having a humid climate do not suffer from this insect. City gardens, surrounded by trees and buildings are little frequented by the bugs. We have a small garden surrounded by a tall hemlock hedge in which plants susceptible to plant bug injury have been successfully grown, when they were a complete failure just outside. Dahlias have not been grown here but would doubtless succeed. Several genera of Compositæ, in addition to Dahlia and Aster, are susceptible to this injury, though the coarser ones, like Helianthus and Rudbeckia, seem immune.

Ensenore, N. Y. GEO. ARNOLD.

How to Secure Good Dahlias

The questions are often asked: "What is the reason for so many poor Dahlias this season?" and "Will the stock from blighted plants produce good blooming plants next year?" We all remember the succession of heat waves of last Summer and the general results.

The Dahlia is a native of a climate where the days are hot but the nights cool. When we get a long spell of hot nights, Dahlia plants suffer more or less unless favored by location or some other conditions.

My gardens are located on a narrow strip of land leading to Indian Neck, 600 ft. north from the shores of Long Island Sound, and 150 ft. south of the Salt Meadows and the Branford river. So the nights are always cool and moist no matter how hot the day. My plants made a slow healthy growth the whole season, still I have seen white fly, stalk borer, etc., but no cut worms. I have grown 50 per cent. fewer plants than under pre-war conditions, but cut more blooms during July and August than in any previous season, due to location and rush of people to the seashore. So it was a far better season for me than a cool Summer.

Inland the case is different. In most congested places where Dahlias were grown and buildings held the heat through the night, the plants became sickly and a prey for insects. Where the sprinkler system of irrigation was used, plants have pulled through fairly well, due not only to the moisture supplied, but also to the reduction of night temperature.

If some of those fellows who pay no attention to the cost of production, so ably set forth by THE EXCHANGE, but look only for results by receipts taken in, would try placing cakes of ice at sufficient intervals properly to reduce the night temperature during these hot waves they would find healthy plants in spite of white fly, drought and heat wave. Those who are doing business and growing a large number of plants should keep cultivation going so as to form a dust mulch to protect the roots from burning and drying out, which is the chief source of trouble. Smaller growers might mulch with coarse litter and soak once a week.

One thing more for the good of the Dahlia. Do not save any 1918 seedling, which makes sickly plants, no matter how fine the blooms are. There is also much in varieties grown. All the varieties recommended through THE EXCHANGE two years ago did well with me this year, better than some of the newer ones though some of the new Collarettes of better habits, color and form, when better known, will be grown.

British Notes

Messrs. Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, Scotland, have appointed Harry Wright to be manager of their Marks Tey establishment. Mr. Wright was Mr. Ireland's chief assistant and has been in the service of the firm for over 22 years.

In spite of war conditions the National Sweet Pea Society has "under consideration the holding of a show" in London, England, during July, 1919, "at which the society's challenge cups and other prizes will be offered." The committee has issued notice so growers may make arrangements. Schedule will be issued with the Annual.

New York Seed Trade

There have been no further arrivals of either French or Dutch bulbs since our last writing. The former are all, or nearly all, cleared through the customs and off the pier. There appears to be a shortage in P. W. Narcissus in the sizes from 14 centimeters up and also in Soleil d'Or Narcissus. The Dutch bulbs, too, are mostly off the piers and there have been no further arrivals. Importers of both Dutch and French bulbs, and seedsmen also who import bulbs are busy filling orders which they had already booked. Counter trade in these bulbs is not brisk. It looks now as if there would not be any great surplus of bulbs after orders are filled, unless there should be further arrivals.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 41 to 43 Barclay st., is distributing its October number of "Pointers to Planters," which contains considerable interesting matter.

There is noted this week in the store window of Peter Henderson & Co., 35-37 Cortlandt st., a large, comprehensive and worth while viewing collection of Pumpkins and Squashes, a really educative display, because it gives an excellent opportunity for the comparison of varieties. The companion window of this store is gay with the blooms of several kinds of Autumn flowers.

Eight o'clock a.m. opening and 4 p.m. closing is, at the request of the Board of Health, still maintained in the Seed Stores of this city.

Chicago Seed Trade

Winterson's Seed Store reports the arrival of both French and Dutch bulbs for which it finds a strong Western demand.

The first large consignment of Holland and French bulbs reached Vaughan's Seed store the past week. At the retail store there is a lively demand for Paperwhite Narcissi for house culture. Darwin Tulips for bedding purposes are also selling well.

A. Henderson of A. Henderson Co., has been in New York the past week looking after the shipping to Chicago of his supply of French and Dutch bulbs recently landed.

The annual convention of the National Canners' Ass'n will be held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, the week of January 20 instead of in February as formerly announced.

Arnold Ringier has been handling a lot of Onion set orders this Fall. The open weather has been favorable to the work.

Seedsmen who handle Holly and other greens for Christmas decorations are already making preparations to do so. Some of the new crop Lycopodium has already reached the market. The probability is that the stock will be scarce this season on account of shortage of labor for picking. Freight transportation will also be slow so it behooves all dealers to make arrangement for their supply as early as possible.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., reached Chicago from New York the past week where he attended the funeral of the late Ralph M. Ward. While in the East he looked after the shipping of the Holland bulbs for his company to Chicago. The company has many large orders booked.

Kentucky Seed Notes

The Onion set market has been much weaker, due to better crop reports from Illinois and other growing sections. Growers had been asking $9.25 per barrel for yellow sets and $11.25 for white. Prices have been beaten down to $8 for yellow and $9 for white. In a jobbing way sets on the basis of a 32 pound bushel are quoted at $2.50 per bushel immediate delivery for yellow and $2.85 for January or February; white immediate are quoted $2.75; Spring $3.15. Demand is quiet, Southern early demand having been filled, and present demand being of speculative nature.

Bluegrass prices are firm at $2.75 to $2.85 per bushel for 21 pound seed, with 18 pound seed worth 5c. to 7c. per bushel less. The actual demand is fair. It is reported that some little speculative buying has broken out as a result of the peace movement. However, this report is discounted. The activity has taken only a small percentage of seed from the growers as yet. Jobbers are running light, and cleaners are buying only for immediate demand.

The Orchard Grass demand is still good, but is easing up as the article is getting scarce in Louisville. Stocks are out of the hands of the growers, and most of the cleaners have sold out. Jobbers are carrying fair stocks.

Red Top is showing more activity than usual, because it is one of the cheapest seeds on the market. It has a good promise as a speculative investment, as it is one of the low priced seeds quoted. Illinois cleaners are paying more for Red Top which has gone to 12c. to the grower. Cleaners are getting 12½c. and jobbers are quoting 13½c. and 14c. This seed promises to advance considerably in price and get in line with other high priced seeds.

Red Clover is scarce in spite of great promise early in the year. First class seed is quoted at $22 and $23 per bushel. These prices are so high that farmers are refusing to pay retailers' prices which are considerably higher. The result is that Red Clover is not moving. It recalls the days when seed was selling at $25 a bushel, and was shipped in sugar barrels to prevent loss.

Timothy has been fairly active at $5 a bushel in a jobbing way. However, it is about done for this season.

Louisville seed jobbers report that the Fall season has about closed on one of the most active years they have known, a year in which the demand has been for the best regardless of the high prices. At present there isn't much demand, but retailers are going over the Winter with larger stocks than they have carried for two or three years. Indications are for an active Winter buying for Spring delivery.

Looking Into the Future

In view of the situation that will confront not only the Allies but the enemy countries immediately at the close of the war, the following extract from the New York Evening Sun is timely:

In normal times before the war the imports of wheat and wheat flour by England, Holland, Italy, France, Germany, Belgium and Austria-Hungary amounted to over 414,000,000 bushels a year. Much of it came from Russia, some from Argentina and Australia, but most of it from North America. Of these importing nations Germany, France, Hungary, and to some extent England also produced a good deal of wheat at home. The war has inevitably decreased production in all these nations except England. They demand more wheat than ever from us, and when peace comes the needs of our enemies must also be met. No one intends to starve a defeated Germany. Thus the peace time demand will be enormous.

It will be accentuated, too, by the disorganization of Russia and the Balkans. It will be several years before full crops can be hoped for from those stricken nations. The food must be supplied by North and South America and Australia.

But even more serious than the instant call for food will be the demand for seed. Not one of these European nations can possibly have anything like seed grain enough to replant its own fields when war is over. They will ask it of us. Even Russia, Siberia, Rumania and Hungary will need to draw upon our seed supply.

Nor is it wheat alone that will be wanted. Feed grains will perhaps be even more in demand: barley, oats and corn, seed as well as the finished feed product, if the supply of animals is to be restored.

We have the land available, and the money. Our own grain fields and the great Canadian Northwest could readily grow enough to supply the whole world—if we had the labor. But until labor enough is found the increase will be doubtful. As it is now nearly every new acre of wheat planted means one acre less for some other crop. Much can be done by better and more plentiful machinery, but not enough. Men are still needed How to find them and put them to work on the land is perhaps the gravest problem of the near future—indeed, it is a present and pressing matter that cannot safely be ignored.

Holland Plant Exporters Ass'n

Since the publication of the item entitled "Holland Growers' Protective List" on page 613, issue of Oct. 19, we are in receipt of an official circular, giving the rulings of the Holland Plant Exporters' Association. Following the example of the American Association of Nurserymen, it has formed a protective body to care for the interests of its members, with the object in view of adjusting the export plant trade to the new world conditions; also in the endeavor to assist customers, so that unfair competition of slow and fault finding buyers may be reduced, and what is of prime interest to buyers here, abandoning the practice of sending goods from Holland to public auctions. As their agreement puts it, "all auctions in all countries where a regular plant trade with Holland exists is forbidden." The following are the articles of agreement:

1. No auctions are alllowed in countries where a regular trade in plants has been established.
2. Goods are only sold f. o. b. seller's nurseries.
3. No orders will be executed for firms which have not settled their accounts of the preceding season.
4. All accounts are due net, three months after date of invoice; interest of ½ per cent per month will be charged on overdue accounts.
5. Claims not made within eight days after receipt of the goods cannot be taken in consideration.

Gardening for Prisoners

From an English trade paper we quote the following:

In view of the starvation diet endured by prisoners in Germany, and to relieve the deadly monotony of prison life Messrs. Kelway sent parcels of food seeds to all the prison camps. They have received the following letter from the Prisoners of War Committee:

"Dear Sirs: We have pleasure in stating that up to date we have received acknowledgment from the undermentioned camps, to the seeds which you kindly sent us for forwarding in March last:

"Munster, Geissen, Stendal, Minden, Gardelegen, Langensalza, Altdamm, Lechfeld, Dulmen, Gustrow, Friedrichsfeld. The men all seem most grateful and wish us to thank the donors. Yours truly,

(Signed) K. Oliver,
"For the Secretary, Parcels Dept."

Yields from Green Manure Increased

The New Jersey Exp. Sta. calculates that two crops of green manure contain as much phosphoric acid and potash and nearly as much nitrogen and organic matter as 20 tons of stable manure. Although the potash and phosphoric acid are not added to the soil, they are returned in more available form, and if the green manure used is a legume, at least part of the nitrogen is an addition to that already in the soil. However, it is expensive to handle the stable refuse, while the green-manuring crop can be grown directly on the impoverished land, and thus be ready for uniform plowing-under when it has attained the proper growth. The New Jersey station demonstrated that leguminous green manures are more efficient than stable manure in the matter of crop production and in maintaining the nitrogen content of the soil.

A green-manuring crop should be turned under at least two weeks before the next crop is planted. In plowing down the catch crop, the furrow slice should be laid slanting at an angle of 30 to 40 deg. with the horizontal. Directly after plowing, the field should be rolled thoroughly as this hastens decay and prevents the drying out of the soil.

The principal green-manuring crops which are now in extensive use include Crimson Clover, Sweet Clover, Burr Clover, Soy Beans, Cowpeas, Velvet Beans, Vetches, Canadian Field Peas, and Rye.

Fewer Lawn Mowers

The manufacture of lawn mowers has been ordered cut for three months ensuing to 40 per cent. of the 1917 rate, and the industry has been notified to get into war work by the end of three months.

Houston, Texas

[illegible] the florists of Houston [illegible] a rush of business [illegible] past few weeks. They [illegible] day and night. Practically all the business has been funeral work and supplying flowers for the sick. They all express themselves gracefully as being sorry to profit by the affliction of the community, but the fact remains as a business proposition that when they were looking forward to a diminution of business, they have had more work than they could attend to.

Kerr the Florist reports that the rush has been such that nothing like it has been known in the history of the florist business in Houston. Only within the past two days has there been any signs of a slack. Mr. Eichling, the sales manager, is again on the sick list.

The first 'Mums of the season grown in Houston were gathered yesterday. Good Roses and ferns are coming from the R. C. Kerr Company. Mr. Newell of Kansas City, who was here with his wife to visit a sick son at the aviation fields, has returned to Kansas City, but his wife still remains with her son, who is doing well.

R. G. Hewitt, of the Brazos Greenhouses is knocking on wood. He has been swamped with work, and has had to turn away orders not because he lacked flowers, but because he had so much work ahead he could not fill new orders.

Clarence L. Brock, superintendent of parks, and S. J. Mitchell, president of the Houston Horticultural Co., have joined in growing some fine 'Mums at the City Greenhouse. These 'Mums are beginning to bloom nicely, and their success will show what can be done with these beautiful flowers with merely a frail lath house as a protection.

J. M. Laughlin, secretary of the Houston Hort. Club, has received word of the death of his brother in New Orleans. W. H. Laughlin, construction foreman for Pennock & Ford. He reports that a meeting of the club has been called for the first Monday in November, when the question of putting in orders for Crape Myrtles will be taken up. The committee entrusted with the work of sending flowers to the family and next of kin of Houston soldiers who fall in France, in accordance with the suggestion of the national florist organization, will make a report. C. L. B.

Texas Meeting and Show Postponed

On account of the extreme conditions that prevail all over the country, it is decided that the convention and flower show of the Texas State Florists' Association at Fort Worth, Nov. 19 to 21, be postponed. The show will not be held at all this year; the convention at some later date, likely in the Spring.

L. J. TACKETT, Sec'y.

Norfolk, Va.

Business has been rushing; in fact has never been so great in the history of the trade here; this is the general report.

H. C. Vansant has been ill with influenza; meanwhile his wife is taking charge of the store.

William Nolan of the Burlington Willow Ware is calling on the trade here and at Newport News and surrounding territory. Dahlias are still the principal flowers offered, although 'Mums are arriving more freely and help out.

Fourth Liberty Loan at Macon, Ga.

D. C. H[illegible], proprietor of the Idle Hour Nurseries, of Macon, Ga., was an [illegible] for the Fourth Liberty Loan. The committee of which he was chairman sold, during the campaign, $461,800 worth of bonds. Bibb County, in which Macon is located, went "over the top" by a substantial sum.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—We regret to learn that Thos. A. Ross, store manager for Chris. Reuter, seedsman of this city, died on Oct. 16, of influenza, at the age of 32. Mr. Ross, who was formerly with Jacob Bros., Fort Worth, Texas, had been connected with the Reuter establishment for four years. He had a wide circle of friends among the seedsmen of this country as well as of Scotland, the country of his birth.

National Publicity Campaign

The far reaching effect of our publicity campaign is becoming noticeable. Among [illegible] perhaps we had better call them commissions, because we do not in our advertisements invite orders—was one from Palestine. An officer in the Indian Army, now with General Allenby, sent Egyptian bills, the only medium of money exchange open to him. He directed the delivery of a birthday gift of flowers in a neighboring city. He was also good enough to speak of our slogan in a manner highly commendatory. So there was not the slightest doubt that he was influenced by it to transmit the order.

While the Promotion Bureau certainly did not expect actually to become a factor in the interchange of orders, still it has relayed scores received from persons who have either misunderstood the mission of our advertisements, or sought our services through our being considered a responsible head to the system. Of course, we are pleased to be of such service.

But what must be the business effect of the "Say it with Flowers" slogan throughout our own vast country; The public has taken very kindly to the phrase, and it is commonly quoted.

It should be the object of every florist to lend assistance in our efforts to plant this slogan still deeper in the public mind. Every flower store window should display it where its message can be made continuous. There is nothing better than the beautiful glass signs we provide for this purpose—glass mounted on brass, the slogan in gold on light blue ground, the background dark green, delivered anywhere at $2 each, the average cost. Every florist in the land should have one of these signs on display. It should pay for itself in a few hours, help the florist and help in the publicity work.

A word to those who have not subscribed to the Publicity Fund. You will notice from the statement concluding this letter that we are still short of our object, the attainment of a fund approximating $50,000 a year for four years. Our committees for this reason are not able to go as far in their work as they believe they should. The success of the campaign so far is beyond question, but the campaign stimulant should not be administered in homeopathic doses. These work too slowly. The greater the concentration of effort, the more noticeable the results. The committees would like to close the year with the concentration they planned, but are dependent upon the florists who have not yet provided stimulant to furnish the amount required many hundreds of their brother florists have nobly done their share and are satisfied that their contributions have proved to be good investments. If your hearts are in your business, you surely will want to subscribe to this fund. Send in to the Secretary your cheques for whatever you feel you can give; or, if you prefer, ask for our regular printed forms and other particulars, and they will be promptly sent to you.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The demand for flowers still continues to be more than the supply. Wholesale houses are kept busy answering the 'phone and refusing orders. If a retailer does not have his order in the day before he is likely to be without stock the next day. 'Mums are now coming in larger amounts, a welcome to this market as Dahlias have been affected by the frost. Shipments are expected in a few days as only the open flowers were frozen. Some good early Rose, Pink Gem, Chrysolora and Pink and White Ivory 'Mums are coming to the market. Pompons of all colors are in heavy supply and help out considerably. The supply of Carnations is increasing daily. There's a great demand at $6 per 100 as the top price. The demand for long American Beauty Roses is not nearly what it was last week as 'Mums are gradually taking their place. Prices have suffered some but the shorter grades that can be used for funeral work still hold up in price. There seems to be a shortage of Galax, Leucothoe, ferns and other greens, due to sickness among the pickers and trouble to get help. Asparagus sprengeri and plumosus are also in demand. Roses of all varieties reaching this market clean up well at good prices. There are not nearly enough short stemmed ones, but plenty of the long grades. The best Rose seen this year is Columbia. It is a favorite with all. Valley and orchids are selling well with a good supply. Violets are selling well; they are being used for funeral work.

C. C. Phillip, of the McCallum Co., has been confined to his home with illness. About the time he was able to be around Mrs. Phillip was affected.

N. McC.

Lanncaster, Pa.

With the unseasonably warm weather came a little relief in the supply of flowers. The past week, even with additional work, was not so nerve racking as the previous one, although the hours of work have not been reduced. Florists are working from 6 a.m and 7 a.m. to 12 at night or later.

Walter Hammond handled about as many 'Mums in one week as he has for a whole season heretofore. He is getting them from Lemar Landis, Fred Roof, Thomas Fries and Rudolph Nagle.

The Rosary has managed to keep up its supply of flowers from local growers and the Philadelphia market. It had a wonderful supply of hardy 'Mums and a great display of plants, including peppers grown locally by A. Strickler.

While Mrs. Ida Goldbach has been ill Miss Goldbach has managed to keep things going successfully.

H. A. Schroyer has been hampered by the illness of his right hand man, who since his recovery has decided that the business is unhealthy so is not coming back. With the able management of Miss Steelman and the assistance of Mr. Metzger he has been doing pretty well, however, in spite of this drawback. He is getting good stock from the greenhouses, but most of it is bought. To say it very gently, there has been profiteering among the growers. It would be a wild dream to imagine any such condition in this business as the following of stable business policies, but sometimes one wishes there were such a thing.

At the B. F. Barr store everybody was working double time. While orders seemed to be coming in faster than they were going out, Mrs. Barr said: "We will catch up tonight after the doors close." The cut from the greenhouses has been phenomenal and the fact that it has all been sold down to the last flower and at greatly increased prices ought to make this a red letter season for the concern. With a reduced working force at both the greenhouses and the store it has meant hustling, so every one will be glad when things slacken up a bit. One of Mr. Barr's men has also left because the work has proved unhealthy. What is the matter with the greenhouse work today? As a boy I remember hearing a group of doctors who were at the reception given the S. A. F., at Geo. W. Childs' place in Bryn Mawr, saying to Mr. Childs: "Do you know this is the healthiest lot of men of one profession that we have ever seen gathered together?"

The markets were well supplied with hardy 'Mums. An old city ordinance has been enforced that protects the flower shop from out of town buyers. For several weeks there had been buyers here from Baltimore, Harrisburg and Philadelphia who picked up everything they could buy on the market, but the authorities have put a stop to this. If outsiders want to get flowers from these farmers who supply the market they will have to tour the county or spend some time in Lancaster's jail. Lancaster believes in protection and lives up to what she believes in. We agree with General Hancock, who in his 1880 campaign said: "The Protective Tariff is a local issue." We have made it one on our markets and hope the United States will make it universal after the war.

Paul K. Murphy writes home and says "with all the open ground around me why should a shell drop on the little spot I cover?" This might be good philosophy for some of us who think we are having so much trouble. ALBERT M. HERR.

Buffalo, N. Y.

The demand for funeral flowers has been heavy. The receipts of stock were somewhat larger than previously, especially in 'Mums. Am. Beauty and other Roses and Dahlias. Prices were not quite as high as during the week previous, although there was a clean-up daily. Lilies are still scarce. There was a good supply of Violets, with no special demand.

Car Strike Settled

Buffalo's street car strike, which lasted three weeks and caused a loss of many thousands of dollars to the downtown florists and other merchants was settled Saturday afternoon, Oct. 26. The car men will have $1,500,000 added to their annual payroll; part of this extra money will undoubtedly reach the local flower shops. Increases in wages amounting to $7,000,000 for the employees of the Curtis Aeroplane Co.'s six establishments in Buffalo have also just been approved by the War Labor Board at Washington. By this decision about 10,000 men and women workers will receive substantial advances, which will undoubtedly benefit business here. Even in the face of war time troubles, progressive florists see prosperity ahead.

J. Fred De Mun, traveling salesman for the Dunkirk (N. Y.) Seed Co., died recently of influenza in a Rochester, Pa., hospital.

Florist a Candidate for Office

"A business man for a business office." This is the slogan which the friends of S. A. Anderson, Buffalo florist, are using in their aggressive campaign to elect him county treasurer at the coming election. They are basing their appeal for votes for him on the ground that "Mr. Anderson has executive ability and progressive ideas and is a man of splendid character." As Mr. Anderson is nationally known in the florist's trade, his friends in all parts of the country hope he will be elected.

JOSEPH A. MCGUIRE.

Rochester, N. Y.

Since last writing there has been a falling in demands and business is not so brisk as during the past three weeks. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful, so Rose sales have decreased. A general lull in the trade can be felt. For the first time in many weeks Roses are left over from the day's business and calls for them are growing less. Carnations are still scarce and it is believed that the scarcity will be felt while Chrysanthemums are on the market.

The Rosery Flower Shop, formerly conducted by the late Paul Campas has been disposed of to E. Kendig of Oswego, N. Y. Mr. Kendig will for the present keep his store going in Oswego. He is familiar with the Rochester trade having had business connections here previous to going into business in Oswego. He possesses skill in floral arrangement, is a hustler and a hard worker and has the best wishes for success from his fellow craftsmen.

In compliance with the recent orders from the Fuel Administrator, the Lamberton Conservatories at Highland Park will be closed for the Winter. This will be regretted by many citizens who have been in the habit of making regular visits to the place to see displays which the Dept. of Parks has always provided. The plant and propagating houses will be kept going as usual. Stock, which has been made ready for display in the conservatories, will, it is thought, be disposed of if possible. H. B S.

An Unusual Garden Enclosure

(This Week's Illustration)

We have all so often seen the stereotyped blocked hedge of California Privet throughout the country that we are perhaps almost sick of the sight. To say the least, we have tired of the miles and miles of trim uniformity produced by this plant as it is used by many garden owners.

However, the hedge shown in the accompanying illustration is undoubtedly attractive. This beautiful and ornate barricade encloses on three sides a flower garden of considerable size. The residence being situated at the south end, one has the opportunity to look into the garden from the windows, as at a pleasing picture that is well framed.

This hedge, planted about fourteen years ago, is now some 12ft. to 14ft. high, by 4½ft. broad and represents cultural skill and art in its unique formation as well as in its continued upkeep. The shears must be used on it at least three times in a season to have it appear at its best (notice the difference between the sheared and the unsheared portion in the picture) and to have it healthy and robust from the ground line up, an annual feeding of some good fertilizer is necessary. This is perhaps the best formed hedge of Privet in the country, and in its topiary formation reminds one of the famous hedges of Holly seen in European gardens.

EDWIN MATTHEWS.

A Unique Hedge. See text.

The Japanese Maple and Its Production

The Japanese Maple is one of the most difficult plant species to produce from grafts in the propagating greenhouse. Often it is practically a total failure, as mold appears on the grafts, destroying 50 to 75 per cent. Nevertheless, despite the difficulties grafting is practically the only way in Holland to produce Japanese Maples.

The climate in America differs greatly from that in Holland; the continued warm weather in Summer gives American nurserymen a great advantage in growing Japanese Maples. Until coming to this country I had neither seen nor heard anything of the way some nurserymen in this country have of producing Japanese Maples by grafting. When visiting Holland a couple of years ago I told several nurserymen about this method but they would hardly believe me.

I believe the method I will refer to immediately is little known or practiced by nurserymen or florists in this country, so it will be advisable for some people to try it out on a small scale until success is attained, so they may grow the plants in larger quantities.

The best time to graft Japanese Maple in the open is in the latter part of July or the first part of August. The stock used to place the scion on is the Acer polymorphum, a rapid growing variety of the Japanese Maple. The stock usually may be imported from France. It may also be grown easily from seed. Two or three year old seedlings, are best planted such a distance apart that later on, after grafting, the variety has sufficient room to develop into salable plants. If the soil is not very fertile it is necessary to transplant them before they are salable, to insure a good fibrous root system.

The scions must not be cut too long a time in advance before grafting takes place, as they must lose none of their vitality by withering. The scions may be 8in. to 10in. long. The tops are shortened a little. Do not select soft, sappy wood for scions, but sturdy hard twigs of this Summer's growth. Two downward cuts about 1½in. long in the form of an inverted V (See figure) are made in the stock on the smoothest part of the bark about 6in. above the soil and just through the bark. These cuts form a flap which is raised but not removed. The scion is cut on two sides about 3in. from the lower end also just through the bark, the bark in these cases being removed. The cuts on the scion must be about the same length as on the stock. As the scion usually is thinner than the stock, it must be placed obliquely against the stock and in such a way that the bark of cut surfaces of stock and scion cross each other. A cotton thread is sufficiently strong to unite the stock and the scion [but wool is safer as it will "give" with the expansion due to growth.—ED.]

After the two are united with the thread, a bottle filled with water is tied to the lower part of the stock and the lower end of the scion is placed in the water. Ordinary medicine bottles are large enough for this purpose, but if bottles with wide necks are available it will be found to be more convenient to refill the bottles occasionally until stock and scion are united. This water preserves the scion during the action of union, and prevents it from withering. It does not take long with favorable weather conditions for the stock and scion to unite.

When the union is complete the stock supplies the scion with sap for its further development, so water is no longer necessary and the bottles may be taken away. The lower part of the scion which was in the bottle is cut off just below this point at the time the bottles are removed. Early in the Spring the stock is cut off just above the place of union.

To obtain beautiful specimen plants, especially with the taller growing varieties, it is necessary to place sticks alongside of them. To these the young shoots may be tied. A Japanese Maple does not need much trimming; in fact, most of the dwarf growing varieties should not be trimmed at all, as having them grow as nature wishes, greatly promotes the Japanese effect.

The Japanese Maple is a plant which may be used for many purposes in landscape effect. The foliage is delicately cut and serrated, and varies from green to blood red and bright gold. Certain varieties of which the leaves and growing habits differ from each other produce a unique effect when planted in a group.

So far few florists realize the merits of Japanese Maples for forcing purposes. Past flower shows in Europe have had beautiful exhibits of these useful plants. As they require not much heat in Winter to be forced, it would pay the florists to grow some in pots, either to sell or for the next flower show.

Some Attractive Salvias

The months of September and October are made attractive principally by the floral displays of herbaceous plants rather than by trees and shrubs. Except for some few good things among the latter, there is a dearth of flowers in comparison with what is afforded by them in the Spring and early Summer.

Among the numerous hardy perennials that now give color to the garden and landscape none are more pleasing, perhaps, than the hardy Salvia, some species of which should be better known and more widely used. The writer especially has in mind those with blue and lavender colored flowers which, by reason of the preponderance of yellow in the landscape at this season of the year, are more beautiful by contrast.

The sky blue flowered Salvia Pitcheri, otherwise known as Salvia azurea grandiflora is exceptionally good at this time, its tall flower spikes being heavy with bloom. The value of this variety for late flowering in the open is not fully recognized or it would be more freely employed in mass planting for the hardy garden or grown solely for cut flower purposes. To those who love the blue of the Larkspur in June and July, this Salvia would surely appeal as a repeat color for the Fall.

Another very charming plant is Salvia farinacea, the flowers of which are a pale violet. This effect is heightened by the extremely light grayish blue of the calyx, which is coated with a light, powdery farinose, from which fact the name of the species is derived. It is even a freer bloomer than Salvia Pitcheri and as it does not attain to nearly the height of the latter, it is less likely to be battered by rain storms which visit us during this period.

If it were a native of Pennsylvania instead of Texas, its hardiness would be more assured for all gardens. As it is, the plant does not always come through our Winters in good shape but in this it is like many of our hardy Chrysanthemums, so-called, which all too often are killed if not given a sheltered position and the right kind of soil, (open and free) and a mulching of light litter as Winter protection.

Both the foregoing Salvias are, however, the easiest subjects to propagate. Lift a few plants in late Fall, pot, and in February the young growth is ready to take for cuttings, which are readily rooted. The resulting plants will be fairly large and bushy by the time the flowering season is reached.

Another species which deserves mention as being worthy of more attention is Salvia Greggii, another Texas plant and valuable for late Summer and Fall flowering. In fact this plant will keep on blooming long after the first Fall frosts have blackened the leaves of bedding plants like Coleus, Geraniums, etc. Its flowers, of a pleasing cerise color, are distributed evenly but not thickly, all over the plant and are well matched by the rather small leaf and slender stalks. Those folks who have tired somewhat of the very popular and freely used "Scarlet Sage," whose vivid color can almost be heard before seen, will undoubtedly be pleased with the milder color tones of S. Greggii.

There is some question as to the hardiness of this species for Northern gardens, but the writer has known it to Winter quite well in the vicinity of Philadelphia, when it was well mulched with leaves. While it must be, perhaps, classed as a herbaceous perennial, it is shrubby in its growth, quite as much so as the Potentillas and

The Coal Situation Uptodate

Here's to the telephone: May its legitimate use never wear it out. Had it not been for this wonderful instrument today it would never have been possible to record in this week's issue the many developments which have occurred in the coal situation the past few days.

We have endeavored to give the facts uptodate, many of them arrived at over the 'phone. On the whole it looks as though the restrictions surrounding the use of coal had been considerably modified to the advantage of all users, especially those of the East.

Last Week's Delay

New York's printers and publishers emerged on Tuesday, Oct. 29, from just one week's experience without parallel in the history of printing in that city. With one exception not a wheel turned in any union printing office during six working days. Consequently not a paper went into the mails save those which happened to be off the presses and in the binderies. Naturally, THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE suffered with all the rest, and its issue of Oct. 26 went into the mails a full five days late.

Labor adjustments and increases have been frequent since the war opened, and when this latest demand was made on them the employers immediately agreed to submit to arbitration through the War Labor Board, and to accept its findings. The Press Feeders' Union, however, did not accept arbitration until Oct. 28, when ex-president Wm. H. Taft and Frank P. Walsh, Joint Chairmen, and their assistants held a public hearing in City Hall, N. Y., at which the feeders agreed to accept the good offices of the Board.

Thus not only has an ugly situation been averted but the printers and publishers have for the first time in their history acted cohesively.

Incidentally THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE has been through many strikes, but this was the first time since its founding in 1888 that it has failed to come out within its regular date.

For the benefit of our readers we give here the definition and standing of the War Labor Board, as explained by Ex-President William H. Taft. Mr. Taft said that it was under the belief that strikes and lockouts should be abolished during the war that the Board came into being, by Presidential proclamation. "It is a voluntary body and purely a war measure. It has no compulsory process to enforce its rulings; it has behind it only patriotism and enlightened public opinion." It is thus a tribute to the strength of public opinion and to the call for the exercise of patriotism that this War Labor Board in numerous instances—some of them of an extremely aggravating nature—has been enabled to persuade men to return to work and eventually restore amicable arrangements between employer and employee.

Plant and Plant Materials Restriction

In another column Prof. B. T. Galloway has favored us with the most concise and intelligible version of the proposed restrictions by the Federal Horticultural Board we have yet seen. Every florist and nurseryman will do well to read the article.

Enthusiastically in favor of producing in the United States all that can be produced to the ultimate advantage of our growers here, we still submit that the Federal Horticultural Board is excluding certain stocks too hastily and without looking well into the loss to general commerce which is bound to ensue therefrom—we allude particularly to what is commonly known as field grown florist stock.

Foreign countries, too, those which we have purchased from freely for decades past, and whose industry has been largely built up by American trade demands, Belgium, Holland, France, England, will undoubtedly appeal through their representatives for a modification of this, to them, drastic treatment. They should, at least, be given time to direct their energies into other channels, and our own people should be given better incentives to produce the stock here than now exists—referring, again, particularly to field grown florist stock.

Peace Prospects

With Bulgaria eliminated, Turkey a negligible quantity, Austria suing for peace, there remains but Germany, the most powerful of the quartette, easily surpassing all her three allies together in resources and determination, to be dealt with. With the facts as they exist at this writing, our readers are just as well acquainted as we are.

The question uppermost, then, providing Germany agrees to accept the terms the Allies will assuredly put up to her before they will cease hostilities, is what influence will an early armistice, which, under the guarantees to be demanded will mean peace, have upon the florist and nursery lines.

Will these receive an immediate upward impetus? Will the florists at once be given full coal supplies; will help become available; will prices drop; will the express companies make better deliveries and commercial freight lines resume normal operations; will imports be at once resumed? And so on all along the line.

Without doubt the craving to have all these desiderata come about—and quickly—will be in full evidence and that will be helpful so far as it goes. The Reconstruction, or rather in this country the Readjustment period, if wisely handled by our statesmen, should carry the United States back to normal much more rapidly than will be possible in the countries of our Allies, and conditions here should improve from month to month. If we are patient under the process we will accomplish more and be better pleased with ourselves than should we attempt to disentangle the knot with intolerant haste.

Florists' War Service Ex. Com. Proposed

A copy of a circular letter issued by Elliott H. Goodwin, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., which apparently has been sent to two florists in each city, has come into our hands. The circular states that it has been thought advisable, in the interests of the trade, that a war service executive committee of the florists of t United States be formed to deal with the Government questions of fuel supply, etc., and then it goes on to s that the two florists in each city into whose hands t circular falls call a meeting of other florists, both wholes and retail, to appoint a representative or two to go Washington as representatives of the entire florists' tra of their city.

The gentleman issuing the call has ignored, probab through want of knowledge or through not giving t matter proper investigation, the fact that the trade has national representative at Washington in the person Wm. F. Gude; that it has a national society, the Socie of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturist that it has a great number of trade clubs and other affiliat bodies; that through the S. A. F. the trade as far back last May had a public hearing at Washington in the matt of its fuel supply. That, on the other hand, through i national, state and local clubs, it has, in an organized wa contributed largely to the purchase of Liberty Loan Bond as well as made contributions to the leading war reli societies; also it has given large quantities of flowers every direction to camps and hospitals, buying and co tributing to an extent perhaps equalled, but not exceede pro rata to its capital and income by any other repr sentative trade or industry.

Unless there is more behind it than appears on the su face, there does seem nothing to be gained at this late da through the formation of a war service executive committe On another page Wm. F. Gude relates the result of a interview with an official of the above association and i results.

Auction Sales Imported Plants Abandoned

Of particular interest at this time is the announce ment, which will be found in full in our Seed Trad columns, of the new rules and regulations controllin exports, adopted by the Holland Plant Exporter Ass'n. For years past the bête noir of all handlers c Dutch nursery stock has been the auction sales, where were dumped and sold, generally at much lower price than their regular customers had already purchase at, all the surplus stock which the Dutch travelers ha been unable otherwise to dispose of. The complet abandonment of this practice must be held as a sig of returning sanity on the part of the Dutch grower and will be welcomed by the trade in common wit the other provisos contained in the five regulations un der which the Association is working.

"What did the doctor advise to complete the cure of dyspep sia?" "A plain, light diet." "Can you content yourself with such fare?" "I must, for since paying his bill for medicine and attendance I cannot afford anything else."—N. Y. Globe

One of Lord Lansdowne's favorite tales concerns a politica meeting at an Irish village. "Has anny gintleman anny questions to ask?" inquired the chairman, looking round. A man got up to ask something, when a partisan of the speakers on the platform instantly knocked him down. "Has anny other gintleman anny questions to ask?" said the chairman, blandly; but as no other gentleman had, the motion was declared as "carried unanimously."—N. Y. Journal.

Vanished Holes.—And now they've taken the hole away from the macaroni "to save cargo space!" Hereafter it is to be cast in solid strings. Holes won't win the war, some efficient expert has concluded. It is an earth-shaking reform that shows how war is cruelly shattering all worn out ideals, ancient habits and customs, and building a better and safer world. By all means let the new civilization be hole-less. But how about the doughnut? And Swiss cheese?—N. Y. Evening Sun.

PLANT IMPORTATION REGULATIONS

Admission restrictions –Certain plants excluded—Imports through Department of Agriculture—Stocks for fruits—Two problems involved—Search for stock growing areas

By B. T. GALLOWAY

For a good many years the Office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction of the Department of Agriculture has been engaged in bringing in plant material that gave promise of value for stocks. Special attention has been given to fruit stocks, particularly stocks for the Apple, Pear, Peach, Apricot and Plum. Since 1898 something over 400 types of Pears have been introduced and disseminated. Many types of Peach and Plum have also been introduced and have been placed in the hands of specialists and others for work in connection with securing disease and insect resistance, soil and climatic adaptability, and congeniality.

Recently the Federal Horticultural Board announced a proposed quarantine on nursery stock and other plants and seeds imported into the United States. On and after June 1, 1919, it is proposed by the Board to exclude all plants and plant materials except two groups, one of which will be admitted without restrictions and regulations and the other with restrictions and regulations. Fruits, vegetables, cereals and other plant products imported for food or manufacturing purposes, and field, flower and vegetable seed will have unrestricted entry, unless on account of some dangerous disease or insect, when there may be issued either a temporary or a permanent quarantine. It is conceivable, for example, that there might be in a foreign country a disease affecting the Lemon, which would make it necessary to quarantine against that country. The Federal Horticultural Board has issued a number of these special quarantines and will no doubt continue to issue them in cases of emergency.

Admitted Under Restrictions

The plants and plant materials that will be allowed to come in under restrictions and regulations are Lily bulbs, Lily of the Valley, Narcissus, Hyacinths, Tulips and Crocus, where such plant materials are not packed in sand or soil and are free from balls of soil. Seeding fruit stocks, cuttings, scions and buds of fruits for propagating will also be admitted under regulations, together with Rose stocks for propagation. All nuts, including Palm seeds, will be admitted, as well as seeds of fruits, forest, ornamental and shade trees, together with seeds of deciduous and ornamental shrubs and seeds of hardy perennial plants and medicinal plants.

Groups of Plants Excluded

Groups that will be automatically excluded include such things as budded and grafted fruit trees; grape vines; bush fruits; forest and ornamental deciduous trees; ornamental deciduous shrubs; coniferous trees, including pines, evergreen trees and shrubs, including the broad leaf types, and a considerable list of what is commonly known as field grown florist stock.

Imports by the Department of Agriculture

The Board makes provision for the importation through the Department of Agriculture of new plants, seeds, bulbs, etc., for experimental and scientific purposes and for propagation in this country. This has been the procedure in the past and will make it practicable to import in limited numbers novelties from all parts of the world under safeguards that will assure their freedom from dangerous diseases and insects.

The machinery for this work is already organized in the Office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction. While it will not be practicable to undertake large, commercial importations for private firms, it will be within the province of the office to handle the necessary limited shipments of novelties that may be brought in for propagation here.

While Lily bulbs, Narcissus, Hyacinths and related bulbs, fruit and Rose stocks will be admitted under regulations, it will doubtless be the policy of the Federal Horticultural Board to exclude these plant materials when it would seem assured that the commercial needs of the country can be met by home grown supplies.

Problem of Stocks for Fruits

The Office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction is primarily interested in the broader constructive problems of stock production in this country and the securing of types of stocks for the principal fruit crops and some of our more important ornamentals like the Rose. It recognizes that the whole question of stocks is a broad and complex one and that much work will need to be done to secure light on the many questions involved.

We are beginning to appreciate more and more that our future successful fruit culture is intimately associated with the problem of stocks. With the exception of the Grape, no far-reaching studies have been made on stocks in this or any other country. We have followed certain empirical practices in the past, but as competition becomes greater and the demand for the highest grades of fruits and plant products increases, we must know more of the actual relation of stocks to quality of product, to the length of life of tree or plant, to adaptability to soil and climate, to resistance to disease and resistance to insect attacks.

Two Problems Involved

The question of stocks would seem to resolve itself into two main problems or groups of problems: (1) The practicability of producing in this country the millions of ordinary Apple, Pear, Plum and Cherry stocks which hitherto have been largely secured abroad; (2) The systematic study of stocks with a view to their improvement and their better adaptability to the wide variety of conditions and needs that exist here and are likely to develop in the future as our great fruit industries become more complex. It is imperative that if our fruit industries are to be maintained there must be full supplies of the usual or ordinary stocks. The securing of special stocks is a long time process and will have to proceed slowly and carefully, building up cautiously on the foundations we already have and must maintain.

Pear growing is not one of our paramount fruit industries, yet it is safe to say that with no other fruit is there a greater proportion of trees lost each year which must be replaced if normal production is to be maintained. Fire blight is the chief cause of the loss of Pear trees in this country. While it is highly desirable to find, or to develop stocks that may in a measure prevent some of the losses to Pear growers from fire blight, the pressing need is to maintain the supplies of French and Japanese seedlings required to keep the number of trees up to normal. If stocks are to be produced in this country to take the place of those hitherto secured abroad, it would seem proper that efforts should be made by the Government to aid those who are eager to know where the work can best be done and how it may be done to the best advantage. The problems involved are so complex that private interests can not well handle them.

Search for Favorable Stock Growing Areas

Briefly then, the chief problems connected with the production of commercial stocks of Apple, Pear, Plum, Cherry and Rose are to find regions and soils in this country where such stocks may be commercially grown and to demonstrate on a commercial scale that such stocks are equal to or better than those grown abroad. We use the word "commercial" here in the sense that the procedure throughout should be such that the results secured may be satisfactorily applied by the trade. Such work as is proposed will need the help and cooperation of the trade. Nurserymen have not been idle in the past in this field. As recently pointed out by Wm. Pitkin and others, nurserymen have tried for years to develop the business of producing fruit tree seedlings but that with the exception of the Apple no material progress has been made. It has been further pointed out that many nurserymen prefer to import French Apple seedlings and pay more for them, believing that thereby they would secure better blocks of better trees.

Correlated with the problem of commercial stock production, is that of securing seeds for stocks. There are no contemplated restrictions, so far as we are aware on the importation of fruit seeds. The restrictions brought about by war conditions and the general situation with respect to seed for stocks show the need for developing our own home supplies. This is a long time proposition, as there are few recognized sources of supply here such as exist in Europe. Altogether the problem of stocks for American fruit growers cannot by any means be regarded as a simple one.

some of the Hypericums. In its native habitat, Texas, it is undoubtedly looked upon as a low growing shrub, in which case it would reach its zenith of usefulness. Gardens south of Washington should make free use of this plant, which would carry the flowering season well into November and December. Its method of propagation is identical with that used for its near neighbors, the blue flowered sorts already mentioned.

Bulletin for Nurserymen

The State of New York, department of Farms and Markets, has issued circular 172 entitled The Inspection, Certification and Transportation of Nursery stock in the United States, New York State other states and Canada corrected to Sept. 1918. It gives brief synopses of the various regulations prepared for transportation companies importers, custom house brokers, dealers and nurserymen. No person in the state of New York should handle or ship nursery stock until he becomes familiar with the provisions of the law relative thereto."

Obituary

E. F. Stoddard

Little we dreamed when we wrote Prof. Stoddard a few months ago for his life's history in order that our readers might know of the man who was ably editing our department of "Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open," that we would be called upon so shortly to print his obituary. But it is all too true. Mr. Stoddard was unable to furnish an article for our issue of Oct. 26, owing to an attack of influenza, he wrote us, and this later turned into pneumonia, from which, after making a brave fight, he succumbed Oct. 23.

E. F. Stoddard had through incessant study and practical work, equipped himself to write on the subject of growing vegetables under glass. Not only did he keep constantly in touch with growers, truckers and market gardeners, visiting their establishments in order to add to his own experience in growing vegetables and knowledge regarding the problems presented, so that the results may be passed on to readers of THE EXCHANGE to aid them in increasing food production, especially during the war, but he was ever in search of the latest information pertaining to his chosen profession.

All his life had been spent in close proximity to the soil. He was born on a farm at Carbondale, Pa., May 14, 1888, and it was here that in early boyhood he learned his first lessons in vegetable growing and also in growing some of the important bush and tree fruits. He attended the town school, and during the Summer vacation worked on his grandfather's general farm in northeastern Pennsylvania, and to get a broader experience when he became a young man he secured employment on two other farms in widely different sections.

After graduating from the Carbondale High School, in 1908, he worked his way through the Pennsylvania State College, graduating from the course in horticulture in 1913. To meet college expenses he worked during one Summer's vacation on a general farm near Syracuse, N. Y., another at the establishment of Barnes Bros., Yalesville, Conn., nurserymen and orchardists, and a third Summer vacation period was spent on W. Atlee Burpee Co.'s Fordhook Trial Grounds, near Doylestown, Pa., where he had an excellent opportunity to study varieties and types of vegetables.

At Pennsylvania State College he became much interested in vegetable forcing, and worked one full forcing season (1911-1912) on different kinds of vegetables.

After graduating, in 1913, Prof. Stoddard was appointed instructor in horticulture at the North Carolina State College, where he had charge of the outdoor work in vegetable gardening on about 12 acres, part of which was used for student work; in addition, he had charge of the vegetable forcing in the greenhouse. In 1915, he was appointed head of the Department of Vegetable Gardening at Maryland State College, and the following year was advanced to the position of Professor of Vegetable Gardening, which position he held at his death.

Here about seven acres of land are used for vegetable growing, and three greenhouses for vegetable forcing.

At present there are about 40 sash on hotbeds and coldframes, but the equipment is increasing. The most important forcing crops are grown each year, and small amounts of other vegetables are tried out for forcing crops. In the past two years Prof. Stoddard had been growing certain vegetables in the greenhouses without artificial heat, to find out what could be done in view of a fuel shortage.

Prof. Stoddard took an earnest interest in furthering exhibitions and the welfare of all connected with the business, and for two years had acted as superintendent of the vegetable exhibits made during Maryland Show Week at Baltimore, Md., also filling the position of secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Vegetable Growers' Association. At the college Prof. Stoddard aimed to give the students not only the scientific side of the work, but also the kind of actual practical experience they needed for the production of commercial vegetable crops under glass and outdoors.

Shortly after graduating from Pennsylvania State College in 1913 he was married to Elizabeth Archibald Summy of Philadelphia. He was actively connected with the First Presbyterian Church of Hyattsville, Md., of which he was treasurer of the Board of Trustees and a deacon. He was also much interested in the work of the Sunday School and was teacher of the college student class. Mr. Stoddard was a man of sterling Christian character and was deeply interested both in his work and in the promotion of every good cause in his town. He was widely known and highly esteemed by his many friends and coworkers, and will be sadly missed. The sympathy of all goes out to his wife and two small children, his mother and father, three brothers and two sisters. Funeral services were held at the family residence at Hyattsville, Saturday morning, Oct. 26, at 11 o'clock. Interment took place at Beltsville, Md.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

W. P. Pierce, Jr., of New Bedford, Mass., is recovering well from a gas attack at the Front.

Fred Reynolds, of Peter Murray's, at New Bedford, Mass., has left for a Southern camp in the U. S. Army.

Carl Harrschman, son of the proprietor of the Boulder Greenhouses, Boulder, Colo., is at Camp Meade.

James Foley, son of Phil. Foley, of the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, has enlisted in the Quartermasters Department of the Army.

Adam Graham, of Cleveland, Ohio, is in the Government tank service at Gambier, Ohio. He has been seriously ill but has recovered.

John Wittbold, eldest son of Louis Wittbold, of Chicago, is at Lake Charles, La., having been accepted for ground work in the Aviation Department.

E. J. Cook, a returned soldier, has again taken his place in the Dillemuth store, Toronto, Ont. Before leaving for France he had been with this concern for five years.

Raymond Ziska, of J. Ziska & Sons, Chicago, Ill., wire work manufacturers for the florists' trade, left last week for camp at Waco, Texas, having been called for military service.

Philip Darnell, youngest son of L. F. Darnell, formerly of the J. M. Gasser Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, has been commissioned second lieutenant and is now instructing recruits at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Ernest Peterkin, a veteran of the Boer War and who has been fighting with the Canadians at Cambrai recently, is in a hospital in France, suffering from a gunshot wound in his left thigh. He is the son of A. G. Peterkin, retired veteran proofreader on THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE.

Paul K. Murphy, of Lancaster, Pa., writes home: "With all the open ground around me, why should a shell drop on the little spot I cover?" This might be good philosophy for some of us who think we are having so much trouble.

ALBERT M. HERR.

We are sorry to learn that Corp. Wm. A. Zirkman, son of Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was gassed and is in a hospital in Paris. He is said to be recovering, however. He was trained at Camp Hancock and went across in May.

Alphonse Rigo, whose portrait is shown herewith, is a member of the firm of Rigo Bros., retail florists, Madison ave., at 68th st., New York City. Private Rigo is now attached to Brigade Headquarters in France. The picture was taken soon after he came out of his third battle, namely, that for the St. Mihiel salient, in which he took part.

Harry A. Bunyard, who is in the Overseas Y. M. C. A. while waiting for his passport, has been editing "The Kit Bag," a one sheet mimeographed paper for his corps. Recently it made its appearance with doubtless one of Harry's artistic conceptions at its head, a real kit bag, done up in two colors, and profusely labeled. Of the first issue with this new heading Harry writes: "THE NEW KIT. The 'Y' men scrambled for the new Kit Bag last night and cried for it like children for 'Castoria.' We cannot but feel flattered at its initial and kind reception. Thanks."

"A glorious death is his
Who for his country falls."

We regret to learn that Geo. Fehrmann, son of Chas. Fehrmann, Chicago florist, died of pneumonia at an army camp in Alabama on Oct. 14, aged 28 years. The funeral was held from his late residence on Oct. 21, with interment at Montrose Cemetery.

Florist Sees French Gardens

You know I have never been very keen on the standardized types of gardens, the so called Italian gardens, colonial gardens, etc. After seeing a good many gardens in central and southern France I am now sure that the only true French garden is one laid out by a Frenchman. I can see no set type.

These French gardens come nearer to being an expression of the individuality of the planter than any gardens I have heretofore seen. One can see individuality and character in every garden, because the Frenchman loves beauty, he loves color, and he has an artist's facility of expression. His garden is not chosen from a book of "garden plans." Nor is it laid out by a nurseryman who desires to dispose of surplus stocks. He loves his garden, and he plans it himself, every plant of it; and as he grows his garden grows with him. A plant isn't put here or there because it "ought to go there," but because the planter can, in this way, express a certain instinct that he feels for color or for beauty. Perhaps this reads like imitation highbrow stuff; but I am just trying to give you the impression that these French gardens have left with me. The color combinations are often little short of marvelous. In the Alphonse Rigo. See text.

South of France many gardens are a riot of color that is very striking but still not discordant.

There are a few ideas to which your Frenchman seems to be particularly partial. For instance, he likes a woodland spot somewhere in the grounds, with a small stream running through it, which, as it emerges from the "forest" swells into a small, irregular pond in the "meadow." Of course, this is not always possible, but some will do a great deal to get this result. It gives a touch of rustic beauty for a background, as well as makes a place to plant Water Lilies, Iris, etc. But at that, one does not notice any signs of "copy cat" in their gardens. Taking it all around, every French garden has its own particular interest and beauty, depending on the personality of Monsieur or Madame (I have not yet found out which). For their building I can not say as much.

For all their love of flowers I am surprised to see so few flowers in the cemeteries. Near the "front" it is not to be expected; but this is also true away from the war zone. Where flowers are planted on the graves you will see everything from Calendulas to Iris. Artificial flowers are mainly used for funeral work, usually being made of colored beads, very fantastic designs in all colors. A combination of green and a peculiar shade of violet, with touches of red and yellow to set it off, is the predominant combination. It beats me how they do it without getting cross-eyed.

Toronto, Ont. Canada

The Toronto florists are worried by lack of stock; early closing has become the regular order. The shortage of stock has never been so acute before in the history of the floral industry in Toronto, and this, combined with the unprecedented demand, has driven the florists to use whatever wild flowers they could obtain in wreaths, etc.

The West End Florist has moved from Ossington ave. to 2192 Dundas st. west. Mrs. Mobach of this store is suffering from the influenza.

Mrs. Percy Waters and Miss Gaffikin are also ill.

So many members of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club are ill that a committee, consisting of Messrs. Parker, Hatcher and Carter have been appointed to see what can be done to help them and send each a basket of fruit with the compliments of the club. Mr. Lewis was appointed to act with Mr. Parker in selecting a box to send to Mr. Hill, a former secretary, who is now in service in France.

Final arrangements have been made for the 'Mum show on Nov. 8 and 9. The growers are cooperating and a big show is assured. The necessary blotters, stickers, posters, etc., have been printed and are now being mailed to members.

H. G. Dillemuth is busy at the greenhouses. Some fine 'Mums and other flowers are being cut. He expects to have a plentiful supply for the Fall trade. E. J. Cooke, a returned soldier has again taken his place in the Dillemuth store. Before going to France Mr. Cooke was five years with Mr. Dillemuth. Mr. Dillemuth recently redecorated his store.

Tidy & Son have been working night and day filling orders. There has been an unprecedented demand for flowers and orders have been coming in from all over Ontario.

J. J. Higgins, Limited, has redecorated its Yonge st. store.

George Yarner, Arcade Florist, is in the General Hospital, suffering with pneumonia. During his absence S. Henderson, formerly of A. M. Terrill, Limited, florists, Calgary, is in charge.

Lloyd Whitmore, motor driver for the wholesale department of Dunlop's, died on Oct. 27.

G. W. Warren, formerly manager of the floral department of the T. Eaton Co., Limited, opened up a retail store at 535 Bloor st. west last July. Since then there has been a steady increase in custom. He is now planning an extension which will double the size of the store and give him larger display areas. He has had several novel windows lately, one being a model from a lady's dress goods store as the central figure to advertise corsage bouquets. Another had an urn in the center to draw attention to the beautiful ferns displayed.

Retail Florists to Organize?

There is an animated agitation for the formation of a Dominion-wide florists' association. The retail florists feel that the Canadian Hort. Ass'n is not close enough to the trade and that a new association would be of very great benefit. Mr. Geraghty of Dunlop's is enthusiastic over the formation of the new association and proposes to have steps taken to have a large representation at the next convention of the C. H. A., which will be held in Toronto, to discuss the question.

George Geraghty of Dunlop's is ill with influenza; also his staff, including Edward Gale. Mr. Dunlop had taken charge and obtained such help as he could. When THE EXCHANGE correspondent called there were at least 40 wreath forms laid out to be decorated. With the help of some of the florists most of these orders were gotten out on time.

Portland, Ore.

The shortage of flowers prevalent the country over is keenly felt here also. Flowers of all kinds are scarce, and for once florists are willing that frost should lay off so the Dahlias may offer some measure of relief. Country florists are in a bad way as they take orders looking to the Portland market for their supply. When unable to produce we have the unpleasant experience of explaining matters. The local crop of 'Mums is inadequate and the California price has stiffened up considerably so that 'Mums command a good price from $2.50 to $6 per doz. retail. Carnations are retailing at $1 per doz., but are not nearly in sufficient supply. Roses, although in good crop, vanish as if by magic. Every flower finds a useful place. The cause of this to a great extent is the wave of influenza, but even the demand for flowers is larger and all indications point to a better season for both grower and retailer.

The closing of the theaters and all public meeting places has had no effect on the flower business. No attention has been paid by the trade to the council of defense order.

The Dahlia has been put to real test this year. The Mastic Dahlias grown by M. G. Tyler have been exceptionally fine this year. One that is especially useful is the Cosmos Dahlia coming in yellow, pink, white and various other colors useful for cut flowers and design work. The firm has produced many new forms. Mr. Mastic, the hybridizer, has many new varieties to his credit. One given a certificate of merit was Fantastic, a maroon and white mottled. The firm has a lot of faith in the new Holland Dahlias as cut flowers. An exceptionally fine season has been enjoyed by Dahlia growers.

The influenza caused the Floral Society to pass by its October meeting.

Everyone reports business as excellent.

The Oyster Bay Hort. Society held its annual Fall show on Oct. 9 and 10. The principal exhibitors and prizewinners were James Dutbie, supt. to E. M. Townsend, George H. Hale, supt. to H. S. Shonnard, John Sorosick, supt. to John Garver, John Devine, supt. to James A. Blair, James Duckham, supt. to E. F. Whitney, Alfred Walker, supt. to Howard C. Smith, Archie Andrews, supt. to F. D. M. Strachan, Michael O'Neill, supt. to Albert Strauss, Arthur Patton, supt. to Mrs. T. S. Young and John McCulloch, supt. to Guernsey Curran, all of Oyster Bay. Also Frank Gale, supt. to Mrs. D. A. Loring, Jos. Marmarole, supt. to G. M. Cravath, Locust Valley, Frank Petroccia, supt. to Irving Cox of Millneck and Arthur Yanuchi, gardener to W. A. Delano of Syosset, N. Y.

The display was a creditable one, considering conditions, and competition was keen in a number of classes.

The judges were James Kirby of Huntington, and Alex. McKenzie and Alex. Michie. The proceeds of the show are to be given to the Y. M. C. A. and kindred societies. G. H. HALE, Sec'y.

Westchester (N. Y.) and Fairfield (Conn.) Horticultural Society

At the regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Soc., held in Hubbard's Hall, Greenwich, Conn., Oct. 11, one new member was elected and three propositions received. Several friends were present, including a delegation from the Tarrytown Hort. Soc. Among the fine display of flowers, fruit and vegetables was a fine display of the new Raspberry, La France, John Scheepers, Inc., N. Y.—a large dish of the fruit which every one tasted and pronounced excellent. Several canes heavily laden with fruit were also displayed. The variety was awarded a certificate of merit. Speeches were made by George McIntosh, pres. of the Tarrytown Hort. Soc., E. W. Newbrand, W. C. Russell, Harry Jones, Thomas Glen and George Strange. M. C. Ebel sec. of the N. A. G. spoke on the supply of coal for private greenhouses and said he had Mr. Gude of Washington take the matter up with the Federal Fuel Administration. John D. Wilson gave several selections on the violin and Mr. Russell of Tarrytown entertained with songs. At the close W. J. Seeley auctioned off several exhibits for $143, the proceeds to go to the smoke fund for our Soldier members. The judges were Messrs. Newbrand, Russell, Jamison and McIntosh, all of Tarrytown. The exhibition was under the management of James Stuart. Light refreshments were served. Our next meeting will be on Friday, Nov. 8. There will be classes for 'Mums. Novelties will be welcomed from introducers.

1261 F. T. D. DOLLARS

A Story about "The Florist across the depot" who got so in the habit counting pennies in a wooden drawer that the thought of ringing up dollars on a cash register made him dizzy.

By The Man Who Laughs

"I wish to heavens that that fellow Pochelon would mind his own business and let me alone without everlastingly bothering me about that new wrinkle of telegraphing flowers. They can't get any of my money." With that remark another bunch of advertising went into the waste basket. This happened in the Spring of '13, in a Northern Illinois town of about 4000.

You really couldn't call him anything else but progressive, for he had started in business a few years ago with hardly anything more than a lot of nerve. He had built up a nice greenhouse establishment just outside the town limits, and quite an attractive nursery. Even that, however, he didn't consider sufficient to keep him going, so he opened a neat store "uptown," as he called it, across the way from the depot, and where the new interurban cars passed the door. However, having been "fortunate" enough several times to be let in on the ground floor by some very intimate friends on mining and oil stocks, he fought shy of anything new originating from others, or of an outsider offering suggestions of a money-making kind.

Things went along nicely. Aster time had come once more. Business wasn't exactly rushing, but in spite of that, he and Maggie kept going. He had just removed the little leaflets from the stems of the Asters which had not been sold the week previous and was just putting another vase of them in the cooler when a lady stepped into the store and inquired whether he could fill an order for flowers to be delivered that afternoon in Washington, D. C. Well, he had heard of several florists out there, but he was very much in doubt whether they had heard of him and under the circumstances, as much as he would like to accommodate her, perhaps it would be best if she did go to Chicago and have the order attended to there.

He would never have thought anything more about the matter had it not been for the fact that a couple of weeks afterwards, while at the wholesaler's in Chicago he met the very man who had filled the lady's order, which amounted to $2.65, including the despatch. Now he was more than ever convinced that the other fellow was entitled to all the profit there was in those so-called telegraph orders; they could not catch him with any $5 or $10 initiation fee and perhaps yearly dues of $10 more, for a $2.65 order once a year in return. He was just a little too smart for that.

So things went along again, business about the same; a little to do every day. One morning Maggie called him up from the store and wanted to know what to do. An order had come in from Cleveland by telegraph for a $3 box of flowers for Mrs. Jones. Aha! We can land them without paying dues to someone doing nothing but mailing advertisements from Detroit. But as that order was the only one of its kind that Fall, it was soon forgotten and again things went along as usual until one day something happened that upset the whole town.

The school principal, who had faithfully served the community for 22 years, had died, away out East, near Yonkers, N. Y., while paying his folks a visit. No one knew yet when the body would arrive, but everyone was worked up. They put the flag near the town hall at half mast and the school was ordered closed for three days; no one knew exactly by whose orders, but the kids obeyed them just the same. A few out of each grade took up a collection for a flower blanket and got $85.75 together; the teachers and the Parents' Association made up $35 for one of those rich looking Magnolia leaf wreaths with a ribbon; the trustees of the school didn't want to be outdone and chipped in ten apiece for a broken column and a committee of three had been appointed and its members were just putting on their fedoras to go over in a body to the home town florist across the way from the depot and leave all these orders when the door opened and that same lady who wanted the flowers sent to Washington, D. C., stepped in with a telegram saying that the funeral would be held in the East. She offered her services in placing the order for the flowers with that Chicago florist who had done so well with her the last time. That surely was a nice thing for her to do, and as there wasn't a single one in the hall who had ever heard of being able to send flowers by telegraph, everyone present considered that she knew a great deal in being able to accomplish this.

In all, including a number of orders from friends and neighbors, someone in New York City had a $246 order wished on him, with tokens of respect and sympathy from the good people of the town, yet the "florist across from the depot" never realized that anything unusual was going on; he had stocked up with Killarneys, Cycas leaves, Chenille, toothpicks, a dove and common ferns, but not a single order came his way.

Joins the F. T. D.

The Western Union agent had no business to do it, but he simply couldn't help dropping in towards evening and mentioning the $246 order he had heard about, and he thought that some of that money really ought to have been left in the town.

"Maggie," asked the florist, "did you see anything of a large envelope, a letter from Detroit? It came last week and I threw it with some unopened florist's papers on the work bench." Maggie found the letter and in a week the "florist across from the depot" was a full fledged member of the F. T. D.

What a relief! Maybe it would have been better after all had he joined sooner, but then it wasn't too late yet. He was waiting for the next revised list to come out with his name on it. Everybody in the trade by this time surely knew that he belonged to the F. T. D. and as he glanced over an old list of the names of members he found those of some of the best known men in the business. Yes, there was some satisfaction in having his name among them.

He wondered who would send the first order to him. And for whom would it be? He called up the store every morning early for the first ten days and inquired if there were any telegraph orders in. He sent the Western Union office word that in case any orders came by wire to let him know directly, and he called up again in a few days asking if there wasn't something the matter with the wires. Then he inquired from "information" at the telephone office whether they had received any orders for him, but, strangely, no orders came; regardless of his watching and waiting, not a sign of an order. As if that wasn't enough, he had it "rubbed in" by having an order come in for the rental of ten Palms and arranging the same for a wedding ceremony, but the bride's and the bridesmaid's bouquets, the table decorations and the flowers for the mantel had all come from Chicago, and there were boxes of flowers sent from other out of town florists. No one could tell him that some of these at least, perhaps all, belonged to the F. T. D. and these, orders, therefore, all rightfully belonged to him. What kind of treatment did you call that? What was the use of belonging to such a bunch? It was discouraging, to say the least.

Once more things went along, this time not quite so smoothly. He was bitter. It was a rainy Monday besides and there hadn't been a soul in the store all day. The only ring on the 'phone had come from the iceman, who had to meet a note before the bank closed.

That afternoon when the 3:20 Northbound train pulled in, there stepped from it a man with two large suit cases. He made straight for the store and introduced himself as the representative of a Philadelphia house, with the latest novelties in the florist's supply line. When, a little later, it came out that he had sold a lot of stock at Detroit, Mich., that settled the matter.

The florist let loose. He related all his troubles, real and imaginary, and that he hadn't received a single telegraph order yet, after belonging to the F. T. D. for almost eight months. "My dear boy," said the salesman, "If you belong to the Florist Telegraph Delivery, why keep it a secret? The trouble doesn't lie with Pochelon but with yourself. He has rendered you a great service in taking up his valuable time in hammering away at you to join and when he finally lands you, what do you do, but sit there with folded hands, holding your breath, waiting for something to happen; waiting for people to break their necks getting into your store to pile telegraph orders on your desk. You expect your customers to be mind readers. You expect them to imagine you're awake. You have got so in the habit counting pennies in your wooden drawer that it would make you dizzy if you had to ring up dollars on a cash register. You stopped growing long ago; you can't even follow; they are just dragging you along in spite of your best efforts to keep on standing still; that's why you are finding fault. People patronize you because there is no one else in the neighborhood; otherwise the town is dead because you are. They let you furnish those Palms for the same reason and because you are cheap, but for the wedding bouquet and other flowers they needed an up-to-date man, one of those who follow Pochelon; a "live wire;" men who do things; men who not only belong to such a progressive organization as the F. T. D., but who shove, push and advertise; who let people know about it and what they are doing; their heart and soul are in their business. They don't envy the other fellow because he is successful; the unsuccessful one is not an asset to the association. They want live men everywhere as representatives, not dead timber like yourself. Wake up! Put back those lights you took out of your window because times were dull; put them back and add more to them. Let 'em know you are a real telegraph florist and not only a pole with dead wires on its arms. If you really want some good out of the F. T. D. go and get it; it is up to you and you alone. Get out into the light; think, work, serve promptly, smilingly and decently and let go of some of that bank roll for advertising. Good-bye."

He Sees the Light

Well, the sun came out early Tuesday morning and with it the "florist across from the depot." After lying awake all night he got busy, awfully busy making a noise about the F. T. D. and he kept it up. It is enough to say that from telegraph orders amounting to $14 in 1914 he worked and hammered away and brought the business done by telegraph, out-of-town telephone and mail orders up to $1261 for the year 1917.

What is Needed

And so can you, Brother. Maybe you don't belong to the E. T. D. yet, or perhaps you do but are only

PILLSBURY'S CARNATION STAPLE

Filling telegraph orders from distant cities was formerly "a consummation devoutly to be wished." Today it is one of the most profitable branches of the retail business. That is why there are so many cards in our Directory of Reliable Retailers a dead wire; you pay your dues, which really doesn't interest your customers and once in a while you are asked to fill an order, but that is as far as it goes. You may even need two delivery cars to conduct your business with, but what of that, when you really should have work for five of them? Listen. Through the F. T. D. many thousands of dollars worth of business is being done annually, which wouldn't be done otherwise, but it is still at the beginning and is nothing compared with what will be done, but we need workers. It takes time to educate the public for as yet only a comparatively few people realize that they can "Say it with Flowers" by telegraph. But what is really of far greater importance is to educate the florist and make him see the great benefits which can be derived from pushing the issue.

It is absolutely necessary to have a progressive, up-to-date and reliable representative of the association in every town with a population of three, four or five thousand, every representative doing his bit and a little more in the way of advertising, and keeping it up everlastingly, so that every human being in the town will know about being able to send flowers by telegraph and how easy it is to do, not only that, but to convince those who give it a trial that their orders are filled satisfactorily, would bring about wonderful results.

F. T. D. members in the larger towns and cities alone can't make the undertaking a success, for it is every bit as likely to happen that an order is given in New York City to be delivered in Ashland, Ore., as that an order is given in Ashland for delivery in New York. Only when a reliable man is at each end of the telegraph line can orders be filled to the satisfaction of all concerned. The large florist in the big city may be obliged to send his order for delivery in a small town to the florist there, even if the latter isn't a member but you can depend upon it that if an F. T. D. florist is listed for that town he will get the order, and so he should.

When you join the F. T. D. you at the same time establish a prestige which you could not obtain in any other way. No matter where you are located or how large your order may be, and even if it is sent to any of the largest firms in the country; everywhere, East, West, North or South or in Canada, even people who have never had any dealings with you before will fill your orders and will be perfectly willing to trust you. Can you realize the value to you of your customers' knowledge of this fact?

It is surely worth your while to do everything possible to encourage the doing of business by telegraph, by which in a few words you are told what is wanted and are sure that you will be paid for your services in a few days.

Larger Membership, Greater Benefits for All

The more members the association has the greater the benefits to each member. Not that alone, for what is every bit as important is to have the membership distributed among the greatest number of cities and towns. That makes for the greatest efficiency and it is with this aim that this article is written, its object being to get more members, more links to the present chain.

The Florist Telegraph Delivery Ass'n. is not a one man's affair or something from which just a few reap the benefits. Quite the opposite; the greater the membership the more efficient the service and the greater the individual benefits. It is up to you and me to do our part and thereby follow the example set by the officers.

In conclusion, let me say that the little story about the "florist accross from the depot" is a true one. He was progressive up to the time he joined, but stood still after that until the salesman with the two suit cases full of novelties dropped in and hit him "until the bell rang" and thereby started him on his way. All that the florist could see after that was F. T. D., wherever he looked and he made others see the same thing. The home paper had it in every weekly issue, the movie theatre, both on the east and west side of the track showed one slide after another, each more effective than the last. No Easter, Spring, Fall or Christmas folder went out by mail without a reminder about the F. T. D.; so also with the monthly statements. There were attractive posters in the depot, in the hotel and in the golf club, fine window displays, etc. You may say that a man is not justified in going to so great an expense and doing only about $1200 worth of business as a result, but $1200 worth means a great deal in a town of about 6000. But that isn't really all. Filling these orders properly means more business and new customers. There's no better way to land a second order than to fill the first one right.

The florist is getting his customers in the town into the habit of sending flowers to their friends and relatives many miles away and it is up to you and others to get those people interested so they will do the

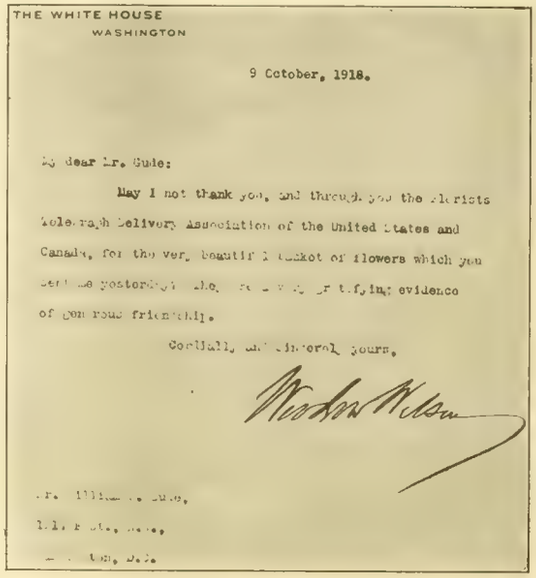
President Wilson Expresses His Appreciation

The accompanying is a photographic reproduction of the letter sent to Mr. Gude from the White House. As previously related in THE EXCHANGE the F. T. D. during its recent meeting sent a basket of flowers to President and Mrs. Wilson, Mr. Gude's message to Gude Bros. Co., Washington, dated Oct. 7, reading as follows: Tuesday morning, 9 a.m., handsome floral offering President and Mrs. Wilson. Card: "The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association of the United States and Canada, at their business session at Cleveland can find no better way of sending their respects and appreciation than to 'Say it with Flowers.'" That President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson were highly pleased is shown by the President's appreciative letter.



THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

9 October, 1918.

My dear Mr. Gude:

May I not thank you, and through you the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association of the United States and Canada, for the very beautiful basket of flowers which you sent me yesterday? The [illegible] of this fine evidence of your kind friendship.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

In Explanation of a Belated Telegram

An incident that would have added, if such was possible, to the enthusiasm of the recent F. T. D. convention at Cleveland was the joining up of the Miller Floral Co. of Salt Lake City, by telegraph. Unfortunately Mr. Pochelon did not receive the telegram until after the meeting had closed. It read as follows.

Salt Lake, Utah, Oct. 8, 1918.

ALBERT POCHELON, Secretary Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n., Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, O.

Heartiest greetings to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n. from The Miller Floral Co., the Home of Flowers, 10 East Broadway, Salt Lake City, Utah. Herewith telegraph money order for $45 as per your recent letter. Signed application en route. Both Mr. Miller and myself are members of the Society of American Florists and we keenly regret being unable to attend the F. T. D. meeting in Cleveland. Wire us, collect, your acceptance of our application. Yours for success and progress,

MILLER FLORAL CO.
Robert Newcomb, Retail Store Manager.

In his reply Mr. Pochelon assured the Miller Floral Co. that the name had been added to the F. T. D. Membership list and was being made public in every kay, including this voluntary publication in THE EXCHANGE.

F. T. D. Service

As a general rule, the value of an article is in proportion to the price, but there are conditions where the value may be so much greater than the price that the cost becomes a negligible factor. So should the foregoing apply to the service one renders in the development of Florist Telegraph Delivery.

Echoes of the F. T. D. Meeting

What a thrill of pleasure came over me upon entering the Convention Hall at the Hotel Hollenden to see the progress of florists' advertising as the chief factor in an exhibit that went all around the room! I venture to say that the interest of that display will go a long way towards helping others to get started in the same direction. A great deal of credit is due Herman Knoble who must have labored untiringly to get it up in such good shape. It would have done credit to an ad men's convention.

The beautiful decoration of the hall itself in flags bunting, palms, huge baskets of Roses, etc., was surely appreciated by all present and helped to make our convention snappy right from the start.

The loyalty and team work of the Cleveland boys as a whole—what a fine example for emulation and for other cities to copy! It surely was food for thought of the value of cooperation and the immense good attained; for to the credit of the Cleveland boys was the F. T. D. meeting a complete success. Those present will appreciate the effort made in this direction led by Fred Brown who opened the convention. The meeting, while not as large in attendance as in previous years, held the attention of most of those present who went away well repaid for their attendance.

Heroes' Mound at Highland Park, Brooklyn, N. Y.

This was executed and the labor and material donated by Frank J. Reppa, florist at 19 N. Vermont st., Brooklyn, for Heroes' Day, September 1

The Canadian florists were well represented and entered into the discussion, freely showing their intense interest and progressiveness in making such a good showing for the number who belong to the F. T. D.

The program was highly interesting. This branch of the business is becoming such an important factor that it seems hardly possible to understand how a florist can not afford to affiliate and join immediately. The benefits are too numerous to mention and those who join will only then realize what they have overlooked. There is no affiliation that I prize more highly than the F. T. D., hence this expression to what was a most successful meeting which will merit its own reward.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

"It Couldn't Be Done"

Somebody said it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied
That maybe it couldn't, but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he tried.
So he buckled right in, with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried, he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.
Somebody scoffed "Oh, you'll never do that;
At least no one has ever done it."
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew, he'd begun it;
With a lift of his chin, and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quit it,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.
There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done;
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you;
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That cannot be done, and you'll do it.
Edgar A. Guest.

How well the above poem illustrates the work of our publicity campaign. Many in the craft felt this was not the proper time, and others with true optimism felt otherwise. How far we have succeeded in our effort will be the keynote of ultimate success. Let us keep the ball rolling in the attempt to get more funds to keep it up, because we can only derive the benefits of our national advertising by keeping up that which we have only just begun. Are we going to allow ourselves to believe it couldn't be done, and lie down, now, after we have made such a noble start?

The answer will be in your efforts toward contributing to the campaign fund, and by sending same to John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York, thereby feeling that you have at least done your duty. We need more money to complete our campaign. Will you help?

HENRY PENN, National Publicity Campaign.

In a recent issue a California lady took up an old grievance, handling it with great skill, viz.: the point where the split comes in between those who look upon flowers as useless and those who look upon them as of the highest appeal to our finer sentiments, making for good men and good women, honesty, uprightness and a finer and more endurable sense of all that makes life worth living. In this particular instance the intended memorials of flowers at a notable funeral were turned into gifts of books for the soldiers, in itself a most worthy consummation, but the point at issue is the fact that the California editor, in order to assist him in his contention endeavored to place on flowers the stigma of being useless, although he admitted they were beautiful, an argument which brought the condemnation of this California woman to the point where she exclaims: "Boost, if you wish to keep the home fires burning! (Keep your flowers before the public if you intend to make a living.) Who will send this editor a booster's club pin in exchange for his hammer?"

By way of diversion—A circus booked a date at Hodge to please the rural hordes. "The Greatest Show on Earth" it was, according to the boards. "Colossal" was the word they used describing the parade. They said it was "The greatest show put out in a decade." The papers told of special trains and clowns, in all two score. They said the big menagerie had ninety dens or more. Likewise, four rings were promised, and the tent just couldn't leak. The adjectives the agents used grew stronger ev'ry week. The circus came and showed at Hodge. It had a single train Two rings were all, and twenty dens, and gosh, how it did rain! Ten thousand people saw the show, and liked it too, by jing! And when it came around again they did the same blamed thing.—Credit Lost.

People are usually willing to do their duty, but they do not like to do too much of it.

Toledo, O.

This city is steadily recovering from a comparatively mild epidemic of Spanish influenza, thanks in great part to the prompt, courageous and efficient methods used by the mayor and the local health authorities. Florists naturally were kept on the jump despite the fact that public funerals came under the ban. Funeral work has been in constant demand and to the great relief of the craft the market has eased up considerably and stock is plentiful enough to take care of all orders. Several local growers have relieved the situation greatly by splendid crops of early 'Mums while Roses and even Carnations came into the market in encouraging quantity.

Gathered Here and There

George Bayer, King of the Bonnaffons as he is known hereabouts, is nursing along fine 'Mums which will soon be in all their glory. The president of the Florists' Club has achieved a reputation in the growing of these favorite Autumn flowers and his product is eagerly snapped up by buyers throughout the country.

Tom Magee of the Scottwood Greenhouse is sending out a beautiful folder inviting the public to see his annual Fall flower show, an event always eagerly looked forward to by his patrons. He reports a tremendous demand for funeral work during the last two weeks.

Some local florists are just becoming aware that there is a national campaign for advertising flowers because the slogan, "Say It With Flowers" is beginning to appear more regularly in ads. It is lamentable that florists are not more generally wide awake to the vital necessities of their business. No national campaign like this can be of adequate benefit unless the retailers immediately tie up locally with it. Having seen a national ad what would a customer think when he found that his local florist not only does not know there is such a campaign but is not even interested enough to purchase the beautiful glass sign reproducing the national slogan. Judicious publicity is more necessary now than at any other time if florists are to counteract the campaign to buy only useful gifts. Shall we allow the impression to prevail that flowers are not useful or essential? The present epidemic has proved they are essential when friends who cannot visit the sick may bring such cheer to the sick room. Without organization little can be accomplished, as this national advertising campaign is the result of organization, it is the positive duty of every retailer and grower to support it to the extent of his full ability.

John Barrow and Son have had the greatest demand for funeral work of their long career. Due to the Government order limiting the coal supply they have been forced to discontinue some of their houses. They were large growers and before the war were constantly making additions and enlarging their plant.

F. M. S.

Cleveland, O.

It is an unusual thing for florists to complain of fatigue due to prolonged stretches of work, other than at holiday times. But such has been the condition with the majority of Cleveland florists during the greater part of October. The increased death rate due to the epidemic was the cause. With a supply of stock below normal, the precious flowers were literally grabbed up in the wholesale houses, and retailers were put to their wit's end to fill orders. Many had to be refused. The experience will long be remembered.

Oct. 26 saw the time of great scarcity ended by the arrival of copious quantities of outdoor Chrysanthemums in addition to heavy receipts of greenhouse 'Mums. Carnations are coming in slowly as the growers are conserving coal during the mild weather. Some fine Roses are being offered and clean up early in the day at good prices. A few Dahlias are being consigned but the crop is practically over. Well, indeed, did that old fashioned flower save the day for the florist this Fall!

Eastern Violets are of excellent quality for the time of year. Valley is again among the scarce items and brings $8 per 100. Receipts of Cattleyas are extremely light, likewise Oncidiums. Adiantum is scarce and much more good Asparagus could be readily sold. There is a strong demand for Boxwood. Leucothoe, Galax and Mexican Ivy.

October Business

It is generally agreed that sales for the month just closed have broken all previous records, in spite of the fact that business was circumscribed by the pronounced shortage of stock. Trade was mainly sustained by the increased volume of funeral orders. While early frosts killed the softer outdoor crops beyond the saving influence of the lake, growers near the shore realized for the first time in years a goodly return for practically everything sent to the market. Materially higher prices, both wholesale and retail, prevailed. Sales of foliage plants, ferns and accessories were liberal. Trained help is decidedly scarce, every florist being more or less handicapped in this respect. A full supply of stock is anticipated in November but in the month following the effect of the fuel curtailment will be seriously felt.

Florists' Club and Trade Notes

Philip Darnell, youngest son of L. F. Darnell, formerly of the J. M. Gasser Co., has been commissioned second lieutenant and is now engaged instructing recruits at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Chas. J. Graham has returned from Gambier, Ohio, whither he had been called by the illness of his son Adam, who is in the Government tank service school there. The young man was seriously ill, but has now recovered.

Alexius Von Quiram, proprietor of the Heights Floral Co., has been confined to his home by illness for several days.

The November meeting of the Florists' Club was scheduled for Nov. 4, at the Hollenden. The meeting will have to be postponed, however, if the present ban upon indoor gatherings is not lifted by that time.

Gus Lorenz, for many years employed by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., and who opened a retail store in the suburb of Brooklyn about a year ago, died Oct. 24, after a brief illness with double pneumonia.

J. McL.

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are in a fair supply that is slightly larger than it was at last writing. Carnations are still somewhat scarce. 'Mums have become plentiful. The receipts in this flower are so large that the market for them is easy and prices have shaded. It will take a killing frost sufficient to kill off the outdoor flowers coming into the market to make the market for 'Mums firm again. Easter Lilies are again available. Dahlia receipts continue heavy and with the exception of some of the red ones still sell fairly well. Cosmos continues plentiful. Single Violets sell briskly. The first Fall Sweet Peas have made their appearance.

Christmas Fund for the Soldiers

A committee headed by C. J. Jones as chairman and Miss Laura Murphy, secretary-treasurer, is soliciting subscriptions from the local florists to a fund for Christmas presents for the boys of Cincinnati and vicinity who are in the service of the country. It is proposed to divide the fund among all of them, share and share alike, and to send a money order to each, allowing the recipient to purchase what he pleases with the Yuletide remembrance. All contributions should be in the secretary's hands not later than Nov. 20. The florists of Cincinnati and vicinity are requested by the committee to send in the names of all the trade's representatives in the military service from this vicinity to Miss Murphy, at 329 Main st.

TEDDY.

St. Louis, Mo.

The market has been influenced by the mild weather and also by the fact that there have been no social gatherings. Thus business consisted almost entirely of funeral work; of which there has been an abundance. The Dahlia market has been prolonged by the absence of frost and Dahlias have had a brisk demand, owing to the scarcity of Carnations, which have been selling at 4c. to 6c., in a few instances, for very fancy stock, 8c apiece. Roses at the time of writing are getting more plentiful and 'Mums are arriving. Roses in general are quoted at from 3c to 6c. Pres. Chas. Young expects good trade this season.

The St. Louis Seed Co. will be ready with a full supply of imported bulbs this coming week, the firm's importations having arrived safely.

Russells bring 4c. to 25c. for fancies. Am. Beauty Roses are not plentiful and fancy stock is scarce, being quoted at $30 to $40 per 100. Fancy ferns are in short supply at $3.50 per 1000; Smilax, 12½c. to 15c. and Asparagus from 25c. to 75c. per bunch. Lilies are quoted at 12½c. and 'Mums from 6c. to 25c.; pompons, 25c. to 75c. per bunch.

About Town.

Owing to conditions the meeting of the Retail Florists' Ass'n and other meetings have been postponed.

C. Young & Sons will soon put out their new Spring catalog.

Otto Bruening is cutting from his plant at Olivette, Mo., some choice Ophelias, Columbias and Russells. This stock is exclusively handled by H. G. Berning.

Kalisch Bros. have had a very successful season with their Dahlias. These, with the Dahlias grown by Jas. Hauser of Webster Grove, are handled by the William C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

W.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

The pronounced shortage of all kinds of flowers continues and the demand for both loose, cut flowers and funeral designs keeps the stores well cleaned out.

Loan Oversubscribed

Kalamazoo went over the top in Liberty Loan subscriptions early in the campaign, the florists doing their bit both as workers and subscribers.

Fine weather prevailed all through October and resulted in a large saving of fuel, which will most likely be appreciated later on. Most of us have already laid in our allowance of grade coal and also a quantity of slack extra, but as the later costs from $5.50 to $6 per ton. I hardly think much profit will be derived from its use.

S. B.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Conditions in the flower market have been more satisfactory than they have been for some time. There was plenty of stock with which to fill orders, particularly as the 'Mum crop has come on heavily within the last week. However, everything brought top notch prices, due to the exceedingly heavy demand, especially for funeral work, although there was a good general demand which included flowers for hospitals, anniversaries, and a brisk transient trade. Out of town trade, both wholesale and retail, was never better at this season. Double varieties of 'Mums now on the market are Chieftain and Unaka in pink; Chrysolora, Major Bonnaffon, Halliday in yellow, and in white the new variety Smith's Ideal, as well as Robinson and October Frost. Some fine Dorner's Pink, Poehlmann and Touset are also being received by the retailers. These varieties are selling from $2.50 to $6 per doz. Pompons retail for $1.50 per doz, and attractive pompon plants sell readily at 75c. to $2 each.

Carnations are still extremely scarce, and almost any quality brings $1 per doz. Roses are coming into the market in quantity, and the quality is excellent. Mrs. Chas. Russell brings $3 to $6 per doz., and other varieties, such as Ophelia, Shawyer, the Killarneys, Hoosier Beauty, etc., bring from $1.50 to $5.

Cosmos and Dahlias are being used only in limited quantities. Greenhouse Snapdragon is bringing $1 and $1.50 per doz. It has been a problem to obtain enough greens to fill all funeral orders. Galax leaves are hard to obtain in the bronze, but the Magnolia leaves are holding out in spite of the heavy drain made on the supply. Prepared Oak leaves have been used extensively for funeral wreaths, combined with clusters of Roses and other flowers.

Here and There

Miss Margaret Sturm, of the store force of the Freese Floral Co., is convalescing after an operation for the removal of her tonsils.

The representatives of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and Lion & Co., ribbons, New York City, called on the trade.

Miss Marguerite Flick, of the Flick Floral Co., has joined the American Red Cross Canteen, and is kept busy at this work. Miss Flick is also an active worker in other branches of Red Cross service.

The New Haven Floral Co. is busy planting one of its new greenhouses with Winter stock, under the supervision of Herman Leitz, a member of the firm.

The weather has been unusually dark and rainy, with only one clear day, Monday, Oct. 21, during the week. There was also much fog.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. sent out a number of flags of Immortelles in the National Colors, among their funeral orders.

D. B.

Indianapolis, Ind.

The general pressure on the flower business has been relieved somewhat during the past few days. Deaths are still numerous but are confined chiefly to the poorer classes so orders are not so elaborate as during the preceding week. Chrysanthemums are arriving in quantity at $2 to $4 per doz. wholesale and are disposed of over the counter at $4 to $12 per doz. The Rose supply is also more normal. It follows closely the quotations of the larger cities. Carnations are fairly plentiful at $4 to $6 wholesale and $1 to $2 per doz. retail. Lilium giganteum is still scarce at $2.50 to $3 per doz. wholesale. Cattleyas sell slowly at 40 to 60 cents each. Home grown Single Violets are readily accepted at 75c. to $1 per 100. Ferns and green goods generally are more plentiful than during the preceding week and the extreme prices are subsiding. Heavy frosts now predicted will no doubt relieve the market of quantities of second rate material.

Talk of the Town

The death of the father of E. E. Temperley, the well known local florist, has just been reported. The sympathy of the trade is extended Mr. and Mrs. Temperley and Mrs. Temperley, Sr., in their loss.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. report sickness among a number of their employees as do Bertermann Bros. Co., Smith & Young Co., Pahud Floral Co., John Rieman. Practically the whole trade is handicapped by sickness at this time.

A more general resumption of buying from the representatives of large houses is reported upon the outlook for peace. Florists generally in this locality think there will be a wonderful trade immediately after the war.

The November meeting of the State Florists' Ass'n. of Indiana has been postponed. It is the intention to make the usual visit to the Richmond florists. The exact time is to be announced later by Secretary Steinkamp.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Rieman wish to extend their sympathy in the loss of their father, August Schmidt, who passed away Oct. 17. Mr. Schmidt was long and favorably known to the Indianapolis trade.

Extensive shipments of Holland and French bulbs are being received locally. The florists in the suburbs are particularly rushed at this time as many deaths have occurred.

Kansas City, Mo.

Business continues heavy. For four straight weeks now the flood of orders pouring into every establishment has been unequaled in their history. The only thing approaching it has been holiday business.

There has been a great deal of funeral work. The retail stores have been working every night and still could scarcely keep up with the orders. Orders have come from all parts of the country. No question of prices has been raised, nor, in most instances, has there been any choice of flowers. Prices have been good.

There has not been much change in the wholesale price of Roses for the past two weeks. They are bringing from 6c. to 30c. apiece, and are of good quality. 'Mums are now coming in well and are relieving the situation considerably. They are from $2.50 to $4 per doz. Carnations, while not very plentiful, are also helping in the way of variety. They are $4 and $5 per 100.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newell have returned from Houston, Texas, where they were called by the illness of their son, Cadet Walter J. Newell, of Ellington Flying Field. The young man, who had pneumonia, is now in the convalescent hospital and is getting along nicely. Mr. and Mrs. Newell were met in Houston by R. E. Kerr, who showed them every attention and entertained them at his home.

Greenhouse Heating

A booklet of 52 pages, containing a reprint of four prize essays on the subject, which passed through the columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE several years ago, with comments by John McArthur, heating engineer for Hitchings & Co. There is also included a collection of answers to pertinent questions on greenhouse heating.

The problem of greenhouse heating is a vital one in the face of the 50% fuel restriction order, and all growers desiring information upon the choice of a boiler, the installing of a proper amount of piping, both as to the quantity and the proper placing of it, the stoking or feeding of the furnace and the general management of the heating apparatus should be in possession of a copy of this valuable little pamphlet.

New York City

Meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday Nov. 11, at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and 8th ave., 7.30 p.m.

The Market

Oct. 29.—A great change in conditions has occurred in the wholesale cut flower market since Tuesday of last week. The supply in general has increased much, and the demand, both from out of town and from the city and vicinity is weaker. Prices have declined sharply and are expected to recede further before the close of the week.

American Beauty and hybrid tea Roses are in larger supply. Many are arriving wide open on account of the warm weather. Special American Beauty are selling at 15c. to 35c. each; top grade hybrid teas at 6c. to 30c. and No. 2 grade at $2 to $4 per 100.

Carnations are in abundant supply; but buyers are few. Prices range from $2 to $4 per 100. There are large accumulations today.

Cattleya orchids in increased supply are selling at about 50c. each for the best. Lily of the Valley is abundant and accumulating for a lack of demand, the best realizing about $8 per 100. White and pink Lilies, especially white, are in increased supply and moving slowly at $12 to $15 per 100 for white and $3 to $5 for pink.

Large flowered 'Mums, especially yellows, are arriving in much greater numbers, and there is a deluge of bunch 'Mums in the several classes. All are moving slowly at lower prices as per quotations.

Violets, both double and single, "go bad" so soon that they are unsalable.

Among miscellaneous flowers Calendulas are a drug on the market, Delphiniums with few buyers, plenty of Cosmos at low prices, and a few Dahlias.

Greens are meeting with a fair demand, boughs of Oak foliage being the leaders.

Gotham Trade Gossip

The regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on Monday, Nov. 11, at 7:30 in the evening, at the club rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and Eighth ave.

A small fire broke out in some bales of Sphagnum Moss on Thursday, Oct. 24, in the areaway of the store of the New York Florists' Supply Co., 103 W. 28th st. It was soon extinguished without the use of water in the store. The small damage was confined to the loss of a few bales.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Chas. Weber of Lynbrook, L. I., whose only son William, 18 years of age, died Monday night, Oct. 28, of pneumonia, following an attack of Spanish influenza.

J. Austin Shaw who has ably represented The Florists' Review in New York City and vicinity for 10 years or more, left the city on Wednesday of this week for a much needed vacation of several months. He is traveling on the New York Central, making his first stop at Toronto, Canada, where he will call on relatives. From thence he will go West, stopping at Chicago, and from there on to Hollywood, Los Angeles, where he will pass the Winter with his family. May we not with Mr. Shaw's other friends express the wish that he may return in good time in good health, leaving his cane and crutch in the Pacific.

Ralph Armstrong, of Madison ave., at 47th st., whose leg was broken about two months ago, while he was cranking his machine, was back in the wholesale flower district again on Tuesday of this week.

We are pleased to hear that A. T. Bunyard McBeth, ave. 155th st., is recovering from pneumonia.

Late subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan, among those out by Wertheimer Bros. for $10,000, bring the total amount up to nearly $30,000.

At an executive meeting of the American Rose Society held at the office of Secretary John Young, on Thursday afternoon of last week, the following were present: Benjamin Hammond of Beacon, N. Y.; E. A. White of Ithaca, N. Y.; Samuel S. Pennock of Philadelphia, Pa.; Robert Pyle of West Grove, Pa.; E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind., and Geo. H. Peterson of Fair Lawn, N. J.

L. J. Reuter, Waltham, Mass., was in town this week.

John I. Raynor, for many years in the wholesale cut flower business in this city, was calling on his friends in the wholesale flower district on Tuesday of this week.

It is reported that some wholesale florists are inclined to break away from the Sunday closing agreement made almost a year ago. This report has led someone to ask the question: "Do the wholesale florists of this city really desire to go back to the old slavish habit of working seven days a week, when in other lines of business a reasonable number of hours six days a week is the rule? Is it possible that the wholesale florists feel they do not deserve a Sunday holiday?"

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold its Fall show in the American Museum of Natural History Building, Nov. 7 to 10. The exhibition will be open on the evening of the first day from 7 to 10 o'clock, especially for the members of the society, the museum and affiliated organizations; on Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.; on Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

A. T. Bunyard, retail florist at 413 Madison ave., received an F. T. D. order for $10 from Washington for delivery at the Woman's Hospital on 110th st. The order was refused delivery, on the ground that during the prevailing epidemic the Board of Health had ordered that flowers should not be received by hospitals. Mr. Bunyard was advised to call up the Commissioner of the Board of Health. He did so immediately and was informed that such an order had never been issued.

Boston

The Market

Oct. 29.—The scarcity of flowers in this market for several weeks has been relieved; now there is abundance. The demand has fallen off somewhat so the supply is sufficient for all needs. Am. Beauty Roses are in ample supply. Prices are slightly lower. Special blooms sell at 20c. to 60c. apiece. Other grades lower. Hybrid tea Roses are plentiful but are cleaned up daily at slightly lower figures. Carnations are improved in quality. The supply is steadily increasing. Prices are $3, $4 and $5 per 100.

'Mums, with the exceedingly warm weather, are blooming quickly. So many varieties, such as Pacific Supreme, Golden Glow, Golden Queen, Chrysolora, Halliday and Unaka are offered in big supply at 50c. to $2 per doz., with some extra choice blooms at $3. Pompons sell well at 50c. to $1 a bunch. There is a fairly good supply of Cattleya orchids at $8 to $9 per doz. Lilies are not plentiful but have been in good demand at 20c. to 25c. each. Lily of the Valley is not abundant. Prices continue at $6 to $10 per 100.

Snapdragon and Bouvardia are in fair supply. In addition to the foliage plants there are now plenty of 'Mums, Cyclamen and Begonias.

Fall Show

The Grand Autumn Exhibition of plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables to be held by the Massachusetts Hort. Soc. at Horticultural Hall Nov. 9 and 10, from all accounts, will be a big affair. Besides a large show of 'Mums there will be orchids, foliage and flowering plants. The fruit and vegetable exhibits are to be especially interesting. At a meeting of the committee on prizes on Oct. 26 it was voted to hold the exhibition for only two days instead of the four set forth in the schedule.

The Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston will hold its postponed vegetable exhibition Nov. 19. Notice will be mailed to members.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Boston Cooperative Flower Market was held Saturday morning, Oct. 26, at the Quincy House. The following were elected directors: John MacFarland, Wm. H. Elliott, Robert Montgomery, Donald Carmichael, Elijah Cartwright, Norris F. Comley, James W. Simpson, Walter R. Holden, J. M. Cohen, Donald Carmichael (treasurer), John MacFarland (clerk). Immediately after the election the directors entertained the stockholders at lunch.

Spokes in the Hub

Frank J. Reynolds, manager of Welch Bros., has been confined to his home for several days with influenza.

Joseph Beasley, who runs a retail store at Arlington Centre and has been sick for ten weeks, is now attending to business.

Dutch bulbs have arrived in Boston after much delay. They do not look up to the standard of former years. Narcissi show the effect of the long delay. Many of them have young roots. Tulips are good; named Hyacinths also. The quantity imported this year is not as large as in former years. Orders are in now sufficient to clean up all bulbs.

At the retail stores funeral work has fallen off considerably during the past two weeks. This in itself is a good indication that influenza is on the wane. The store windows are gorgeously bright with 'Mums.

At R. & J. Farquhar's seed store since the bulbs arrived the employees are working nights and Sundays trying to pull up with the orders. R. C.

New Bedford, Mass.

The market has dropped and flowers are within reach. Chrysanthemums are now coming in plentifully but hold up their price well.

Fred Reynolds, of Peter Murray's, has left for the Army. He is in a Southern camp.

Wm. P. Peirce, Jr., who sometime ago was gassed, is recovering nicely.

FRED REYNOLDS.

Gems from Harry Bunyard's "Kit Bag"

Pertinent.—Someone asked an Overseas man the other day where he was going; he said to France. The questioner asked what for; he replied "Y," answer. Because I want to know, don't you understand? He said "Y" work. Oh, yes, why work! The argument was still going on when I left. "Y" men are wise men but they don't all come from the East! Savez?

Whist!—A man, not a "Y" man, asked the editor the other day if when the Kit Bag had kittens would I save him a black one with five toes and a white face. Some Kit! S'long.

BRADFORD, MASS.—James B. Allen, who conducted a florist's business on Kingsbury ave., died on Oct. 13 of pneumonia, aged 27. He was born in Bradford, and was graduated from the Mass. Agri. College at Amherst.

Changed Market

[illegible] Following a request from Health Commissioner Healy, undertakers requesting that no funeral flowers be used except at the cemeteries has caused the market within a short time, during the past week, to pass from one extreme to another. The order was promulgated as a measure to prevent the spreading of influenza, which might happen if the flowers were sent to the homes where such cases had been and then brought out again. This reduced to a minimum the use of flowers locally, whereas up to that time the demand had taken on proportions hitherto unknown to the trade. In the meantime stock of all kinds is on the increase. The Rose crop is coming along well and the 'Mum supply will soon reach the high mark of the season. All this has resulted in the falling off in prices and a general break in the tight conditions experienced on the market throughout the early part of the month.

Fortunately for the trade there was no let up in the shipping business, the ban being purely local. Out of town orders, which up to that time, were only partially filled, are going out complete now. Retailers who had sufficient funeral orders to justify sending them direct to the cemeteries did so; others sent them to the houses next door to the houses of mourning and still others sold pieces for funerals to all who would call for them, it being up to the purchasers in these cases to make the delivery as best they could without violating the ruling of the Health Commissioners. There was, therefore, considerable stock used for funeral work. Conditions are improving and unless they take an unexpected turn all public places will open commencing Tuesday. The theatres are scheduled to open on Wednesday; with their reopening flowers will again be in strong local demand and the market will become normal.

The supply of Roses is again normal, short stock selling as low as $2 per 100, but in the medium and better grades prices remain correspondingly high. There is no surplus; all stock moves daily.

The supply of Carnations so far is no more than enough to clean up daily, not being sufficient to cause any great reduction in prices, which range from $2 to $4 per 100.

'Mums are in good supply and prices have a downward tendency. The full supply of home grown stock has killed off the demand for California grown blooms, as the locality grown stock is fresher and can be sold more cheaply. There is a wide range of colors and varieties and blooms from quite small to excellent specimen stock. The best varieties bring $4 per doz., medium blooms $2 to $3 a doz. and smaller stock from $1 to $1.50. Pompons are 35c. to 75c. a bunch.

Easter Lillies are not plentiful and some stock brings as high as $2 a doz. Valley is easier in supply but still holds up in price to $5 and $6 per 100. Orchids, mainly Cattleya labiata, are in fair supply and sell for from $9 to $10 per doz.

There are still a few late greenhouse grown Asters, which are bringing good prices. The supply of Violets is getting heavier, with only a fair demand. Calendulas are popular. The first of the Fall Sweet Peas are coming in; there are also Wallflowers, Callas, Cosmos, Pansies, Daisies and other odds and ends of miscellaneous stock, which is selling well. Greens are scarce. Fancy ferns bring as high as $5 per 1000; Boxwood is selling for $20 per 100lb. case, a high price [illegible] which is attributable largely to scarcity of labor for cutting and shipping. Firms that cater to the All Saints' Day trade in the Southern cities report the usual booking in advance. The shipping goes out Tuesday and Wednesday.

General News

F. O. Franzen, who conducted a retail plant, cut flower and seed store at 5319 N. Clark st., is at a health resort in Michigan. Mr. Franzen has never fully recovered from a protracted illness of last Summer. The store has been taken over by Paulus Bros., who are at present conducting three establishments on North Clark st.

F. W. Martin, 609 E. 40th st., has taken a portion of his greenhouse down and will not rebuild for the present. The other portion of his houses have been thoroughly overhauled and a new Moninger boiler installed, so that he will be able to go through the Winter admirably and on a more economical scale than heretofore.

The Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., has an exhibition of supplies and decorative material at the Palmer House, with Geo. Huseman in charge. The firm is having an extensive trade in preserved foliage for florists' use, especially Magnolias.

Geo. Fehrmann, son of Chas. Fehrmann, Lamont ave. florist, died of pneumonia at an army camp in Alabama on Oct. 14, aged 28 years. The funeral was held from his late residence on Oct. 21, with interment at Montrose Cemetery.

Raymond Ziska, of J. Ziska & Sons, wire work manufacturers for the florists' trade, left last week for camp at Waco, Tex., having been called for military service.

John Wittbold, eldest son of Louis Wittbold, is at Lake Charles, La., having been accepted for ground work in the Aviation Department. Sergeant Al. Campiche, who was formerly connected with a flower store on Halsted st., is here on a furlough from El Paso, Tex. He speaks well of army life. James Foley, son of Phil Foley of the Foley Mfg. Co., has enlisted in the Quartermasters Department of the Army.

Tom Conlon, supt. of the plant growing department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., is sending to the retail trade of the city some well grown plants of Chrysanthemums in the Caprice varieties that prove to be good sellers on account of their sturdy habit, fine foliage and abundant bloom. Another plant, which, while by no means new, is a novelty to the retailers, is Streptocarpus hybridi, a greenhouse perennial, with blooms not unlike a miniature Gloxinia. It runs through a variety of shades from blue to pink purple, mauve and many beautiful combinations of color. A few benches of these plants in the plant department prove an attraction to visitors.

Stock Plentiful

Oct. 29.—Flowers are freely coming into this market. Together with the falling demand, conditions are about normal for this time of year. Dahlias have been curtailed by several frosts of the past week. Chrysanthemums are strongly to the fore in all colors; quality in general is excellent. The Rose supply is large, in fact it is reported larger than ever before noted in this market for this time of year. Prices have receded considerably over those of a fortnight ago. Carnations are again becoming a factor in the market, showing steadily increasing arrivals. Sweet Peas are also coming in increasing supply. Easter Lilies continue active with readjusted prices. Callas are again in evidence. Pompons and outdoor 'Mums are coming in freely and moving well. Orchids are passive; Violets meeting only limited demand. Oak foliage and greens remain active. With the passing of the epidemic retail flower stores are relieved from the strain they were under. The rush at a holiday period was as nothing compared to the business done during the past four weeks. It was not centered in any one locality but every shop from the largest to smallest was pushed to extremes.

A ray of sunshine is in the report that the florists may stock up to their full requirements of coal in buckwheat and smaller sizes—no restrictions at present on the amount of anthracite below No. 1 buckwheat that a florist may receive.

What People Say

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the regular meeting place, on Nov. 5. It is expected that J. Otto Thilow will address the club.

James Heacock who has been listed among the sick is now rapidly recovering. John Welsh Young is also a convalescent.

Leo. Niesson is of the opinion that more Roses are on the market now than ever before at this season of the year.

Philip Freud, of the Henry F. Michell Co., has a tastefully arranged window featuring Pop Corn and toasters.

C. U. Liggit comments upon the enlarging demand for evergreens and Ivies for window box use.

The Henry A. Dreer Inc. has closed its stores until all orders on Dutch bulbs have been filled.

The Robert Craig Co. is cutting a variety of mid season Chrysanthemums and pompons.

George Carpenter has a well grown selection of pot Chrysanthemums.

Denver, Col.

Funeral orders from both in and out of town continue to come in and keep the retail men on the jump. Cut flowers of all kinds still remain scarce. The wholesale men say that owing to the scarcity of stock instead of receiving orders from out of town customers for specified varieties of cut flowers, the customer wires or 'phones in to send a $50 or $100 box of assorted cut flowers, and are glad to get whatever is shipped them.

Recently since there was some talk of not making any more wire designs, the florists having been talking sprays, baskets of flowers, double sprays and blankets. The demand for baskets of flowers for funerals is getting larger all the time, owing to the fact that the stores are suggesting them to their customers.

'Mums now stand as the most important item on the list. This season many growers planted few if any of the earlier varieties, with the result that the market has been inadequately supplied until very recently when midseason sorts began to make their appearance. While all colors are available, there is a decided preponderance of yellows and the demand, contrarily, runs to white, with the result that there has been some difficulty in matching up stock and orders. Pompons now are coming in more freely and prices have eased up, although values continue satisfactory to all concerned. 'Mum plants are becoming more plentiful also, in many attractive colors.

News About Town

C. R. Root of the Colorado Seed Co. said that the firm's Holland bulbs have been shipped from New York. Owing to the embargo on this class of goods by freight, it was necessary to have the shipment come by express and this no doubt will make the price of bulbs somewhat higher this Fall. The firm has also been shipping florists' supplies to Texas, Oklahoma, Wyoming, Utah and Nebraska.

O. E. Sandberg, the Broadway Florist, has been busy with cut flowers and plants. Mr. Sandberg recently rented the Johnson greenhouses on Federal blvd.

H. J. Berry, manager of the Dunsmore Gardens, is the first in our city to use the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," painted in large letters across the sides of his delivery car. Mr. Berry is a strong believer in the saying, "It Pays to Advertise."

The Barteldes Seed Co. ran an ad. in the Sunday paper telling the public that in connection with the seed and bulb business the firm is now handling cut flower and plant orders. The cut flower department was opened on Oct. 15, with Wm. Horlacher in charge.

Ernest N. Peterson has accepted a position as grower at the N. A. Benson range. Mr. Peterson made a specialty of growing double Violets, but owing to conditions he has closed up some of his houses this season.

Theo. Loken has five houses of Carnations coming along in fine shape; the stock looks very healthy.

Frank Fraiser has been kept going day and night with funeral work, including both in and out of town orders. He has been using Dahlias in quantity. He said he was glad he got the Dahlias to use before Jack got them. "Jack who?" he was asked. "Jack Frost."

The Bargain Flower Shop has been selling a large number of blooming plants and cut stock recently.

The Liberty Flower Shop, 418 15th st., opened for business on Oct. 15. The location is good and they report good business.

Elitch Gardens Co. has excellent Cyclamen plants; also Begonias. This firm makes a specialty of Begonias.

Mr. Frank, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill., is back in the city after making a short Western trip.

Mr. Lamerman is out and around again after being confined to his home with influenza. His wife and child also had an attack but are both doing nicely.

Trip to Boulder

E. Glauber, Samuel Lundy, Ben Boldt and Conrad Lengenfelder motored to Boulder, Colo., in Mr. Glauber's Peerless car, and had a delightful trip. Boulder is the largest city north of Denver and has a population of 12,500. There are three flower shops there which are doing a good business.

S. Knudson of that city has a fine range. He is the orchid specialist. A number of Cattleyas, Cypripediums and Oncidiums as well as various spray orchids were in bloom. The Rose and Carnation stock looked clean and strong. He also grows a general line of stock for his retail trade.

C. F. Faucett's houses at Boulder were in shape to meet the big demand, Carnations, Snapdragons, 'Mums, Callas and Sweet Peas comprising the assortment. The pots of Stevia are coming on in good shape, also a half bench of Tomatoes is doing well.

At F. A. Haenselman's the third establishment visited, everything was in good shape. Mrs. Haenselman reports business good, but finds it a hard proposition to get help for the greenhouses. Her son Carl is at Camp Meade.

Friends of Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, are sorry to learn that his son, Corporal Wm. Arthur, had been gassed and is in a Paris hospital. Word has been received by his father that he is recovering. He trained at Camp Hancock and went oversease in May.

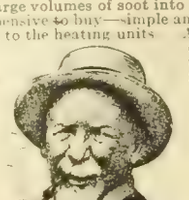
NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES

Z-I-N-C-O

WHAT IT IS

Z-I-N-C-O is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn [illegible] into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.



"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft.

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

Once More the Poor Dahlias

Not being able to work among my Dahlias as usual I have read carefully all that THE EXCHANGE has published of late on this most interesting flower. My first acquaintance with Dahlias was in 1862. My mother had a row in the kitchen garden, all of the show type, red, yellow and white. Not being over propagated or infested with white fly they flourished luxuriously and were much admired.

In 1875 I came to New Haven to work for R. Veitch & Son. There I found one of the best collections of Dahlias in the country, chiefly show and pompon types. I think Mr. Veitch's method of handling Dahlias is the best I have ever seen. Early in February the clumps are set in a bench of a hot greenhouse and cuttings taken. When enough cuttings are in the sand the old clumps are dumped on the rubbish pile. The cuttings are soon potted into 2½-in. pots which become well filled with tubers by planting out time. I have never seen a sickly plant nor one that failed to bloom on this place. There was no white fly then.

In 1900 I commenced growing for the cut flower trade, when that wonderful Countess of Lonsdale came along. I saw plants of that variety 4ft. high and as wide across as high—no diseased plants—no fly, but covered with thousands of blooms. Three years ago I found a big demand for Mrs. Douglas Fleming for making up funeral pieces. The following Spring I planted two rows with strong, heavy tubers early in May. By Aug. 1 they were full of big buds that did not open. Examining I found the plants were covered with the white fly. I got busy and applied the usual remedies but the plants did not recover and gave only a few imperfect blooms toward the end of September.

The next four rows were Purity, a decorative seedling of my own. It grew until we could not get through between the rows, and the plants flowered freely. The next four rows following Purity were Mauve Queen, Dorothy and Sweetbrier. Mauve Queen suffered almost as much as Mrs. Douglas Fleming; Dorothy and Sweetbrier less.

Can anyone tell us why insects prefer white and light colors and shun red and purple shades? [Probably it is not a case of "preference" but of sight. Insects like other animals can see light colored flowers against dark backgrounds more easily than they can dark ones. Moreover, their range of sight is generally short.—ED.]

I have grown Dahlias in the same ground for 15 years. This year there has not been a handful of fertilizer used and yet there has been a good crop of fine flowers. No remedies have been applied for insects and very little care given to the crop, the white fly is there but they have not done as much damage as in former years. This new theory about sun-scalding will bear investigation. It's the same old sun we've always had; why did it not scald before the white fly appeared.
J. H. SLOCOMBE.

Another Cause of Poor Dahlias

Editor Florists' Exchange:

I have noticed in the last two issues to THE EXCHANGE some discussion of the causes of unsatisfactory Dahlias, but no one has mentioned the tarnished plant bug, or cinch bug as some call the insect. This is about two-thirds as large as a house fly, has brown wing covering with silver spots. It stings the tender end of the shoots just as the buds are forming; stunts the plant and blights the buds. The damage has not been as serious the past season as it has been in the two previous ones in this region.

I have no doubt that more damage is done to Dahlias throughout the country by this little bug than by all other causes combined. The white fly has never troubled my Dahlias, but the black aphis does some slight damage. I am able to control the tarnished plant bug to some extent by keeping the growing plants well covered with finely sifted coal ashes sprinkled over the foliage when the dew is on it in the morning. I have no doubt Black Leaf 40 would help, but it costs more than coal ashes. I have been able to secure a good crop of Dahlia flowers every year in spite of insects but lost a good many bulbs last Winter because of the cold getting into my storage cellar and chilling them.
Woodfords, Me. E. R. MACOMBER.

Flowers in No Man's Land

That man's love for the beautiful is not killed by the carnage has been shown many times on the Western front, but perhaps nowhere more strongly than in the case of Lance Corporal Vernon Rawcliffe of Accrington, England, who made a garden last Summer of the motor lorry on which he carried munitions up to the firing line. Rawcliffe built narrow boxes about the sides and back of the truck and in them planted a variety of flowers. A succession of Pansies, Forgetmenots, Primroses, Daffodils and Tulips bloomed and Geraniums and bits of Ivy flourished there. The soldier made a rite of his flower tending, working after hours when he was half dead with fatigue. His lorry brought more than shells to the jaded men in the trenches. It brought fragrance and color and beautiful small buds that do not grow out in "No Man's Land." Blossoms were sometimes plucked by Rawcliffe and given to wounded men and he has been known to leave a nosegay or two behind to decorate a dugout.—British Exchange.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

"X" Boiler Liquid Repairs Your Leaky or Cracked Boiler in 30 Minutes——at a cost of $10.

IN the dead of Winter shutting down the heating system in a greenhouse is a mighty serious problem.

Yet when a boiler section cracks—or leaks—what's a man to do?

If he's wise he gets a can of "X" Boiler Liquid—and pours it into the water in the boiler. In 30 minutes the trouble is repaired—and the boiler works as good as new. There is no fuss or trouble; no exasperating delays.

"X" is a Scientific Process of Repairing Leaks and Cracks Without Dismantling or Shutting Down

"X" is an absolute liquid. When poured in the boiler it instantly combines with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the oxygen in the air from a liquid into a solid thus sealing the break.

The heat in the boiler then hardens this repair, making it as tough as metal, so that it stands over one-quarter of a ton pressure.

The surplus "X" being left in the system automatically stops all new leaks which may develop due to expansion, or from other causes. In this way "X" makes the boiler (and in a hot water system the entire system) LEAKPROOF.

"X" Eliminates Rust and Scale

"X" positively prevents all metal from pitting and rust. It eliminates scale by chemically preventing the lime and other scale-forming matter in the water from crusting on the boiler walls. In this way "X" liquid makes the boiler RUSTPROOF and SCALEPROOF—and helps to save coal.

"X" does not evaporate or lose its strength with age. When new water is added it combines itself with this water and continues to perform all its functions.

Unconditionally Guaranteed

"X" will make good on any leaky or cracked boiler job—or we will return your money. You take no chance. "X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious substances. It positively increases boiler efficiency—that is why 99 out of every 100 boiler and radiator manufacturers sell, use and recommend "X" Boiler Liquid.

The U. S. Government uses quantities of "X" in cantonments and public buildings.

1 Quart $6 in the U. S. A. 2 Quarts $10 in the U. S. A.

Get "X" Boiler Liquid from your steam fitter—or we will ship direct, postage prepaid, on receipt of price

Every Time You Push Your Boiler You Push Your Pocketbook This Tells You How You Can Stop Both

WHEN you push your boiler to push the heat through the coils, you push a surprising amount of heat straight out of the chimney.

If it were only visible dollar bills flying out into the air, instead of invisible heat, you wouldn't let a day pass without doing something to stop it.

The stopping of it, might or might not be our part.

But one thing sure, Our Coal Eater Detective can tell you why you have to push it.

Also, what to do to overcome it.

Like a doctor he will prescribe the remedy. Then it's up to you, where you buy the medicine.

Or, to say it another way: He does his detecting without regard to who gets the job of making the wrongs right.

He is on the jump these days.

Better engage him time enough ahead.

Printing free on orders of 300 or more. Small quantities, $1.25 per 1000. Bronze Ink, $3.00.

We guarantee that our prices are lower than any of our competitors. Why? We are large manufacturers and sell direct, eliminating the jobbers' profit. Give us a trial and be convinced.

CYCAS

Size	Per 100	Size	Per 100
8x12	$2.90	28x32	$8.55
12x16	3.60	32x36	9.00

20x24	5.85	40x44	11.05
24x28	7.45	44x48	11.70

These leaves are prepared in our own factory. They are flexible, do not mold, and are of a fine color. Cycas are very scarce, and we have been fortunate to have some on hand. War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

We have suggested to a large number of our customers to allow us to send them a trial order amounting to ten or twenty dollars. In this way we have made many satisfied customers. Remember, if the goods are not entirely satisfactory, send them back at our expense.

WAX FLOWERS

Mr. Florist:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

WE ARE DIRECT MANUFACTURERS OF
We carry a full line of FLORISTS' SUPPLIES

Prices will certainly not be any lower than they are now. Therefore, stock up now for your winter needs and save considerable money

Effect of Low Temperatures on Greenhouse Plants

By MONTAGUE FREE

Head Gardener Brooklyn (N. Y.) Botanic Garden

While a number of plants reported on by Mr. Free have no particular interest for the florist, it is worth while to have the particulars given concerning their behavior, to have on record. Mr. Free's data is of special value because it is evident from his notes that he kept a careful record of the facts. The last paragraph of his article contains some useful suggestions from which florists and others with greenhouse stock to care for during the coming Winter may obtain helpful suggestions.

As the coal problem is the all-important one for the florist at present a few notes concerning the experiences of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden during the Winter of 1917-18 may be of interest.

About the middle of December it was considered to be extremely doubtful if sufficient coal would be available to maintain the plant houses at a proper temperature for the rest of the cold season. It was immediately decided to conserve fuel by lowering, by ten degrees, the minimum temperature normally maintained in all the greenhouses, the theory being that although a number of plants would undoubtedly suffer by such a course, this was preferable to losing the whole of the collections by a "freeze-up" occasioned by using up all the fuel in maintaining ideal temperatures. All but the absolutely essential heat was shut off from the administration building. It was soon found that these measures would not result in saving enough coal to tide us over until further supplies could be secured. It was then decided to close off a number of greenhouses entirely (about half) and remove their contents to the remaining houses. This of course resulted in much overcrowding and probably caused almost as much damage as lowered temperatures. Three houses, containing plants that will withstand cool conditions, from which it was not practicable to shut off the heat entirely, were maintained at a temperature just sufficient to keep the pipes from freezing. One of these houses, the Cactus and Succulent house, received the whole of its heat from the workroom below through the elevator shaft, which was left continuously open.

The following notes will give an idea of the effect of low temperatures on some of the plants.

Cactus House

The minimum Winter temperature maintained under normal conditions is 45 deg. to 50 deg.; lowest temperature recorded 30 deg.; temperatures of 32 deg. recorded three times; 30 deg. twice. The temperature fell below 30 deg. on 25 occasions. Very little damage was done in this house. The leaves of several species of Pereskia were shrivelled, but the plants otherwise unharmed. Euphorbia splendens (the Crown of Thorns), had its leaves yellowed and shrivelled; it has since entirely recovered. Several species of "candelabra cactus" were badly browned towards the tips, but not killed. Hoya carnosa (the Wax Plant) a native of Tropical Asia, was apparently unaffected. Wandering Jew (Zebrina pendula), growing under the benches was uninjured, while several kinds of Boston Fern (Nephrolepis) were badly yellowed.

Not more than three or four species of plants were killed outright, these being Opuntias and Cereus. It was interesting to notice the change in the coloring of the leaves of many plants; the effect on various species of Sedum, Bryophyllum (the Sprouting Leaf) Echeveria microcalyx, and Othonna crassifolia being especially noticeable. The leaves of these plants changed from the normal color to a beautiful reddish brown, making them very attractive. The leave of practically all the Fig Marigolds, (Mesembryanthemum) were extremely limp on the mornings when low temperatures were recorded, causing the plants to appear as if suffering from lack of water. They are all perfectly healthy now.

Economic House

The minimum Winter temperature here under normal conditions is 60 deg.; lowest temperature recorded was 44 deg.; average of minimum temperatures recorded from Dec. 20 to Feb. 20 about 50 deg.

This house contains a collection of tropical economic plants, and was used in part to accommodate the plants from the houses it was decided to close. Temporary benches were erected in the walks to take care of Begonias and a small collection of orchids. The plants more likely to withstand rough treatment were placed on inverted flower pots amongst the economic plants, which are for the most part planted in solid beds. This house is a curvilinear structure with a lantern; the dimensions are 100ft. long x 50ft. wide x 36ft. to the top of lantern.

The plants actually killed by the low temperatures were as follows: The Chocolate Tree (Theobroma Caçao); Para Rubber (Hevea brasiliensis); Indian Almond (Terminalia Catappa); and Cocoanut (Cocos nucifera). The following plants were more or less injured: Allamanda Hendersoni, A. Williamsii, and A. cathartica which had their leaves badly yellowed, some of the latter falling off. These plants are now (July 30) in good condition and blooming profusely. Fittonia argyroneura was the first plant to show signs of distress, all of its leaves being killed, although it looks none the worse now because of the ordeal. Fittonia Verschaffeltii, strangely enough, was uninjured. Piper ornatum had its growth arrested; Norantea guinensis had its old leaves reddened and its young leaves killed; Strobilanthes Dyerianus had its growth stunted; Papaw (Carica Papaya) the old leaves were partly withered; Malanga (Xanthosoma sagittifolia), had its growth arrested, and its leaves became sickly looking; Carissa grandiflora had the leaves reddened; the leaves of the Oil Palm (Elaeis guinensis) became slightly yellowed; Gynura aurantiaca had its old leaves browned at the edges, the leaves ultimately falling off; on the African Violet (Saintpaulia ioantha) the edges of leaves turned brown and a sickly yellow; Banana (Musa sapientum) has its growth completely arrested.

The remainder of the plants showed no very noticeable ill effects. Amongst them may be noted the following: Kentia Belmoreana, Pandanus utilis; Thatch (Cocothrinax crinita); Sansevieria guinensis; Vanilla (Vanilla planifolia); Begonias, various species; Areca lutescens; and Monstera deliciosa.

Subtropical Economic House

The minimum Winter temperature maintained under normal conditions is 45 deg. The lowest temperature recorded was 28 deg. On several occasions temperatures of 32 deg. were recorded and on one morning ice ½in. thick was formed on a jar of water standing on a side bench. All the plants likely to suffer from low temperatures had been removed from this house and only enough heat supplied to keep the pipes from freezing. Among the plants left in the house were the Date Palm, Phoenix dactylifera, Camellia japonica, the Loquat, Eriobotrya japonica, various kinds of Citrus, such as Orange, Grapefruit, Citron, Kumquat, Lemon. These were uninjured.

Fern House

The minimum Winter temperature kept up under normal conditions is 63 deg. The lowest temperature recorded was 44 deg.; the temperature fell to 50 deg. on many occasions. The worst sufferers in this house were the Stag-horn ferns, Platycerium species, of which we have a good collection. These had just started to make their new fronds and the result was that growth was completely arrested, and the plants have not yet fully recovered. Some of the Selaginallas were affected, especially Selaginella Willdenovii, its young leaves being badly curled. The rest of the ferns were practically uninjured.

In House No. 2, one of the houses that were closed, a few plants of the Water Hyacinth were left. A temperature of 30 deg. was recorded, which caused many leaves to die, but the plants ultimately pulled through. Sanchezia nobilis, a native of Ecuador, was alive after several times enduring a temperature of 30 deg. It finally succumbed.

Preparing for the Coming Winter

As an adequate supply of coal is not in sight, it is expected that we will have to adopt similar measures during the coming Winter in order to save as many plants as possible. The mortality should be much less this year owing to the possibility of preparing the plants for their ordeal. I think that without doubt, many deaths were caused last Winter because of the fact that normal heat was maintained beyond the middle of December, which caused many plants to push forth new growth not so capable of withstanding cool conditions as matured growth would be. If low temperatures are maintained from the middle of November onward, these plants ought to remain in a semi-dormant, resting condition and come through the winter much better. Some damage, of course, was caused by the overcrowded condition of the greenhouses, but this too will probably be mitigated if the plants are not actively growing when the low temperatures begin to prevail.

In the dentist's chair.—"I want to have a tooth drawn," announced the small boy, "and I want gas." "You're too young to have gas, my little man," said the dentist. "Besides, I'm sure you aren't afraid of being hurt. Sit still and be a man." "It isn't that at all," said the boy, "but I'm afraid I shall not be able to help giving a bit of a squeal when it comes out." "Well, that won't matter at all," said the dentist. "I'm sure I shall not mind." "No, but I shall. Look out of that window." The dentist looked and saw a lot of grinning lads. "They're all the kids I've fought and licked," said the customer, "and they're come to hear me holler."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Labor Saving Devices

We invite worthy contributions to this column and will willingly pay well for same.

Many a farmer has taken a few pieces of old planks and hammered together a "clod crusher" which smoothed down the plowed ground, fined the seed bed and saved tons of moisture for the soil. It cost nothing but labor; yet "If I painted it red and invented a name for it it would sell for $25!"—Rural New Yorker.

Lengthening the Life of the Flue Pipe

The short flue pipe, leading from the furnace to the smokestack, is generally made of galvanized sheet iron, which is usually eaten through by gas and requires changing about every two years. To overcome this, line the sheet iron pipe with asbestos. By using this device the pipe wil last for five years or longer. –Charles A. Black, Jr.

Check Draft on Smokestack

A useful labor saving device on a greenhouse is a check draft on the smokestack. This works on a pivot and revolves like a weather vane, always shielding the stack opening from the wind. It is especially valuable where a greenhouse is being crowded by a growing city, the tall buildings of which may cause the fire to back-draft. This check draft sets inside the stack to a depth of about 6in., having a rim to keep it from slipping down. It is far superior to a check draft on the boiler and with it you will have very little use for the former. By its use you can run to full capacity with a third less coal.—

H. E. Klunder, Toledo, Ohio.

Soil Evener

The accompanying illustration shows a soil evener or leveler for greenhouse benches. It consists of a 1½in. x 1½in. piece of wood, cut 1ft. longer than the bench is wide. At either end of this piece of wood 5in. handles are shaped and just where the stick would strike the side bench boards it is rounded for about 2in. and a short piece of pipe is put on for a roller. A nail can be driven through to hold it on. To the 1½in. x 1½in. piece is nailed a 1in. x 1in. board, cut to fit inside the side bench boards; on one side of this is nailed a 1in. x 2in. piece of the same length and on the outer edge of the latter board spikes are driven through about 2in. apart.

This device is pushed or pulled down the bench by two men, one on each side. The spikes break up the lumps of soil and the other side of the arrangement, that is the scraping board, as will be seen from the cross section view, does the smoothing. This device evens the soil to a uniform depth and with it two men can do more work, and do it better than six men could do with a rake or such other methods as are usually employed. Of course this evener is meant for use in a large place, where the benches are of uniform width and it is most effective where the sides of the benches are straight and of the same height.

United War Work Campaign

For the requirements of the seven great national organizations mentioned on our front cover, a campaign calling for whole hearted giving on the part of every inhabitant of the United States will be inaugurated Monday, Nov. 11 and, within the week, that is, by the following Monday, Nov. 18, it is expected that the amount required will have been raised, namely $170,500,000. When you bought Liberty Bonds you were making an investment that would promote the material welfare of yourself and family; when you contribute to the United War Work fund you are making an equally profitable investment, one that will return you seven fold satisfaction in the knowledge that your contribution is helping to bring about the consummation of the Freedom of Mankind, through the support and comfort it will give the boys of all nations, races and religions who are banded together for the suppression of what had become an intolerable condition—the ability of one man or one small group of men to drive all humanity into merciless war, a condition, we fervently hope, which will be terminated forever, with the close of this, the Greatest of all Wars. The campaign is nationwide and your contribution should be made preferably at your place of residence. What we ask is that you give freely according to your income.

How We Are Backing Up the Boys

At a Glance. A hundred and seventy million dollars is a lot of money; but it means much less than a dollar a week for each of the boys of our Army and Navy. And certainly no man in America will say that a dollar a week is too much for their cheer and entertainment—at least not if one of the boys is his boy.

Workers. The field army of these seven great agencies comprises more than fifteen thousand uniformed workers on both sides of the water; and General Pershing is asking that additional workers be sent at the rate of at least a thousand a month.

They represent every type of activity—secretaries, athletic directors, librarians, preachers, lecturers, entertainers, motion picture operators, truck drivers, hotel and restaurant workers, etc. Many are bearing all their own expenses; those who cannot are paid their actual living expenses, if single, and are given an allowance approximately equal to the pay of a second lieutenant to cover their own and their families' expenses, if they have families.

Huts, Clubs, Hotels, Restaurants and Hostess Houses. More than 3600 separate buildings have been either erected or rented to make possible this huge work. They are of every sort, varying from the great resorts at Aix les Bains, where American soldiers may spend their furloughs, to the huts and hostess houses made familiar by the cantonments on this side. In addition there are scores of warehouses and garages; and hundreds of "huts."

Nor do these figures include the hundreds of buildings operated in peace times by these organizations, all of which have been placed at the disposal of the soldiers and sailors, and are doing a magnificent work supported by their regular funds and special contributions entirely apart from this war work fund.

Character Influence. The spirit of each of these seven organizations is uplifting in the biggest and broadest sense of the word. They depend upon people of ideals for their support, and their purpose is to surround each boy, so far as possible, with the influences that were best in his life at home. The huts of each organization are opened freely to men of all faiths. The Scriptures and booklets sent abroad would, if piled one upon the other, make a pile more than twenty miles high. Differences of creed and dogma do not divide men who are fighting and dying together. They stand shoulder to shoulder there in a great common faith in the Fatherhood of God, whose creed is Service in the spirit of brotherhood toward all men.

Libraries. In camps and cantonments on this side, and on the other, there are 842 libraries and 1547 branches containing more than 3,600,000 books and 5,000,000 copies of periodicals. There are 250 additional libraries on the ships of our fighting fleets and merchant marine; and the number should be vastly increased.

Letter Paper. Almost every home in America flying a service flag has received a letter on the paper furnished by one of these organizations. Together they supply more than 125,000,000 sheets of stationery a month; and probably half a million dollars is kept tied up all the time in postage stamps.

Shipments. More than 500 tons of supplies for the boys leave our ports every week under the direction of these agencies. Individual items on the shipping lists run into figures that are astonishing; as for example, these figures taken from the shipping lists of one organization, for the period between July, 1917, and August, 1918; Canned fruit 1,959,156 cans; chewing gum 14,510,000 pkgs.; cigarettes 848,785,802; cigars 32,358,700; tobacco 2,557,481 packages; cocoa 463,824 pounds; condensed milk 1,665,120 cans; flour 31,279,020 pounds; sugar 10,227,735 pounds; tooth paste 551,520 tubes. In France and Switzerland two cracker factories and a chocolate factory have been entirely taken over so that the boys may have something good in their pockets between meals.

Theatrical Entertainments. An average of a hundred of the best actors and actresses in America are touring the huts in France all the time. These are sent under the direction of the "Over There Theatre League," of which George M. Cohan is president; and they are managed by such well-known leaders as Winthrop Ames and E. H. Sothern.

Athletics. Leisure has been the foe of every army that ever marched to war. These seven great agencies are turning our boys' leisure from a liability into an asset. More than a thousand athletic directors in France and an equal number on this side help the soldiers to forget their troubles with football, baseball and other wholesome outdoor games. The athletic orders placed on this side for shipment abroad are the largest single orders of their kind in the history of athletics.

Motion Pictures. Literally thousands of feet of film have been purchased by these agencies for exhibition here and over there. Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks follow the boys clear to the front line. The average shipment of film per week to France is more than fifteen miles; and the attendance at motion picture shows (all free) averages 2,500,000 a week.

In General. The long arm of these great agencies extends all the way from the 500 clubs operated by the War Camp Community Service on this side, to the front line trenches where the Y. M. C. A. and Knights of Columbus and Jewish Welfare Board distribute chocolate and cigarettes to the tired fighters; the American Library Association furnishes books; and the Salvation Army passes out pies and doughnuts, sews and mends for our fighters, and mans ambulances. It reaches into the factories through the Y. W. C. A. to protect the girls who are making munitions for the fighters, and into the shipyards and munition plants.

In short, wherever you find a soldier or sailor, you find also the evidence of the loving care of the folks back home, expressed through the medium of one of these seven affiliated and co-operating organizations.

They go with the boy "every step of the way."

Helping the Home to Follow the Flag

In other wars the influence of the American home has had to stop at the soldier's own front gate. All that made life comfortable and happy for him deserted him there when he kissed his family good-bye. In this war the home follows the flag clear up to the front line trenches. That, in one word, is the story of these seven great co-operating war work agencies.

Let us follow one single soldier on the long road that leads from his front door to far-away France, and see how these seven organizations join hands to form a great chain of helpfulness all the way.

He steps aboard a troop train that is to carry him to the cantonment. A long, lonesome ride, full of homesick thoughts, but, perhaps, there is a band furnished by the Jewish Welfare League or the War Camp Community Service to speed him on his way, and on the train are friends whom he had not expected—a Y. M. C. A. or a K. of C. secretary—a big, friendly fellow, who has traveled for months with other boys just like him, and knows how to help.

At the cantonment the evidence that the folks back home are thinking of him lies thick on every side. Here are the 750 great homey huts of the K. of C., the Jewish Welfare Board, the Salvation Army, and the Y—as the soldiers speak of it. Places where he can write letters home, play games at night, witness motion picture shows, hear helpful lectures, attend church service, and keep up with his studies under the direction of the best college professors and teachers in the country. Here also are the 85 Hostess Houses of the Y. W. C. A., where mother and sister and sweetheart may make their headquarters when they visit.

No Duplication Anywhere

In the larger camps and cantonments the soldier will find houses of all five of the camp agencies—the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Y. W. C. A., Jewish Welfare Board and Salvation Army—and all full at every hour of the day and evening. In the smaller camps and naval stations, the organizations have working agreements which prevent duplication. In such a camp there will frequently be only one hut, its door open to all the boys alike. To it come on Saturdays and Sundays the prominent preachers, priests and rabbis to conduct worship; for the hut is the soldier's church and synagogue.

At Home and Abroad

Suppose the boy wanders into the city a stranger, with a day or two of leisure on his hands. What shall he see? Where can he eat? Where can he find a decent, inexpensive place to sleep? He lands at the depot with all these questions in his mind, and there, awaiting him, is an Information Booth conducted by the War Camp Community Service. A woman, with a friendly smile, tells him what he wants to know. She gives him a list of the clubs affiliated with the W. C. C. S. (A recent report from 124 of the 532 communities which the W. C. C. S. has organized showed 403 such clubs.) She tells him of certain churches, and Y. M. C. A.'s, K. of C., and Jewish Welfare buildings where he will be welcome, and gives him the address of a hotel maintained by the W. C. C. S. that provides a clean bed for a few cents a night. The museums are open to him free, she informs him, and the library and other places of interest and value.

In a word, the city, through the W. C. C. S., extends its greeting and places at the boy's disposal food, lodging and entertainment; he is its honored guest so long as he is allowed to stay.

The day comes when his company is ordered onto a troop train for the long trip to one of those "unnamed ports of debarkation." And on this train also is a Y. M. C. A. or a K. of C. secretary—probably the man who has had most contact with the company in camp, and has become a favorite with the men. When the train stops, he hurries up to the local Y building and arranges a bath for the men. He takes charge of their last letters and requests.

At the port of embarkation are other huts. (The Y. recently expended $40,000 to erect the largest single hut in this country at one of these unnamed ports.) The boys' last night in their native land is spent in friendly surroundings; to the very edge of the ocean goes the evidence that someone cares.

On the transport are other secretaries who have been specially trained for this work, and make trip after trip, with only a day or two on shore at the end of each. They have writing paper for the boys, and motion picture machines with a supply of new film. They organize deck games, and contests of various sorts; and amateur theatricals, and concerts by the band. The trip across is long enough and lonesome enough at best, but it would be a homesick experience indeed were it not for these faithful workers.

Landing on the other side, where the language is strange and the customs bewildering, the boy finds that the Y, the K. of C., the Jewish Welfare Board, and the Salvation Army have preceded him. The first hand stretched out to him in greeting is the hand of a secretary. Perhaps his regiment is held at the port of debarkation for a few days. He will find restaurants, where American girls and women serve home cooking; and hotels clean and inexpensive. In London is the great Eagle Hut, conducted by the Y—the centre of soldier life for that great city. The King and Queen visited it one day and ate buckwheat cakes with the boys. In Paris are half a dozen big hotels, and at every other point where large numbers of the boys are gathered.

Every Dollar Made to Do Its Utmost

There is no room for figures in so brief a statement as this. It should be remembered, however, that these organizations are not private agencies. Every one of them is operating under an Executive Order of President Wilson. The budget of each one is scrutinized and passed upon by the War Department. In addition the work of each organization is governed by a War Work Council of nationally known men and women.

Winter Boarders

A great deal of trouble in connection with plants you store over Winter for your patrons may be avoided; that is, if you really want to do so. The storing of such plants should be made to pay. In the first place don't accept any plant when you know it cannot be carried through the Winter and come out in fair shape next Spring. If you do accept such be sure to let the owner know about it and have a record of it. Charge enough so you can give the plants the proper attention and again let your patron know about it. When you receive plants, have a little book ready and put down just what is received and in what condition, and provide each plant with a label. If you do get a fair price don't try to store a Boxwood under some bench or in the boiler room, nor use the palms next January for decorating. That is wrong and will create only bad feeling sooner or later. As long as we are in business we are bound to be called upon sooner or later to store or board plants for our patrons and it can be made to pay as well as anything else if we adopt a proper system and do the right thing. Any old place for Aspidistra isn't good enough, so if you don't want to overwinter stock for others or haven't proper facilities, say so before you accept the plants.

Decorative Stock and Foliage Plants

For this Winter's Requirements

For November I don't know of anything more important for the average retail grower to do than to stock up with a good supply and assortment of decorative plants for the coming holidays. The smaller florist can't be expected to grow this class of stock himself but that shouldn't prevent him from carrying it; in fact, it is more necessary this coming Winter than ever. You need flowering and berried plants to be sure. What is more beautiful than a specimen Cincinnati Begonia for Christmas? Along with such stock carry plants which will improve rather than depreciate after the holidays are over. Attractive plant baskets sell if you have them on hand. Pandanus Veitchii, the variegated Ananas, Phœnix Roebelenii, the many beautiful Dracænas and ferns, all make desirable holidays sellers and are every bit as valuable a month afterward. Many of us located in country towns have good reason for going a little slowly this year with stocking up but we can't go wrong in getting together plants which form a good asset all Winter, if not sold before Christmas week. Palms are expensive but our patrons by this time are used to paying more for things and those who are not as yet will get used to it. Get ready to do business now and don't wait for anything to happen.

Crotons

While good Crotons have always been in demand for Christmas they will be more so than ever this year with a shortage of other stock. If you are in the market for any I suggest purchasing them now especially if they have to travel far to reach you. Always bear in mind that Crotons don't thrive in a cool house, and if long exposed to a low temperature they will drop their leaves. This renders them worthless. You need stock out of 4in. and 5in. pots for making up baskets; but don't overlook a few well branched large specimens.

Dracæna terminalis

Dracæna terminalis, an old favorite, is as popular as ever. So every florist needs a nice stock of it for the holidays. If you should be sold out of your flowering plants on Christmas but have Dracæna terminalis, Crotons, Asparagus plumosus and good ferns, with a supply of ribbon and enough baskets, you may always do business. Don't wait until the last minute. Where stock is plentiful now it may not be so later. All we may look forward to is colder weather from now on, so don't put off ordering what you know you will have to buy some time between now and Christmas.

Darwin Tulips

I know of no other class of Dutch bulb stock which has grown more in popularity than the Darwin Tulips have of late years, both for indoor as well as outdoor flowering. Even if advanced considerably in price this year over former years by all means plant enough of them. You can't grow these bulbs, or rather force them, in shallow flats. I prefer bulb pans, especially for the small grower who uses only a few thousand bulbs for his limited trade. I find that ten inch pans with a little space between bulbs bring best results. Plant as soon as you can get the bulbs and don't try to force them too early. They are late flowering to begin with so the more time you give them even under glass, no matter how well rooted, the better the flowers. With Easter near the end of April Darwin Tulips in pans are bound to prove a good investment. No matter how small your establishment and how cool your houses, almost anyone can get these beautiful Tulips to come in nicely by that time. When you plant the bulbs in pans see to it that the outside row gets as close up to the side of the pans as possible; it will help to make it a more attractive plant. Make use of light shades, especially those intended for pans.

Notes on Chrysanthemums

Both of the Chieftains, the pink and the white, are desirable sorts for florist's use and are fine both as single stem or bush plants in pots. The Chieftain was introduced in 1914 and especially throughout the Middle West is one of the standard sorts for the smaller grower for midseason use. With us this year so far there has been a decided increase in the demand for large flowers—stock which could be retailed up to $5 per doz., partly due to the fact that up to the present garden flowers may be had outdoors. Calendulas, Zinnias, Scabiosas, Cosmos and outdoor early flowering 'Mums are at their best. There hasn't been enough frost to affect any of these. While there are many other beautiful sorts the pink and white Chieftains are paying as well as any. Even Ivory is as good if not better than ever and also a splendid keeper. From now on a little shade over the flowers almost ready to cut will be of benefit. The flowers will develop better and last longer for it. Hold the house on the cool side with plenty of ventilation. Don't fail to avoid any excess moisture. The flowers are best off in a dry atmosphere. Flowers cut may be kept for several days if placed in a rather dark place with the stems deeply in fresh water. In fact it is always well to place them in water for at least 24 hours before offering them for sale. The harder the wood of the stems the more this is necessary, not to say that the soft wooded stock doesn't need it.

Bedding Stock

As soon as room can be had in the 'Mum house get the rooted cuttings of the bedding stock out of the sand. There are no doubt a hundred other things to be attended to but you mustn't on that account neglect the cuttings in the sand. When once rooted they should go into soil so room may be made for others. Get those stock plants of Geraniums, Salvias, Ageratums and others from under the benches, where they were put while you were crowded, and put them on top. It is still time to lift plants from the outdoors of stock you are short of. You need a lot of bedding plants next Spring for the way things look now there is good reason why we should run full steam next May. In many places there is a shortage of Geraniums; if so with you don't wait too long with stocking up; 2in. or 2½in. stock bought now and given attention will give you several cuttings during the Winter months, so why wait until next February to get small stock. It will cost just as much then and most likely more. Frequently one may purchase better and cheaper than growing stock but many things among the bedding plants may and should be grown at home. If you must purchase coal to keep the place going you must see to it that there is something on the benches after the 'Mums are through.

National Publicity Campaign

Thoreau is quoted as saying, "Most men lead lives of quiet desperation."

To get the public mind concentrated upon flowers, especially in these troublous times, is hard indeed for an individual to attempt; in fact, nothing but a desperate effort would be rewarded with success.

One of the ideas back of our publicity campaign is to make an organized effort to do this very thing, in order that the florists may cut this desperation out of their business lives and enjoy a better demand for plants and flowers. Who shall say our committees have not succeeded.

Through our magazine advertising many thousands of people have turned their minds to flowers as mediums for the expression of sentiment under various conditions. Every mail brings to this office letters from all parts of the country requesting copies of our little booklet, "Say it with Flowers," and information in regard to filling orders in distant cities. This result is gratifying to us, even though representing but a fraction of the interest which is aroused by the publicity our fund provides.

Our slogan has even had expression on the stage. We are informed that recently in a vaudeville performance, during a pause in a dual song and dance act where, according to custom, a little banter passes between the partners, the male of the duet made a stammering protestation of love to the woman, whereupon the latter said "Oh! cut it out and say it with flowers." This brought a hearty laugh from the audience, which it is fair to assume recognized the slogan.

Gradually, but irresistibly our slogan is taking hold. Any florist who is not giving it a personal push is making a mistake. Our Promotion Bureau is providing the means for a push through the dealers' aids service. The beautiful glass sign displayed in any store window says "Say it with Flowers" all day long, and every day. If this sign, at $2, is considered an extravagance then there is the decalcomanie sign, supplied in units of four, in sizes for windows and door panels, at one dollar a unit. Our Bureau has supplied hundreds of these transfer signs, but ought to place yet ten times the number. There are "stickers," in three sizes, suitable for affixing to envelopes, boxes, express packages, and the like, the use of which connect the slogan to an individual establishment. Our lantern slides for use in the moving picture houses are works of art at chromo prices. Our electrotype service, comprising newspaper plates featuring the magazine advertisements are extremely effective when used in local newspapers, as tending to connect a local store with the advertisements in the ten magazines. The slogan is prominent throughout.

All these present a chance for noisy demonstration which will go a long way to obviate the necessity for quiet desperation, and promote that healthful activity essential to prosperity.

We are still waiting to hear from a surprisingly large number of florists who have not yet contributed to the fund. Every dollar so far contributed has been applied to the work, and about $5,000 more is required to complete the plans made for the year. This is not a large sum, and surely should be forthcoming.

Secretary.

Remedy for Snapdragon Rust

Can you tell me what makes rust on Snapdragon and what to do for it? I have a high house, good ventilation, new soil put in in August and the plants were nice and healthy. I have grown them for the past three years and have not had any rust before.—A. A. K., R. I.

—We will refer you to helpful articles on this subject which you will find in the following issues of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE: Nov. 25, 1916, page 1205; Feb. 17, 1917, page 353; March 3, 1917, page 501. The subjects of these three articles are: 1. "Treatment of Snapdragons." 2. "How to Control Snapdragon Rust." 3. "Controlling Snapdragon Rust." J. H. S.

Preserving Roses for Future Use

I am anxious to know how to preserve Roses so that you may have them bloom in the Winter. Will you kindly give me the directions?

SUNDAY READER.

The following directions are usually followed: Gather the Rosebuds before they are fully developed, but see that the petals are quite formed before picking them. Never gather them immediately after a shower or while they are still wet with the dew. Cut the stalk of each one off cleanly; then prepare a little melted wax. To do this put the few ends of candle wax in a tin and place it over a flame until it is melted. When quite liquid, dip the end of each stalk into the wax about six times, or until a little round knot of wax has formed. Then wrap the buds up carefully in tissue paper and pack in a tin box, which should be covered immediately with a close fitting lid. Put the tin away till the Roses are required, which may be in three or more months. When required, unpack very carefully, as the buds will be very brittle, and with a sharp pair of scissors snip the waxed end off each. Get a bowlful of fairly hot water and into this put the stalks of the buds. Put the bowl in a dark cupboard, and in three or four hours the Roses will have opened.—Daily Newspaper.

Beautiful Drayton Gardens

Here's an interesting description of a Southern garden which came to hand recently: "We had a wonderful trip on Sunday morning to Magnolia Gardens, a 12 mile ride from here (Charleston, S. C.). The gardens are the private grounds to Drayton Hall, the founder of which died in 1643 and is buried there. It was a later Drayton who conceived the idea of the gardens and planted them, and I never expect to see a more beautiful sight. The whole place is planted with Azaleas of every imaginable color, many of them 10ft. to 15ft. tall and bearing single clusters of flowers almost as large as a whole Azalea bush grows in the North. There is a modern stucco house, quite in keeping with the spirit of the place, which faces a large open park; at one side is the entrance drive which is a veritable archway of enormous live Oaks festooned with Spanish Moss.

A lake encircles the gardens, reflecting the wonderful masses of color of the Azaleas and the Moss-hung trees that line its banks. There is no attempt at formality; little paths wind in and out of the shrubbery and everywhere you turn there is a fairyland of color. There are Roses and flowering vines and shrubs, but the Azaleas are the main thing. My poor words cannot adequately describe the place to you; one has to see it to appreciate its beauty. P.

eaders have doubtless noticed that letters from our pean correspondent have appeared somewhat darly. This is due of course to the uncertainty ail from abroad. The following three letters ve all received in one mail, on the same day. We had difficulty in determining the respective dates se, but believe we have them in the right order, eliest being given first.)

ith the advent of October we ex- ed a spell of Indian Summer weather, up to the time of writing it has materialized. In the meantime, since last notes were penned, there have more rain storms than we wanted a serious lack of sunshine, so that y of our late ripening crops, both eed and grain, have suffered severely. some of the low lying districts vast ts of arable land are buried in water, the work of transplanting is conse- tly held up indefinitely.

he crop most seriously affected by above named conditions is Radish, icularly the large, late varieties. It not be possible to thresh these for e time to come.

he question of prices is now well to fore and some surprises are antici- d. The demands of the growers have me so exorbitant that a firm stand nst them on the part of the mer- it is absolutely necessary. Of course profiteering growers are simply furi- and threaten us with terrible conse- ces. In this they are backed up by eat army of equally profiteering com- sionaires who have fattened on grower merchant at the same time, but now that by the opening up of new ces of supply their occupation is . Many of them must have burnt r fingers badly last year. No one pity them now.

he settled conditions which we so h need, both for harvesting and cur- the present year's crops and the splanting of our plants for next year, n to be just as far off as ever, for a day passes without a storm of some . which effectually checks the work oth departments. We have also had t sufficiently severe to kill all the d family, including our open air Cu- bers, and the crops of all these will ably be light this season. Contrary xpectation the frame varieties of Cu- ber are yielding more than we esti- ed, but one of the largest British vers has had his whole crop destroyed disease, so that any surplus in the ls of other growers will be quickly osed of. Although this crop is gen- ly esteemed a luxury, the demand for seed is very brisk.

he question of prices is now demand- our attention, and the general feel- is that the inflated prices which have ly ruled cannot still be maintained. already some of the more important vers of our biennial crops have mod- ed their demands. But the heavy ase in the cost of labor, fertilizers machinery, in addition to the heavy s incidental to the war we are wag- make it quite impossible for prices escend to the pre-war unremunera- evel for some years to come. It is tly to be hoped that they will never so low again.

tmospheric conditions remain much ast reported and this has tended to on the backs of our growers, to whom apparent tendency of prices to drop their present inflated position is takably distasteful. The ubiqui- commissionaire has been on the war once more, and some well known s, whose stocks have run low, have compelled to anticipate the opera- s of these gentry so as to secure, at a fancy price, the product of r own stock seeds. The grower has been able to dictate his own terms, g that, for the present, the reins n his hands; but this sort of thing happened several times before in the ter's experience and, if the present py omens have the fulfillment they tend, the aforesaid grower is bound long to understand the meaning of the adages, "Went up like a rocket, came down like a stick." "The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceeding small."

In the meantime the aforesaid efforts to exact the full pound of flesh as a minimum causes an immense amount of friction and inevitable delay in the transaction of business, and fosters a spirit of unhappy mistrust.

The news of the phenomenal rainfall in California during September comes as a complete surprise, and may upset some of our calculations and arrangements. What is wrong with the weather anyway? It is affirmed by one of the British newspapers today that fully a fourth of the grain harvest has been spoiled, owing to bad weather and inefficient and insufficient help in the harvesting. It is to be feared that the harvest of seeds has suffered from the same causes to an equal extent. Reports just to hand from both the allied and neutral countries tell the same tale. The surplus offers with which our markets are flooded from every quarter of the globe are incontestable evidence that some people are counting their chickens before they are hatched.

A Cordial Reception in London

Watkins & Simpson, Ltd., are advertising in these columns offering a cordial reception to American seedsmen or their friends whose voyage abroad will take them to London. This is commendable hospitality.

New York Seed Trade

Early orders for Dutch and French bulbs booked by the seedsmen and importers have now mostly been filled. In order to fill later orders, however, most seedsmen find it necessary to buy some varieties from their fellow seedsmen who have a surplus of such varieties, but even then many seedsmen find themselves short of stock. This being the case, it looks as if there would be very few surplus Dutch and French bulbs this season. A fourth ship, as we have mentioned in a previous issue, is expected to arrive with 2000 to 3000 cases of Dutch bulbs aboard, but so small a number will hardly change the present situation much. Another factor entering into the demand for bulbs is the possibility, in fact, the probability, of the early end of the great war. Should the end come soon, it would create, no doubt, a late demand for bulbs, both for outdoor and indoor planting.

With deep regret we chronicle the death of Mrs. Giesler, wife of Carl Giesler, manager of Max Schling's Seed Store at 24 West 59th st. Mrs. Giesler died suddenly on Friday, Oct. 25, of heart failure, following Spanish influenza and pneumonia, from which she had apparently recovered. She was buried on the following Wednesday. Besides a husband, to whom the sympathy of the trade is extended in his great bereavement, Mrs. Giesler is survived by two children.

W. E. Marshall of W. E. Marshall & Co., 166 W. 23d st., expects to leave this city soon on a long business trip in the West. Let us wish him the good fortune of not meeting such severe weather conditions as he experienced in his trip through that part of the country last Winter.

There is noted this week at J. M. Thorburn & Co.'s, 53 Barclay st., a seasonable and well arranged "Harvest Home" window, and also a bulb window of named varieties with clusters of artificial flowers showing the color of the blooms of these several varieties. Much artistic skill enters into the arrangement of both these windows.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Adolph Kruhm has been connected with Beckert's Seed Store since Nov. 1. In his capacity as secretary he will have supervision of both the purchasing and selling ends of the business.

Chicago Seed Trade

There has been a lively demand for both French and Holland bulbs since their arrival in the city, some of the seedsmen are advertising them in the local papers.

Vaughans Seed Store received one carload of French and two of Dutch bulbs the past week with more to follow. At the retail store the demand is so active that the selling force had to be increased to keep up with it.

The W. W. Barnard Co. has had some delay in getting through that portion of its French and Holland bulbs required for its retail trade, but is expecting them daily. Bulbs for the wholesale trade have arrived and are being shipped as rapidly as possible to the customers of the house.

The firm of Rynsburger Bros., Sassenheim, Holland, are writing their customers that they have gone into bankrupcy, and that orders placed with them for this season's delivery are not going to be filled. As this house had booked extensively for local delivery as well as in other sections of the country, their failure to get their orders out this season will add considerably to the shortage already existing.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., who has been in New York attending the funeral of the late Ralph M. Ward, states that the business of the Ralph M. Ward Co. will be continued as before by the men heretofore associated with the business.

Regardless of the high prices of Dutch bulbs dealers report that they are in as much demand as ever. Jas. Spence, a veteran seedsman with the W. W. Barnard Co., says he never saw before retailers buying single early Tulips as high as from $2.50 to $2.75 per 100.

The Spokane Seed Co., Spokane, Wash., has increased its capital stock from $76,000 to $100,000, according to Geo. S. Reid, president of the company, and L. C. Barrett, sec.-treas., this made necessary in order to carry on the increased volume of busiess.

The Michigan Agri. College at East Lansing has announced that it has placed its department of botany at the disposal of the bean growers of the State for the purpose of testing seed. Farmers are advised that if they will send small samples of their seed beans to the college the M. A. C. pathologists will examine them without charge and make a report as to whether any diseases are present.

Washington, D. C.

Destroying Weevils in Leguminous Seeds

Weevil-invested Beans, Peas or other legumes; breakfast foods, flour or meal should be heated in the oven at 118 to 125 deg. F., which will kill all stages of the insects. They can then be separated from the cereals by sifting and from the sound Beans or Peas by submerging these in water and skimming off the infested seeds.

Beans can be protected from weevils by placing them in a receptacle with air-slaked lime, using a quantity of lime about equal in weight to that of the Beans, the lime being sprinkled among the Beans in the container. This will prevent the development of weevils but will not injure the Beans for food or seed.—T. H. Parks of the Ohio State University.

New Seedling Dahlia

Nathan A. Miller of Indian Neck, Branford, Conn., recently sent us sample blooms of his new seedling Cactus Dahlia No. 918. This Dahlia is of the so-called English type, its petals being narrow and their edges incurved. The blooms are of medium size, well formed and of attractive appearance. Their centers are sulphur yellow and the outer petals terra cotta. Mr. Miller says: "This plant began blooming in July, producing throughout the season healthy foliage, and is still producing blooms with good centers, without thinning or disbudding, being grown naturally."

A Narrative of Hard Luck

For a pure, unadulterated and long drawn out story of hard luck one might travel some distance to find its match. The grit of the writer stands out through it all and, although our readers may never know his name, we are assured he will have their sympathy and that our wish to the effect that he may now enjoy a long period of prosperity will be heartily echoed by them. Here's the story just as written:

"We thank you for the leniency you have shown us, and assure you the same has been appreciated. We have had an uphill proposition for the past two years, due to the failure of our coal agent to deliver coal at the proper time, and before the coal arrived we had a freeze out and lost 75 per cent. of our stock; this was in the Winter of 1916. The following year (1917) we lost 50 per cent. of our 'Mums on account of our boiler blowing out (4) tubes. This happened just when the blooms were ready for the market. We had 18,000 'Mums planted and all were looking fine before the accident; this was some loss.

This season, in order to conserve the food and assist the country with vegetables, we grew 15 acres of Tomatoes, 10 acres of Corn. On the 14th day of August we lost the entire crop by hail, in addition to a large quantity of glass. So altogether, we believe we have had our share of trouble. In addition to these losses we have 10,000ft. of glass and not a thing planted in the benches. We also lost all of our 'Mum cuttings; this partly was our own fault, but we concluded to devote our time this season to the farm and allow the houses to remain idle on account of help, all of which turned out to be a bad piece of judgment. We have enjoyed this Fall the greatest call for Dahlia blooms since we have been connected in this business. This is the only good luck we have had for the past two years and we have taken advantage of it.

P. S. The writer is the only one left on this farm, all other employees are either engaged with the Government or at war.

May Become Noxious Weeds

It is said that some seedsmen are offering as ornamental flowering plants or shrubs the seeds of certain plants which really have become pests in certain parts of the country. An instance of this is pointed out by the Rural New Yorker in the case of the Orange Hawkweed (Hieracium aurantiacum) which in some parts of the country is called the Devil's Paintbrush. This becomes a very troublesome weed when neglected, and it is said that there are farms in the northern part of the country which have been practically abandoned because of it.

Fall Garden Work

Probably the war garden will be even a more important factor in the world's food supply next year than ever, whether or not peace is accomplished. It behooves gardeners to prepare for next Spring now. If possible manure should be obtained and applied at a rate amounting to a ton to every 30ft x 30ft area. Street manure, owing to its being mixed with so much oil and gasoline, is not advised. If manure cannot be obtained, tree leaves, weeds and grass clippings may be used. Manure or other material should be plowed or spaded under this Fall. This will assist the vegetable matter to become better decayed and incorporated with the soil, will make the ground capable of earlier working in the Spring, and the turning of the soil will help to destroy many insects which harbor there. People having stiff heavy soils to work with can do nothing better just now than to act on these suggestions.—R. B. Cruickshank, Ohio State University.

Newark, N. Y.—The Nursery trade will regret to learn of the death, on Oct. 18, of Stephen McGauley, veteran nurseryman, at the age of 86. Death was the result of injuries caused by his being accidentally struck by an automobile. Mr. McGauley was said to be one of Newark's oldest residents and had been connected with the nursery business since its beginning here. He was with C. W. Stuart & Co., nurserymen, who found his long experience and wide knowledge of the business of great value.

There will be a decided shortage of Dutch stock, and practically no Lilies of any kind, hence.

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, NARCISSUS, Etc.

must make up the balance. Dutch stock requires very little heat or greenhouse space until a few weeks before selling time, so don't let coal prices or scarcity worry you.

Houston, Texas

Conditions of health are growing better in Houston, but the florists are still rushed with business.

Mr. Eichling, sales manager of R. C. Kerr, has returned to his duties after successfully resisting a siege of sickness. He says that business is still brisk and that the past month will prove the biggest in the history of the business. He is getting pompons from the R. C. Kerr Co. and some of the larger 'Mums and a good grade of Roses.

Mr. Cluxton, the Blue Bell King of Texas, visited florists this week. He has made a big business of selling this beautiful blue wild flower. At the age of 83 he is still vigorous, and is contemplating increasing the Blue Bell business by buying more land and planting the seed in great quantity. All that the flower needs is planting, as cultivation rather than aiding in its growth appears to harm it.

The florists are at present using wild flowers with success—Baccharis, Helianthus and Leatris. Baccharis, popularly called "Piney," a small white flower, is used successfully in funeral decorations. The prairie is full of it at this season, so it may be had for the trouble of gathering.

The Q. & S. florists have had a fine week. C. L. B.

Washington, D. C.

Club Meeting.

The Washington Florists' Club held a meeting on Tuesday evening, Nov. 5. Pres. Blackistone presented an excellent idea in his suggestion for a "Victory Corsage," details of which wil be found in the retail columns of this issue. A committee consisting of George C. Shaffer, chairman; George H. Cooke, Fred H. Kramer, William Marche, and Milton Thomas was appointed to call on all the florists of Washington with a view to securing subscriptions to a "$1,000 slice" of the $170,500,000 United War Work Campaign fund, authorized by the President. It had been intended to have a joint flower exhibition at this meeting but it was postponed. However, William F. Gude showed a number of vases of the firm's new shell pink Carnation, which they have named Democracy. These brought forth considerable favorable commendation. Some of the flowers were 3in. and 4in. in diameter and all were of most pleasing color. Mr. Gude explained that the variety was particularly desirable because the blooms do not split. The firm had intended to offer them for dissemination this year, but conditions prevented it.

There has recently been considerable complaint from the local florists at the late delivery of special delivery mail and telegram. This is especially true of messages coming into Washington. There seems to be no relief in sight from this condition, however.

It is very probable that the florists will continue to open at 10 a.m. This hour was fixed at the beginning of the influenza epidemic, but now the authorities think it advisable to continue the new schedule to relieve the congestion on the street car lines. The new hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Lloyd Jenkins, Louis Bowdler, J. Harper Hetherington and David Grillbortz r, all of whom have been ill with influenza, are both "on the job" again.

Harry A. Bister, Jr., of Hagerstown, Md., was a visitor last week.

Because of the health regulations, Hallowe'en, from a florist's standpoint, did not amount to much, the holiday being marked by the lack of entertainment. There have been plenty of flowers available for the several days of warm weather before Hallowe'en brought out stock in quantities larger than could conveniently be taken in by the local market. Prices dropped from 25 to 50 per cent. over the previous week's quotations. This was particularly true of Roses, although 'Mums, Carnations and all other flowers suffered a decrease.

For the first time in the 16 years, the annual 'Mum show of the United States Dept. of Agriculture has been held under lock and key. Owing to the ban laid upon public meetings by the health authorities in the campaign against the epidemic, the Superintendent of the Bureau of Plant Industry greenhouses has been unable to throw the exhibit open to the public. Thus thousands of Washington people who have been accustomed to seeing the show year after year have been forced to forego viewing one of the most attractive floral displays ever staged by the department. Only a limited number of persons in official circles have been privileged to see the massed display, though many will have opportunity to see individual blooms from the collection, since by direction of the Secretary of Agriculture, the superintendent is systematically cutting hundreds of magnificent seedlings and sending them to the sick and wounded soldiers in the military hospitals in and about Washington.

Among the dozen or more new varieties featured in this year's show the center of attraction is a great snow white seedling named for Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. This bloom has many of the characteristics of the well established favorite Queen Mary, so the Mrs. Woodrow Wilson bids fair to become a standard commercial variety.

As was the case with last year's show, when the General Pershing was among the leading attractions, the military note is in the ascendancy in the nomenclature of exhibition. Marshal Foch leads the military delegation, a striking Japanese seedling of a deep wine color. Lieutenant General Liggett, named in honor of the American officer who led in the offensive that wiped out the St. Mihiel salient, is an enormous bloom, red with gold reverse, the largest produced by the department greenhouses this season. Another red and gold seedling has been named for Admiral Sims, sailors from English, French and American ships participating in the christening. Beautiful samples of the General Pershing and the General Kuhn of last year's creation, and of the older Marshal Joffre, were among the blooms on view that bore the names of military or naval heroes.

Three magnificent blooms, each red with gold reverse, but each differing from the others in detail, represented the rank and file of the American Army in display. They were named for Corporal James S. Enright and Privates James Bethel Gresham and Merle D. Hay, the immortal three who were the first of many thousand American soldiers to give their lives for freedom on French soil.

Among other new varieties of more or less special interest may be mentioned the Mme. Jusserand, a peach blossom pink named in honor of the wife of the French Ambassador; the Mrs. Asbury F. Lever, irridescent pink, in honor of the wife of the chairman of the House Committee of Agriculture; the Helen Houston, pompon seedling, in honor of the daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture; the Mrs. Helen P. Taylor, white pompon tinged with pink, in honor of the wife of the chief of the bureau of plant industry; the Mrs. Karl F. Kellerman, brick red with gold reverse, in honor of the wife of the assistant chief of the bureau; and the Mrs. Holbrook Blinn, variegated pink pompon, in honor of the wife of the well known actor, now touring with Blanche Bates in the war play "Get Together." E. A. D.

Baltimore, Md.

The Baltimore Florists and Gardeners' Club will hold its next meeting at its usual hall on Monday, Nov. 11, R. A. Vincent, president. The trade is reminded that Robert Pyle will at this meeting give his highly interesting illustrated lecture on Roses.

Lehigh Valley Florists' Club

The florists of Allentown, Pa., and vicinity have organized a society to be known as the Lehigh Valley Florists' Club. There are several progressive florists in Allentown, who feel that, by cooperating among themselves and with the florists in nearby towns many things can be accomplished that will advance the florist's profession in this prosperous and growing locality. John F. Horn has been elected president and Ernest Ashley secretary and treasurer. Both are well known Allentown florists.

Lancaster, Pa.

The lull in funeral work is gratefully received, even if it is allowing flowers to accumulate in the greenhouses.

Mrs. Spera is back "on the job" at the B. F. Barr & Co.'s establishment.

Rudolph Nagle, our principal 'Mum grower, was fortunate enough to have almost his entire cut right in the rush for flowers and his next house will not be in for a while, so that he promises to miss the reaction from the unnatural demand of the past few weeks. He is cutting Sweet Peas in November this season instead of waiting until April.

At the H. D. Rohrer establishment A. K. Rohrer, who usually manages this end of the establishment, has been ill with pneumonia but is getting along nicely at last reports.

The next club meeting will be held on Nov. 21, in the B. F. Barr store room, our regular meeting rooms being wanted for the United War Work drive.

Trip Through Chester County

The gunning season opened on Nov. 1 and Charles M. Weaver, in his Overland car, with Elmer Weaver, Ira Landis and the writer as passengers, started out on a gunning trip for knowledge through Chester County. The start was made at 4:45 a.m. and the first stop made at the establishment of Jas. Brown of Coatsville. Mr. Brown has several houses filled with good Carnations, his favorites being Miss Theo and White Wonder. He has a variety of stock for his retail trade and is meeting the fuel situation with a large house devoted to Radishes, Beets and Lettuce; this house will not be heated and therefore will not be used after cold weather sets in. Like all the retailers he has been working almost continuously day and night during the epidemic, and has been ably assisted by Mrs. Brown. There being room for another passenger, Mr. Brown was added to the party.

Percy Bernard's was the next stop, and here we were met by another machine containing B. J. Passmore of Malvern, Isaac and Ralph Passmore of West Chester and William Cope. Mr. Bernard has solved his fuel problem by growing a house of Tomatoes. He had them in full crop and they are bringing good financial returns. He is trying out the new Carnations and especially likes the varieties Rosalie, Laddie and Crystal White.

The third stop was made at Edwin Marshall's place; his Carnations were top notch stock as they always are. He has a seedling that is a bit deeper in color than Rosalie and which has all the earmarks of a prize winner. Aviator leads in the scarlets, of which he has quite a lot planted, and Crystal White promises to overtop all other whites seen here. Sweet Peas, Myosotis and Mignonette will be grown cool to solve the fuel problem.

Kennet Square is known horticulturally as the home of Wm. Swayne and his greenhouses are always interesting. Here 'Mums in every stage of development and in almost endless variety, both in the large types and in the smaller ones made the trip through the houses a real delight. In addition to all this he has what is perhaps the best house of head Lettuce Chester County ever saw, a house of Radishes just cleaned up, and Carrots sown as a second crop. These are looking fine, but as far as the market is concerned they are something of an experiment. Mr. Swayne was one of the pioneers in the Mushroom industry and Mushroom growing still forms a big part of his business.

Yeatman & Way are large Mushroom growers, with several good sized houses of Sweet Peas. They have been fortunate enough to get a pink and white sport from Yarrawa, a sport which has probably the largest flowers and the longest stems of any Pea ever grown in this section. With a good lot to try out this season, they will be able to tell whether the variety will remain true. Across the road from their place is that of Mr. Scarlet, which is being run under the management of Mr. Parker. This place is also devoted to Sweet Peas and everything is nicely under way for a profitable season.

Being interested in the Mushroom industry, we made a stop at B. Swayne's, where we found modern houses, modern methods and a keen business man; a wonderful success naturally resulting. To mention figures would be to have you doubt the veracity of this article.

Howard Thompson has several houses of good Carnations, a house of Tomatoes and the usual several houses of Mushrooms grown by almost every grower in the vicinity of Kennet Square.

The new 400ft. house of Mr. Richards, as well as the thousands of first class Carnations it contained, were inspected and admired.

Last, but not least, we stopped at the home of Isaac Passmore, near West Chester, and found a wonderful cut of Carnations in the packing room. He has a strain of double Alyssum that is a little better than the average. Material for some new houses was stored up for future use, when the fuel situation has returned to normal. The fuel situation, however, has not been allowed to interfere with improvements in his home, and these have been made with an eye to comfort and convenience that is not often found in the country home. Here our Chester County friends left us and we started for Lancaster, getting back a bit tired, but very much wiser men.

Changed Market Conditions

Conditions have changed considerably in this market since last report. There are plenty of flowers but the demand has fallen off. Although the influenza epidemic is still very bad and the death rate high, there is not the demand for flowers. Perhaps this is due to the increased muts of 'Mums and the heavy supply of long stemmed Roses. Short stemmed Roses are very much in demand, but there are few of them; on account of the large cuts of long stemmed Roses many of them have to be sold at the price of shorts.

'Mums are now arriving in large quantities and sell very well; prices are not as high as they were several weeks ago. There are plenty to be had at $6 to $15 per 100. Pompons are also coming in in large quantities and sell well. Oftentimes they take the place of Carnations, which are still very scarce. There have been a few Carnations on the market and they still hold up well in price. Dahlias are about done for this season; the shipments that arrived this week were not so good and went begging for buyers. The Dahlia season this year was very successful and the growers are all satisfied with their returns. They had their flowers on the market at a time when they were badly needed and benefited by prices which were higher than ever known in the history of the cut flower business.

American Beauty Roses have dropped in price considerably and many are sold at low prices. There are just enough Lilies coming in to hold the price up, which still hangs around $18 and $20 per 100.

There has been a scarcity of all kinds of greens. Most of the fern and Galax pickers have been sick and, along with the shortage of help, they cannot get enough to supply the demand. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are also very scarce. There are some good Valley and orchids on the market which are in good demand.

News of the City

Jas. J. Higgins has returned from his visit to Chicago. He represents A. L. Randall Co. in the Pittsburgh district.

C. C. Phillips has returned to his duties at the McCallum Co. after an illness of two weeks.

Attar of Roses in Bulgaria

According to the Deutsche Balkanzeitung, the production of Attar of Roses in Bulgaria this year is considerably below the yield of 1917. The cold weather—snow and frost—had an unfavorable effect on the Rose gardens. The price paid for Rose leaves averaged 60 stotinki per kilo (5.25 cents per pound, at normal exchange). As the leaves of the 1918 crop were of a poorer quality, 300 pounds of leaves were needed for the manufacture of one ounce of oil, as against 185 to 200 pounds in 1917. In favorable seasons the production of Attar of Roses in Bulgaria amounted to about 11,000 pounds per year. This year the production is expected to reach only about 6,600 pounds.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

"A large part of the solid wealth of the country is vested in Goodwill. It should be protected and safeguarded during war times."

Amidst all the problems of the past few months and the time given over to them, how often have you wondered as to whether things are as they should be with those customers who were steady patrons, year in and year out, before the greater part of the world went to war?

Are these customers representing Goodwill, whose orders in the past have been yours, still being kept in touch with? Or are they being allowed to drift away?

Nursing the old customers is an important phase of business. It's the method for preserving Goodwill—that priceless asset.

Car-o-line warns the soft drink manufacturer, who is on a 50% allowance of sugar and who doesn't propose to advertise, that "some day he may have more sugar than orders."

Then, what! For those who failed to keep in touch now it will mean a long and costly road later.

Knowing that among your florist trade the majority of your customers read THE EXCHANGE the columns of this paper offer the medium whereby you can keep a firm hold on those whose past patronage means much to you in the future.

"We write to state that your columns gave us entire satisfaction in regard to our advertisement. We have sold our entire surplus of plants in less than two weeks. Le Cluse & Le Cluse, Blue Point, L. I."

"From the numbers of the THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE which I have seen, I feel that it is one of the first and most essential items in developing a successful business along our lines of Dahlias and Gladioli. R. L. Roe, Ridgewood, N. J."

GROW THE NEW
Improved Primula Malacoides

To follow early 'Mums, will be just right for March and April if grown cool

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For November and December delivery:

Giant California Hybrid Amaryllis

With the shortage of many of the customary Easter Plants these Giant Flowered Amaryllis which are more easily grown in pots than Easter Lilies and are far more showy, should prove a valuable addition among flowering plants for late Winter, early Spring and Easter use.

We have been familiar with and have watched this particular strain for a number of years; we have not only seen it growing with the originators, but tried them out in pot-culture in our own houses. The flowers are of enormous size: flowers with full rounded broad petals 10 inches in diameter are not unusual, and 5 to 6 flowers to a stem, frequently two stems being pushed to the bulb. In color there are selfs and stripes, ranging from the purest white ground color with rose or red markings to rich orange-scarlet, cherry, crimson and maroon and all with a satin-like lustre, which in the deeper shades shines as though burnished.

Give these a trial, as we feel certain you will be pleased with the result.

Price: Extra Heavy Selected Bulbs, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100, $400.00 per 1000. 50 supplied at 100 rates, 250 at 1000 rates.

The above prices are intended for the Trade only.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Wm. D. Manton, son of Thomas Manton, of Toronto, Ont., Canada, who was recently wounded in the head, is at Colchester Hospital and is progressing favorably.

J. Urban Fox, of Cleveland, Ohio, with the forces in France, writes that his regiment is in active service and that he is having many novel experiences.

H. M. Robinson, Jr., of Boston, Mass., is editing "The Trigger" at Providence, R. I., a paper published by the Naval Rifle Range Force. He is said to be the youngest editor in New England. The paper started three months ago with a circulation of 3000 but has increased to 15,000.

Life for Country: Roses for Mother

A few days ago a soldier just returned from France stepped into Van Bochove's store in Kalamazoo, Mich., and ordered a bunch of flowers to be sent to his dead comrade's mother, saying it was the wish of his comrade that on his return home he should perform this service. Probably it was the last personal gift of a brave and gallant soldier and a big argument justifying the use of flowers even in wartime. Doubtless he could have sent remembrances in many other ways but he chose flowers as his last gift to his mother. What he did most likely many others have also, though perhaps we have not heard of them.

Nor does this incident stand alone for a few months ago we read in The Saturday Evening Post of the Colonel commanding that battle scarred fortress of Verdun presenting the lady correspondent with a bouquet cut from his garden, almost in the first line trenches one might say. Again Mr. Weston's pictures show even in English camps there is still a place for flower beds. Therefore, while disclaiming that flowers will win the war or are in any way essential we may fairly say they fill a certain place in our lives that nothing else will or can.

SAMUEL BATSON.

Rust on Carnations

I grow a few thousand Carnation plants of different varieties. I have trouble with rust; can you please tell me the reason and if there is any remedy for it?—E. V., N. J.

—The best prevention of rust is to plant strong, healthy plants, not weak plants of run out stock, and then to give these plants continuous good culture. Syringing the plants, when they have an attack of rust, should not be practiced. An even temperature, careful watering of the soil only, freedom from insects, ventilation when necessary, and a frequent stirring of the surface of the soil will all tend to eliminate this disease. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture or ammonia solution is sometimes resorted to, but there is much doubt as to whether any benefit results from this practice [illegible] in the benches. With good culture the plants will probably recover after the rust has run its course.

Publications Received

First annual Mid-West Horticultural Exhibition, at Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 10, 11, 12 [illegible], official catalog, program and premium list. Wesley Green, Sec'y Iowa State Hort. Society, Des Moines.

Bacteria, Friends and Foes, bulletin 265, Ontario Dept. of Agri., published at Toronto, Ont., Canada, containing, besides notes on bacteria of ordinary diseases, also interesting information on bacteria in the soil and manure pile and on bacterial diseases of plants; 100 pages, illustrated.

Worcester, Mass.

Business remains good and stock cleans up well at satisfactory prices; Carnations are coming fine now and bring from $2 to $5; Roses, $4 to $10; Violets, $1; pompon and single 'Mums, 50c. to $1 per doz. sprays; regular 'Mums, good quality this season, $1 to $3 per doz.; Lilies, $1.50 per doz. Other flowers such as Dahlias, Cosmos, Candytuft, etc., find a ready market.

The Talk of the Trade

H. F. A. Lange Co., who propagated 'Mums early and started up their large range of glass have been able to keep their retail store well supplied with blooms, even through the big rush of four weeks ago. They are now cutting yellow Bonnaffon.

Walter Currier, local florist, who has a small range of glass, has installed an oil heating arrangement which will be tried out this winter as an experiment. As a safeguard against any costly experiment it is so adjusted that in fifteen minutes it may be changed back to the coal heater. Thus far it has proved satisfactory and is being watched with great interest by local florists and vegetable growers. It is the patent of two local business men and has been used to good advantage in heating residences.

A Woman Manager

The call for help by industries employed in war work has shortened up the supply available to the trade. At the Rhode Island Nurseries at Newport, R. I., 25 employees recently left. The men in the propagating grounds have to a certain extent been replaced by boys; the latter, however, require considerable overseeing. These grounds, where plants are propagated by the 1,000,000, have been under the efficient supervision of Miss Janet Sherman, as manager, who has the complete detail of everything at her finger-tips. The accompanying illustration shows her on the grounds in a garb adapted for the work, and which certainly has many advantages over draggled skirts.

Late-flowering Gladioli

Since the institution of our floral committee, no less than nineteen late flowering Gladioli (among which were two primulinus-hybrids) got a first class certificate, and it seems to us interesting enough to see which of these excellent flowers kept also high worth for the cultivation. The varieties are: Europe (1911), Glory of Noordwyk (1912), Panama (1912), Red Emperor (1912), Sieger (1912), Badenia (1913), Electra (1913), Liebesfeuer (1913), Pink Perfection (1913), Prince of Wales (1913), Loveliness (1914), Mme. Mounet-Sully (1914), White Giant (1914), Flora (1916), Majestic (1916), Mrs. Velthuys (1917), Mrs. Frank Pendleton (1917), Primulinus Jane (1914), Scarletta (1917).

Among these are three of no worth to us, because they are not grown here in quantity; they are Sieger, Badenia and Mme. Mounet-Sully. The latter is a very fine creamy white Gladiolus with Orange scarlet spot, has been imported from abroad where it will certainly be found in large quantities. It is grown here, but gives only few corms. Sieger and Badenia are difficult to grow here, which is a pity, especially for Badenia, the color being so distinct.

Europe is surely one of the best white Gladioli though it is hard to grow. In sandy soil is does not grow well, but does better in heavy soil, specially in clay.

Glory of Noordwyk amazed the whole Gladiolus world in its time. The exceptionally well formed blooms of soft yellow tint held everybody's attention wherever it was shown, but we fear that Glory of Noordwyk will, within a few years, follow Sieger and Badenia in being little grown. This would be a great pity, as Glory of Noordwyk is a Holland grown bulb, which we should like to spread all over the world.

Several Fine Reds

Red Emperor has also known better times. We remember very well how a few of these fine flowers were brought by auto car to the flower show and how enthusiastic people were when they saw them. They were beautiful, indeed; large Amaryllis—like bright red blooms on long strong stems; better and finer they could not be. In general cultivation, however, Red Emperor did not seem quite so good and it must, therefore, be classed among those varieties, which will never be important sorts.

Electra, another red, can be grown here with success, and though the color is not so deep and the flower not so large and round as those of Red Emperor, yet it is a beautiful Gladiolus and will always be highly valued by all growers.

Liebesfeuer is one of the best reds we know, and it is well worthy of being grown. It has many merits; the color is of the finest bright red, many blooms open at one time, and the stem fulfills all requirements. We are sure the Liebesfeuer will always be one of the best commercial sorts, for, besides being an excellent cut flower, this variety is of high value for arranging in groups, as the stems are strong and not too long and the color is beautiful.

Panama and Pink Perfection are two pink Gladioli which are well known. Both are cultivated here pretty easily. Pink Perfection is of a fine, distinct pink color and we sometimes find spikes with an extraordinarily large number of blooms. We surely have here two leading varieties, which, both as cut and garden flowers, possess the most favorable qualities.

Prince of Wales is not to be surpassed for its color, both as a cut and a garden flower. Its soft, fine salmon pink color gives this variety a singular charm. Among all sorts which have been awarded certificates it stands alone. There are many white, red, yellow and pink varieties, but there is only one salmon and that is Prince of Wales. This variety also has a future and will always play an important part in our lists.

And what is there to say of Loveliness? Does it not stand quite apart, in the first ranks because of its color? Loveliness will remain with us. Its exceptional creamy white tint attracts attention, while the very large blooms and long spikes meet the high expectations. Its cultivation is easy, which is another reason for its remaining a standard sort.

A Splendid White

White Giant is really the white giant. Thinking of a giant we picture something big, heavy and stiff. But this can not truthfully be said of White Giant. Large, very large, are the blooms, indeed, but heavy and stiff they are by no means; on the contrary, the form of the separate blooms is such that the whole spike has something of a loose and elegant quality, for no matter how many of the gigantic white blooms are opened the spike remains always attractive. The color is pure white. Sometimes we wish that the bloom might have a slight creamy flake on its lower petals, so that the flowers might seem more alive. Again, however, we think of the Nymegen exhibition when we were surprised by the splendid effect made by the snow white of the blooms against background. White Giant is undoubtedly the best present day white.

Flora is an improved Glory of Noordwyk. The color is soft and yet bright, while the blooms and spikes are excellent.

Majestic is certainly the most brilliant red Gladiolus among the elect. In the field, in the bright sunshine the color is dazzling. It will undoubtedly prove of high value for garden decoration. It can also be used for cut flowers with great success. Our only fear is that the blooms will become too much striped by bad weather. Regarding its worth for cultivation we cannot judge, but we have heard that it grows well and if this is true, it is sure to have a good future.

Mrs. Velthuys in 1917 received a first class certificate. It is quite new and one of the most brilliant Gladioli we know of. The separate blooms often become so large that they make us think of an Amaryllis, while the fiery carmine red color gives it an unusual attractiveness. We once had the pleasure of seeing this variety in the open field, where we noted its vigorous stand and luxurious growth and we shall not easily forget the impression that its color made on us. Mrs. Velthuys is sure to make a great stir in the Gladiolus world.

The last of the 17 is Mrs. Frank Pendleton, an American sort, with fine colored blooms. The dark spots produce a fine effect on the lighter pink shade. The spike is excellent and is different from the other Gladioli named, as the blooms stand somewhat separate, which in my opinion is a noteworthy merit.

From the foregoing it will be seen that among the 17 Gladioli which were awarded first class certificate at Haarlem, ten are of Dutch origin, or at least have been brought into the trade or offered for examination by Hollanders. They are Glory of Noordwyk, Red Emperor, Electra, Pink Perfection, Prince of Wales, Loveliness, White Giant, Flora, Majestic, Mrs. Velthuys. Four of these were of German origin: Europe, Sieger, Badenia, Liebesfeuer. One came from France: Mme. Mounet-Sully while the United States of America gave us two varieties: Panama and Mrs. Frank Pendleton.

Primulinus Hybrids

Only two Primulinus hybrids were awarded first class certificates, namely Jane, in 1914, and Scarletta, in 1917. It may be asked whether between 1914 and 1917 no Primulinus hybrids were offered for examination. In fact several hybrids were offered, but no high certificates were awarded. Since that time, however, the regulations regarding first class certificates have been changed. While Jane got a certificate in the first show, Scarletta had first to receive all the other distinctions before it got the highest. In the years 1915, 1916, 1917 several other varieties were given the award of merit, so that we may expect that varieties of this group will get a prize in the near future.

Jane and Scarletta differ very much in color. Jane is of a very light yellow, with terra cotta tint, while Scarletta is an excellent orange red. Both are excellent and will certainly remain principal sorts.

The culture of the Primulinus hybrid is still in its infancy, but we may expect much of them. That sorts like Jane and Scarletta will be surpassed quickly, we do not believe, however.

Taxus baccata aurea

(Subject of this week's illustration)

In the English Yew, Taxus baccata, we have one of the most beautiful of evergreens, its bright green foliage delighting the eye at every season of the year. And then, though it attains to a very large size as the years add to its age, it is always well clothed with green foliage.

The golden form, to which we especially refer, is most beautiful. Both the golden and the green foliage appear at their best, the combination being most pleasing. This is always most noticeable in late Spring, as the new growth is maturing, the colors of both green and gold being then the most vivid.

Besides the golden form of the normal form of this Yew, there are several others which may well be mentioned here. The most prominent, as seen in our nurseries, is the golden fastigiate one, which one might call the golden Irish Yew, for it has much the same habit of growth, but the name elegantissima and others are applied to it. It and the common form of the golden are but two of the several known as Golden Yews, one and all so much in demand by landscape gardeners. There are many positions where one or the other of them may be set to great advantage.

There is, to the advantage of the Yew in all its varieties, the fact that it transplants with no great difficulty, as it is usually well supplied with roots, and one must keep in mind too, that there is now far more care exercised by nurserymen in the digging and packing of all such trees than before, so that losses are rarely attributable to lack of it.

As to the hardiness of the English Yew and its varieties, it is only where Winters are very severe that this evergreen refuses to thrive. It likes shade from the sun in Winter, as do all evergreens for the matter of that.

The propagation of Yews is not at all difficult. Make cuttings of the Summer's growth in late Autumn, place them in heat under glass, and by Spring one may expect to see them all rooted.

Are all the Plants Labeled in Your Nursery?

Visitors to a nursery naturally expect to find the stock neatly labeled whether it be by common or botanical name. To use both is a common practice and it educates employee and customer alike. Stock taking usually includes checking up of the labels, but if, in the hurry to complete the count, time has not been taken to write labels, now, before digging of orders begins attention should be given this important work.

To consider labeling as one of the non-essentials in the upkeep under present labor conditions is a mistake. Of course the experienced hands, in filling orders, know the identity of plants without their labels, but what if the experienced hands leave for better paying positions or to enlist with Uncle Sam? The employment of inexperienced workers is unavoidable these days, but their efficiency can be greatly increased if they find all plants labeled for them. They are more quickly instructed and what is just as important, there is not the likelihood of the customer getting a plant not true to name. The visitor, too, is impressed favorably when he notes a neatly written or printed label at the beginning of each row of plants, and can find enjoyment in looking over the stock alone, should the salesman be busy with other customers.

Incidentally, if the labels be a 2in. or 3in. wide stake, such as is commonly used, drive it in with the broad side or written fair parallel to the row. It is less likely to be hit by the swing tree or whippletree in hoe harrowing or cultivating than if driven at right angles with the row. If stakes require too much time at this late date, use a 6in. painted label or even the 3½in. painted copper wired label, which is quickly applied, and though small, is better than none. It should be attached to the first plant in the row.

If your Althæas (Hibiscus syriacus) are mixed, check up and label the colors before they go out of bloom. Another possible mixture and one which the writer noticed in a nursery recently, is Hydrangea paniculata and H. paniculata præcox, all under the former name. H. paniculata is more common and perhaps the buyer of same would not object to receiving the earlier flowering type (præcox) mixed with the purchase, but it might not work out so well if all præcox were wanted. Such mixtures are bound to happen in planting the nursery, but when noticed the plants should be individually marked to prevent their being sent out under the wrong name.

High class stock will build a reputation but confidence is best obtained by being conscientious in furnishing plants true to name.

Women in the Nursery

The time has passed—if such a belief ever existed—that women in the nursery are regarded as an intrusion and as usurping the duties of men. With the reduction of man power, one daily notes the entrance of women into vocations hitherto held exclusively by men. Duties, which in times past would have been regarded as menial and befitting those in poor circumstances are now being performed—and successfully, too—by the most intelligent classes, college girls, if you please.

If other business concerns have seen fit to employ women successfully to solve the labor problem, why not the nurserymen? There are many light duties about the nursery which women might perform satisfactorily. The idea is not new; the following are but a few instances which recently came to the writer's attention in a nursery where women are doing men's work. Weeding of seed beds and herbaceous borders, previously performed by young men and boys, was done by school girls, affording them a healthful and lucrative vacation employment. The same corps followed men pruners in a young orchard, painting the cuts; with a little more time for instruction and experience, these young women might well have done the pruning too. A nice batch of shrub cuttings, carefully lined out in coldframes, was the handiwork of young women from the office force, as was the shearing and training of small evergreens.

Many other duties might well be performed by women, namely, budding, potting of plants, assembling and packing for shipment of small plants (herbaceous perennials or small potted Roses, etc.); directing laborers in the digging of orders; assisting the shipping clerks in addressing bags or packages; picking seed, etc. Every nurseryman has similar positions to be filled and if male help is scarce why not turn to women for assistance as a solution of the labor problem?

Incidentally, if the office staff is large and likely to have some idle moments this Winter the loyal ones surely would not object to the soiling of hands by departing from clerical work to aid the employer in these turbulent times.

Senecio clivorum

Would you have a bold display in partial shade; on the edge of a woodland or in low moist ground; bold in foliage as well as in the display of flowers? Then plant Seneci clivorum (Groundsel.) The plant grows to a height of 2ft. to 3ft. and just above the heart shaped leaves, which are frequently one foot across, appear the orange yellow Daisy-like flowers, each 2in. to 3in. across and in clusters of eight to ten on the single, fleshy stem.

The blooming period covers the last two or three weeks in August and early September, but even when not in flower the foliage is attractive and appropriate where a bold display is wanted. Although introduced by Wilson from China there should be no objection to its use in a Japanese garden and a group of plants seen recently, used in this connection, looked very much at home and gave the impression that once established they soon form a substantial colony. The plant is quite hardy and the blooms are good for cutting. Seed offers ample means of reproduction.

SAMUEL NEWMAN BAXTER.

The Sea Lavender

The "airiness" which Baby's Breath (Gypsophila paniculata) lends to a bouquet of cut flowers justifies its popularity in being regarded as indispensable. A hardy plant not as well known, but equally as suitable for bouquets is the Sea Lavender (Statice latifolia) which blooms a few weeks later in August. It grows to a height of 2½ft. and one plant, though having only one or two main stems, will spread two or three feet across, with its branches well laden with lavender blooms resembling tiny Lilac flowers.

The plant's only foliage consists of a few large leaves at the base; in this respect the foliage of Sea Lavender is quite different from leaves of Baby's Breath, whose small leaved foliage is borne all along the branches. The foliage of neither plant, however, is essential to its attractiveness, which is due rather to the mist-like effect of the flowers. As Baby's Breath gives the white "mist," the use of Sea Lavender will produce the lavender "mist." The blooming period of Sea Lavender covers two or three weeks in August, to which we might add a week for the flowers when in bud, for they may be cut in this condition—when they are more nearly white—and used for bouquets. The blooms will last for some time; in fact, they may be dried and retained as Winter bouquets. Propagation is by seed; in the nursery plants will frequently spring up from seed of the parent plants nearby. Statice is frequently used as a plant for rock gardens, and considering the fact that this is also true of America (Thrift) and Plumbago Larpentæ (Leadwort), it would seem that the Leadwort family (Plumbaginaceæ) to which they all belong, is truly a wall garden tribe.

This is No Time to "Sob"

But a good time to get busy. This sentence was contained in a recent newsletter from Kalamazoo. Read it. S. B. quite often has the ability to hit off, in a sentence, a column of meaning. He has surely done so in this quotation.

Let each one of those of us who are in nonessential employments get busy, intelligently so, and we will pull through with credit to ourselves and credit with the bank.

The "survival of the fittest" is an expression which is often abused through being introduced in the wrong place or at the wrong time, but it strikes us forcibly that it fits in well with the present day situation of the florist and the nurseryman and others in the non-essential-to-winning-the-war class. With us it most surely is going to be the survival of the fittest, this time, but then we can all emerge as survivors, and fairly husky ones at that, if we will but follow S. B.'s optimistic yet thoroughly practical advice.

Our Big Cities in the Fourth Liberty Loan

A retrospect of the Fourth Liberty Loan bonds subscribed for by the florists in our various large cities shows that so far as New York, Philadelphia and Chicago are concerned the amounts of purchases were remarkably close.

One might say that New York, so much larger a city than the others, should have subscribed more money than it did, but when we look at the conditions surrounding the trade in New York, this will not hold. There are really no growers in the city limits and many of the larger seedsmen subscribed through other agencies than the Florists' Committee, and thus the amount was raised almost entirely by the retail and wholesale florists. Within the confines of Chicago and Philadelphia, however, are quite a number of growers. In Chicago, on account of its central locality, the wholesale florists handle more business than the New York men, while Philadelphia also has the advantage of being the headquarters for the supply trade. Boston, unfortunately, did not have a committee of florists and allied trades. We hope than when the next loan comes along that city will surely appoint one.

The totals raised, so far as our information goes, are as follows: Philadelphia leads with $420,000; Chicago $382,050; New York City $389,500.

"Have you ever been arrested before for reckless driving?" "No, your honor! This is the first decent running car I have owned." N. Y. Globe.

Sweet Alice's new job has brought forth these lines from the poet of the Syracuse Herald:

Oh, don't you remember sweet Alice, old sport,
Sweet Alice, so languid and pale,
Who shuddered aghast at the mention of work,
And fainted at sight of a snail!
On a fertile farm in the valley, old sport,
Far removed from the big city's thrall,
There are all sorts of lassies at back-breaking tasks,
And sweet Alice works hardest of all!

Reviewing the Coal Situation

To rush to the conclusion, as one of our contemporaries put it last week, that florists everywhere are to have one hundred per cent. coal without further let or hindrance, must have been most disappointing to any who chanced to rely upon that misinformation.

In THE EXCHANGE, issue of Nov. 2, page 689, the limits of the new ruling were most fully set forth.

The only coal released to commercial florists was bituminous or steam anthracite, which means any anthracite below No. 1 Buckwheat, and in size down to dust. These fuels were obtainable in any quantity without reference or regard to the fifty per cent. coal curtailment order of April 24, 1918, "Whenever there is a surplus of such fuel which, in the opinion of the State Administrator, can be spared for such purpose," etc.

The final decision, it is thus easily seen, rests entirely with the Fuel Administrator of each State.

Here is where the State Vice-Presidents of the S. A. F. and O. H. and the officials of local florists' clubs have an opportunity to be of service in cases where their State Fuel Administrator is obdurate; it would be their duty to make an investigation on their own account as to the facts of scarcity or otherwise.

As to the use of bituminous coal: Experts informed us last week (see page 689) that it was not a difficult matter to adjust an anthracite grate to burn soft coal. Florists who have had this experience and have been successful in changing from one fuel to another without changing their grates would confer a favor on their brothers in trade by telling just how they accomplished it—if their way was different from that which we have already published.

Bituminous coal seems likely to be the brand on which florists will have to depend mainly in the future; that is, those who have been using anthracite. Would it not be well, in view of this, for the hitherto hard coal consumers to equip themselves with grates built especially to take soft coal? The expense, we are informed, is but a trifle as against all the advantages presented; the principal one being at the present moment that if a grower can get the bituminous coal (which seems fairly possible) he can maintain his range through this Winter at full capacity.

Fertilizer Crisis Imminent

The National Fertilizer Association declares that the only way to avert a crisis in the distribution of fertilizers next Spring is to order supplies now for earliest possible delivery. Many fertilizer factories are so short handed that production cannot be managed on the old basis of a grand rush during late Winter and early Spring, but only by the most efficient and continuous use of the available help from now forward, and by the shipment of material as soon as prepared. This will eliminate double and triple handling and, it is believed, will make possible the meeting of demands. It will also insure receipt of supplies well in advance of the season and thus avoid delays due either to the holding of orders until reached in their due sequence or to slow deliveries by transportation companies.

The situation a year ago was thought to be serious enough when fertilizer companies were able to fill a maximum of only 75 to 85 per cent. of their orders. Since then the demands of the draft and the calls for men to work in shipbuilding, munition making, war material manufacture and other lines has reduced the available labor in fertilizer factories 30 to 40 per cent. So it is imperative that manufacturers utilize these depleted forces at the highest possible efficiency. This means continuous manufacture and daily shipments. Hence it behooves florists, vegetable and fruit growers to plan their next season's work now and order the fertilizer needed now.

There is no reason to believe that the labor situation will be sufficiently improved in the next six months to approach an antewar basis. Indeed, manufacturers look for even worse conditions. Not only for their own interests but to aid both manufacturers and the whole country, growers must help to the limit. They must order and accept early shipment and use their own buildings for storage, so much is being requisitioned by the Government.

We have all reduced our consumption of Wheat, meat, sugar, gasolene and dear knows what not, as war measures. This new "war measure" must be accepted as a patriotic duty; but like money invested in Liberty bonds and War Savings Stamps, it will bring its reward; for fertilizers are needed to increase production and to secure better prices. The money invested now in fertilizers will be returned with interest at the close of the crop sason; whereas that sent later to manufacturers and dealers may be returned by the next mail, because the order cannot be filled!

Are you too Busy—or Don't you Care?

We are, after many years, still looking for the day to come when our readers will make it a practice to write us freely on the subjects uppermost in trade circles. For instance, there is Plant Exclusion or Restriction, one of the most pregnant subjects of recent years, yet we fail to hear to any appreciable extent from those affected—favorably or adversely. In other lines of business the pros and cons would have had their innings and readers thus been given a more general idea of what it all means.

Are our people so busy that they cannot find time to write, or so indifferent that they don't care?

All things change, including the methods of handling a trade paper. Long drawn out essays and cultural articles must give way to shorter and more "snappy"—yes, snappy is the best way to express it—material articles which go right into the heart of the problems having to do with everyday business. And of such there is no end—yet the editor cannot do it all, the pointers must come to him from the outside if a trade paper is to be lifted out of chronic monotony.

Now here's something for catalog makers—nurserymen, perhaps, more particularly—to dwell on. Subject introduced by John Watson, of the Princeton Nurseries N. J., who, recently sent us a copy of "A Book About Princeton Products," handsomely illustrated and printed and dedicated to the Nurserymen of America. With the catalog he sent a letter which makes good reading for many more than the Editor. Here it is:

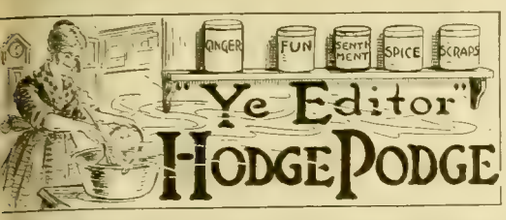
Because I think it will interest you as a piece of printing, and as a maker of fine catalogs yourself, and because it is distributed to the trade in war times, I am sending you a copy of the Princeton Nurseries trade list.

I can't help but feel that the present tendency on the part of so many nurserymen to cut down their advertising and to reduce their catalog expense is a serious mistake. Certainly we have to save paper. But it is poor economy to save it in the direction of possibly reducing the planting of such essentials as ornamental and fruit bearing trees and plants. The Government does not regard as non-essential the use of full pages in the Saturday Evening Post to advertise Victor Talking Machines and records. We nurserymen have been given every sort of encouragement by the Secretary of Agriculture, declaring that there should be no let-up in the planting of fruit trees, particularly; and the Director General of Railroads has placed nursery stock in the list of things entitled to priority movement when in the hands of the transportation companies. The distribution of the things that we nurserymen grow has been declared by at least three of the departments in Washington as being vital and absolutely essential.

It would seem to be necessary then only for us to convince ourselves that our activities are not useless and that our business is worth while. It seems to me that this is the very time of all times for us to push our business to the utmost. The wholesale nurseryman is decidedly handicapped, because he cannot create a demand nor develop a market; he can sell only when the retail nurserymen—the distributors—are selling more than they are producing. Our lists addressed to the trade, then, is sent out with this idea. We have tried to make it a handsome list and we have earnestly endeavored to make it an intelligent list. Our aim has been to tell the reader something about our stock and to give him an idea, with comment and illustrations, of its quality. And we have frankly stated the grounds upon which we invite orders from the distributing nurserymen.

It may be unusual to use Warren's 75 pound Cameo Sepia and double-tone brown ink for printing the list. These are not cheap things, as you know, and these illustrations, made from photographs taken for the purpose, represent some outlay. And then, giving over the two cover pages—the most important in any book—to pictures of non-commercial things not at all suggestive of the contents of the book, may be flying in the face of all advertising rules; but I believe those pages have a value and I believe that the man who sees the outside of this book is going to have his interest aroused sufficiently to see the inside of it. We nurserymen are farmers and not experts in preparing advertising matter. But I notice that many advertisers fall into the mistake of talking to themselves instead of talking to their audiences. Sometimes I think we are so close to our own propositions that we cannot see them as they are, but rather as we think they are, or as we think they ought to be; and so whatever we say in our advertising is colored by our own viewpoint and our personal opinions, and we fail to get the viewpoint of the people we are addressing. And in advertising—whether in books, or in papers or in letters—it seems to me it is necessary to know what the other fellow thinks or wants to know and to talk to him from his standpoint. In making up this list, I have tried to make myself the "other fellow." I don't know how successful I have been in the effort to make this a book that ought to bring orders. I shall soon find out.

Mr. Watson has had the courage to issue a good catalog. Several other nurserymen have done likewise this Fall. These efforts may pay and they may not—directly. But if everything else is equal, including careful distribution, and if these efforts are followed up—and the follow-up quite often does the clinching—intelligently, there can be no question of ultimate success, a far more appreciable success than would come to the man who does not put his heart and soul and his good dollars into the planning and making of his catalog—a good catalog is the basis of success.



We can all profit from a great deal of advice by not taking

We florists and flowers are "essential." My, but we're glad hear this; maybe we are like sugar and flour, essential, but can't be used too freely. Now we can make up our uquets and look happy while we're doing so, for the florists d those who work in flowers are very like the old song:

Employees in Greenhouses Are Not Compelled to Seek War Work

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., ever zealous of the welfare of the trade, again sets at rest the rumors and newspaper stories which have been going the rounds to the effect that florists must quit their work in the greenhouses, seek war work, or be forthwith inducted into the Army.

Employers should explain this matter to their men. Follows Mr. Gude's letter and the official reply thereto.

You will remember my letter under date of Sept. 10, 1918, giving my interview with General Crowder and his statement that florists should not be unduly exercised about being drafted into war work.

On last Sunday (Oct. 27) I received a special delivery letter, enclosing a half page from a daily newspaper, with the statement that all persons in the florist's business from 18 to 65 should either quit their jobs at once or be drafted into military service.

On receipt of this I immediately arranged an audience with the War Industries Board, Priority Division, Washington, D. C., because if there was anything that I could do to help florists East or West, North or South, I would do it. The audience was on Monday, Oct. 28, at 2 p.m., at which I presented the letter from Denver, with the clipping from the paper.

After a pleasant conference at which I presented our case, stating that my mission was not to obstruct war industry but to conserve the florist industry as well as every other industry as much as possible while the war was going on, they then told me that I should have a written communication next day.

I am now enclosing you the official communication of the War Industries Board, which I trust you will print in full and which should reassure all florists.

October 30, 1918

From: Chief of Labor Section, Priorities Division.

To: W. F. Gude, 1214 F. st., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Subject: Florists' labor.

1. You have called our attention to a letter dated Oct. 24, addressed to you from Davis & Whitney, Attorneys at Law, Denver.

2. This letter states among other things in substance that a United States Employment Service agent in Denver has stated to men who are working as florists that unless they absolutely quit their jobs before Nov. 1 they will be inducted into the military service immediately; further that this covers every man between the ages of 18 to 56.

3. If an employment agent made such a statement we think it was unauthorized. The fact that a man is employed in a florists' establishment would not in all probability entitle him to consideration for deferred classification on industrial grounds, but such a man, provided he is not a clerk in a florists' store, is not engaged in a nonproductive occupation within the meaning of General Crowder's present "work or fight" order, and would not lose his right to deferred classification on dependency grounds, or his order number, and be inducted into service because he chose to remain in his employment. This is in accordance with the present law and regulations.

4. You will understand that this does not apply to a clerk in a florist's store who comes within the "work or fight" order.

5. You will agree with us that the florist business is among the less essential businesses. The need for most effectively utilizing the man power of the country in the present emergency demands that so far as possible able bodied men should be either in the service or in some war industry, and it is perfectly proper that such men should be encouraged by the Employment Service, or by anyone else, to get into a war industry. It is not, however, as we have said, proper to use as a means of compulsion a statement which is not justified.

(Signed) A. W. CLAPP,
Chief of Labor Section
Priorities Division.

Make a Profit

[The Michell Seed House of Philadelphia has become so imbued with the fact that many florists charge too little, that it has reviewed the situation and presented the case as florists should see it. After reading what it has to say those florists whom this affects should experience a change of heart for their own good and for that of the trade.—Ed.]

These three words on a sign stand out very conspicuously on the wall in the office of the head of a large department store in Philadelphia. The sentence is short, but it means so much! Yes, more than most of us in business stop to realize.

Many florists today are basing their selling prices of cut flowers, plants, and for services rendered, on olden time costs. Conditions have changed, labor has advanced, hours have been shortened, delivery service by auto in many cases has been forced upon them—everything that enters into the conduct of the business (including everything you buy to sell again, such as seeds, bulbs, pots, supplies, etc.) costs much more.

Look at the price of coal! Wax paper costs now double what it did a year ago. Cotton twine in three years has increased about five times its former value. In fact, we could go on in an endless citation of things like this.

Have you increased your selling prices for plants, cut flowers, funeral designs and labor performed for your customers? If not, why not?

Every florist knows the cost of everything he buys; he should also know the cost (and he can easily figure it) of everything he grows himself, and the cost of any labor he performs, and add a fair profit for his services. The public does not want to be squeezed, but it is willing to pay a fair price for anything it wants. In every line (except the horticultural industry) unheard of prosperity is being enjoyed, and that same prosperity is right at hand for the florist.

One of our representatives was recently in the retail store of a florist in a town that is doing an enormous volume of war work, when a prospective customer came in and asked the price of funeral designs, whereupon he was informed that this ranged from $2.50 up to $5. The prospective customer walked out without leaving an order. And why?

The price quoted appealed to the buyer as too low. He wanted something better than that offered, and he was willing to pay for it, which he did elsewhere later in the same town. Imagine the folly of quoting such a price! And cut flowers at the premium they have been for several weeks! The florist didn't stop to think that tinfoil costs double; wire costs about three times; twine costs five times, and paper twice its normal price.

Some florists are still selling Geraniums in 4in. pots (the pot going with them) for 10c. They think they can't get more than 12c. or 15c. for an Easter Lily flower or a Hyacinth.

Man, it costs you more than that to grow these items, so don't figure that you've made a profit. You have actually lost money, and the quicker you realize it, the better.

Mr. Florist, this little reminder has been written in your interests. If you want to make a profit, be able to pay your bills when due, make a living and be able to lay something aside for a rainy day, which is your just due, charge fair prices; make a profit. Start today. Now.

The dreams of the newly fledged gardening suburbanite do not immediately come true. Inexperience and other adverse circumstances have accounted for many failures and disappointments, and lack of perseverance has led unlucky ones to abandon all hope of success. Here's an example: They decided to live in the suburbs, and nothing would do but they must have a garden. They were almost speechless over first Radishes, but their ardor cooled when their Lettuce refused to head, their Onion seeds yielded unbelieveably small Onions and predatory rabbits ate all their Peas. "But Tomatoes?" questioned a sympathetic caller. "They are so easy to raise. Surely you had good luck with them?" "They were the worst disappointment of all!" wailed the bride. You know there are two kinds of Tomatoes and we thought,, we were planting the red kind, but those horrid old Tomato bushes are just covered with green ones, which we don't want at all, as we never eat pickles."—P.

Obituary

John Mackie

John Mackie, of the firm of Armstrong & Mackie, retail florists, Eighth ave., at 45th st., New York City, died at the age of 31, of pneumonia following influenza, at the home of his mother in New York City on Sunday, Oct. 27. The funeral services were held at the Holy Cross Church in this city on Thursday, Oct. 31, and the interment was at Madonna Cemetery, Fort Lee. Mr. Mackie was the brother of William Mackie, the wholesale florist of 105 West 28th st. He was a member of the Elks, Knights of Columbus, Woodmen of the World and several other fraternities. He was unmarried.

Joseph A. Becvar

We regret to hear of the death of Joseph A. Becvar, on Oct. 24, at his home at Sayville, N. Y., after a short illness of pleurisy. The funeral services were held at his late residence on Lakeland ave. Mr. Becvar was born on Nov. 28, 1885. He began his life work with L. Noe, of Madison, N. J., then became private gardener for W. K. Vanderbilt, going from the latter employment to become head gardener for Eben Richard, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y. About three years ago he engaged in business for himself as a commercial grower and florist and continued these activities until his death. He had been a subscriber to The Florists' Exchange for the past 17 years, was for some time a member of the New York Florists' Club, and belonged to the Royal Arcanum and Foresters of America. Mr. Becvar leaves a widow and two children.

Suggestions for Thanksgiving Day Local Newspaper Advertisements

Thanksgiving, this year of 1918 calls for advertising of an entirely different order. For that reason we have taken the liberty of presenting on this page four advertising suggestions for that day compiled by members of The Florists' Exchange staff as being the most appropriate feature for this week's Retail Department.

(A Suggested Advertisement for Thanksgiving Day—By J. H. S., of The Florists' Exchange staff)

Thanksgiving Flowers

If you are thankful this Thanksgiving Day to the All-Giver that the darkness of the hideous night of imperialism and militarism is giving way to the dawn of that day,

"When the war drum beats no longer and the battle flags are furled
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world—"

If you are grateful for the nourishment of your body and mind and spirit, and for whatever you have done in the past year to help your fellow men, and they have done to help you, "Say it with Flowers," the sweetest and most universal language ever spoken by man.

Flowers for Thanksgiving Day

THERE will be no turkey this year, it is true. One kind has gone to the soldiers (for which they are thankful); the other kind has gone to the dogs (for which we are thankful). BUT

There will be plenty of flowers and we can offer you the best on the market:

CHRYSANTHEMUMS, great, rich, wonderful blooms, a joy and delight, in yellow, white and other colors.

ROSES, American Beauties in perfection; other kinds in profusion, no less attractive.

CARNATIONS, piquantly scented, bright colored and cheerful.

All these and other kinds to adorn the Thanksgiving Day table and add to the pleasure of the festive meal.

Also Corsages for personal adornment, as a sign of joy and thanksgiving for the victories of our boys "Over There."

Or tastefully arranged baskets of blooms for intimate personal gifts.

All at moderate prices, but of unquestioned quality.

Remember your friends or dear ones in distant places; we can send them floral messages by F. T. D. (Our system of telegraphic delivery.) "Say it with flowers."

Will You Give Thanks?

The Civil War ended over fifty-three years ago, and no doubt Thanksgiving Day, 1865, was an event of events, a celebration the memory of which some of our citizens still retain.

With sorrow for those who had fallen was mingled the joy that Peace prevailed and a United Country was existent to face the world. The result of the Civil War has led to the results now accomplishing in the Great War.

So this Thanksgiving of 1918 sees us nearing the millennium, the end of all wars. It should be a "day of days," only to be surpassed by that of 1919, when "our boys" have come home and can sit at the table with us.

Your rooms as well as your table should be profusely decorated with flowers and greenery, emblematic of hearts filled with rejoicing—without these accessories the spirit of the day will be sadly lacking.

We will have in stock for that day everything seasonable in flowers, Autumn leaves and greenery.

We will be delighted to have you call and examine our stock and to make you an outline of the decorating we can do for you at a modest outlay, for Thanksgiving, 1918. Or call us up, phone ....

Table Decoration, suitable for Thanksgiving Day, by Walter Van den Hengel

Centerpiece of fruit and yellow 'Mums. Yellow pompon 'Mums used in the wreath effect. Roses may be employed in the centerpiece and touches of color added to increase the variety.

Do not make the centerpiece too low, as it is objectionable to have the view across the table obstructed. If the National Colors could be suggested without interfering with the color harmony the appropriateness of the decoration would be enhanced

Bad Odors in the Floral Shop

[This article has not been written or published for those florists whose stores are typified in the first paragraph, but for such few as do not appreciate the business assets of fragrance and neatness.—Ed.]

Comments are sometimes heard concerning the beauty of the larger floral shops, and the wonderful odor of fragrant flowers. Some shops are veritable fairylands in this respect. Taste and refinement enjoy visiting them.

How unlike this description are some of the small shops, especially those on side streets in the larger cities, where the owner, his wife and relatives do all the work, make little attempt to keep the place bright and fragrant, and where cooking is done in the store proper.

In the floral business during rushes, time means everything. With a small force the florist hasn't time for trips to the restaurant or home, so his shop is equipped with a dining room or a gas stove upon which coffee, soup, canned goods, etc., are hurriedly prepared. A good dining room is a great advantage to any florist, but it should always be on the second floor so odors may not permeate the store proper. It should never adjoin the main store, with a doorway opening directly into the store. Nor should it be in the basement.

Two cases the writer knows of are especially interesting. In one a florist, employing about ten people in normal times, has a kitchen and dining room in the basement. As the building is old and there are numerous small openings between the basement and the main store, odors of coffee, soup, onions, cabbage, etc., fill the store whenever a meal is on the stove. The operator in the adjoining store has been wrangling for years with the florist because the cooking odors permeate his store through the party wall. He often has to tell his patrons that he isn't cooking soup, but that his neighbor is.

In the other store a woman who has been operating the shop for years, cooks all her meals in the rear of the store, though her room is nearby. The coffee pot is nearly always on the stove. Onions are peeled at the main work bench, which is used for a table. It is not unusual on entering the shop, to be almost knocked over by the smell of cooking food, and to find a meal in progress in the rear of the store.

In the same city a florist, who is conducting a high class establishment, and endeavoring to keep it clean and fresh, is bothered by a restaurant established next to him after he had installed a fine store. He has had a steady fight to prevent the restaurant's cockroaches from wandering all over his store, and it has been impossible to keep out all the odors, though the restaurant owner has installed exhaust fans in the kitchen to drive the fumes out at the roof, and though crevices have been tightened as much as possible.

A Mrs. Malaprop once spoke of the "effluvia" of the beautiful Roses in her neighbor's yard, not knowing the true meaning of the word. Webster defines the word as "disagreeable exhalations arising from decayed matter." Such floral shops as described send forth odors which suggest effluvium, but much of this could be readily stopped if the florist took time to consider what it means to his business. A barber shop has usually a pleasant odor due to use of scented soaps, etc. The old fashioned drug stores used special preparations to give an attractive odor. Even today some druggists use perfume to spray their stores in order to make an attractive atmosphere.

MISS McCARRON

There is no trade medium published that begins to equal THE EXCHANGE in giving returns to its advertisers. Test it yourself

An attractive atmosphere, both of the air and the general outlay of the store, means much to the florist, and brings business. The woman of refinement, who has just eaten a good meal is likely to become sick or faint upon entering a store and being struck by odors of cooking. While cooking food smells good to a hungry person, it has a different effect when one has just been fed.

The stables and garages of small growing and retailing shops should be far removed from the store; manure or fertilizer piles well in the background; stale flowers, which begin to get sour, should be removed, and not thrown into a nearby box, but carried to a distance.

Florists are today getting much better prices than ever before. These are justified. However, shops operated in a haphazard way, cannot expect to get prices obtained by the better ones, nor to secure the same class of business.

A short time ago a florist operating a disagreeable small shop on a side street, commented on the prices that a leading florist was getting. The little fellow considered that the public is crazy for paying the prices asked. He was getting $1 to $1.50 for Roses that the larger competitor was getting $2 and $2.50 a doz. for. It isn't a question of the side street so much as of the appearance of the side street shop, and the general atmosphere of the place. Customers entering the large shop would in realty rather pay $3 a dozen for good stock, than $1.50 and be compelled to go into a dirty shop, where service is bad, and general conditions worse.

Attention to these small details will put many a dollar into the pocket of the retailer. Of course, some of the little fellows, who haven't much help, and who would probably have to close shop to go out to lunch, are rather hard pressed for a hot meal. However, the Thermos bottle will hold coffee or tea hot for many hours. Missing a hot meal once a day isn't likely to hurt anyone, as hot meals in the middle of the day are mainly a matter of habit. A cold lunch with a bottle of hot coffee, is good enough for anyone. Meals of this sort may be readily eaten without smelling up the whole place. It would in fact be much better to close the store for a half hour, and go to a nearby restaurant, or secure an assistant to watch the store.

Food and flowers will not mix. It is the beauty of flowers that appeals to the artistic temperament and results in the large sales. There is nothing artistic about rough food or the smell it gives off when cooking. Much food is artistic by the time the chef gets through with it and it is properly served, but coffee, onions, soups, etc., in the floral shop hardly appeal to the artistic in anyone.

A. W. Williams.

A Password as Well as a Slogan

Business everywhere during the present period, especially in the florist's line, has gone beyond the expectations of all of us, of course in a great measure due to the unfortunate epidemic which necessitated everyone's being worked to the limit, employer and employee alike, and everybody from the wireworker to the grower sharing in the rush to fill orders which came from all directions.

Now, during a rush like the present we are apt to forget the condition of the future, as for instance, where the demands for flowers have been many on account of the influenza epidemic, there would be a curtailment of flowers for personal use later on, due to the fact that the unusual expenditure by the customer will alter conditions.

It is up to us to keep the ball rolling by continually advertising our slogan "Say it with Flowers."

Now, many may ask, "Why advertise our product when we have a shortage of flowers, as perhaps will be the case later?" Do you realize that when you create the demand you also stimulate production so that there will be something to fill the bill, if not in one kind of stock, then in some other sort?

Have you noticed how many manufacturers have been advertising their product to the public, although the Government has commandeered their entire output for the period of the war? This is done for the sole purpose of holding the good will of the public, so that the product may not be forgotten when times become normal again.

What do you think the slogan will mean to every tthinking man, woman or child, when doubt arises as to what to send to mother, father, sister or brother? Do you realize the effect it will have? And if all who use printer's ink will make use of our slogan, do you realize what the future has in store for you?

Go the limit with the slogan and you will merit the benefits more and more.

Giving Service

If the Florists' Telegraph Delivery is to achieve the success and the proportions which are open to it, namely, to cover the United States, Canada, England, France and later on encircle the world, all of which is its legitimate field, and readily within the possibilities, those who are in it now, the pioneers of the movement—for many as they are today they constitute but the vanguard of the great membership that can be created—these pioneers, we repeat, must see to it that the foundations are laid broad and deep.

The F. T. D. itself might well issue a sort of catechism and confer membership only aften an applicant had satisfied the Board (examiners) that he was fully informed as to the ethics and principles necessary in order to be a worthy representative of the Association.

After all, this is not asking too much; it is only following out the rules which are the guide and mainspring of every successful business.

The members must act as a unit in all they do and the Service must be perfect.

Scores of enthusiastic F. T. D. men at St. Louis last August heard many instances of what Service had accomplished for the narrators; in giving Service to fill orders some had lost money in the effort, others had secured immediate returns, but all had gained the one thing necessary, above all others for permanent success—a reputation for Service.

Maintain Steady Nerves

Flower Gardening is the Purest of Human Pleasures and the Greatest Refreshment to the Spirit of Man

While we must continue to encourage the making of war gardens, we must not forget that it would merely give the enemy encouragement to banish all beauty from our dwellings and neglect the flower gardens that make our homes attractive and something to fight for.

George Washington surely had at Valley Forge troubles that we have not yet begun to experience in this war, but that did not prevent him from giving minute instructions in his letters as to the upkeep of his flower garden at Mount Vernon, which even today is a show place as a fine piece of landscape and gardening work. Probably the very thought of this garden, awaiting his return, may have helped him to preserve that iron and indomitable determination by which he kept alive hope in the hearts of his soldiers when everybody seemed to be against them—even the Continental Congress, which was pledged to give them earnest support and yet at one shaky time in its history left Washington to hold the bag.

Washington loved the charm of his garden and knew how to enjoy it. In the Spring and Summer, when he had no war on his hands, he not only worked in it, but lived in it, having parties on the lawn in sheltered nooks, taking his meals by some quiet pool or fountain, or, while the flowers sent up their fragrance and the stars sent down their soft light, spending the evening in silent and solitary meditation—in that meditation of solitude which is said to have nurtured and developed most of our great men.

It looks as if even the newspapers are beginning to realize that we need in this country a little more calmness and composure. The distinguishing characteristic of Washington and other great leaders was that they were calm and serene when almost all persons had lost their heads. You will find that all these distinguished men spent a large part of their time in quiet gardens, even during war, when it was possible to fix headquarters where they could enjoy the use of a garden. Therefore, while we are encouraging the people to make vegetable gardens, it may be as well to caution them not to forget that the modest little flower gardens of the homes are just as important, because the winners in any contest must have cheerful countenance as well as something in the stomach. A serene spirit will help us to win the war. If indeed we are to banish all that is pleasant in life, out of a mistaken idea that this will help to win the war, then what will we have to fight for?—C. L. Brock (before the Houston Florists' Club.)

Victory Corsage

Considerable enthusiasm was awakened among the members of the Washington (D. C.) Florists' Club at a meeting held Tuesday evening, Nov. 5, in the offices of Gude Bros., Co., by the suggestion of President Z. D. Blackistone that the florists of Washington conceive and market what he termed the "Victory Corsage." The idea is to prepare suitable advertising matter for insertion in the extra editions of the local papers that will be put upon the streets the moment news comes of the war's end suggesting that the ladies of the city show their patriotism and their enthusiasm of the conclusion of hostilities by wearing one of these corsages.

Realizing the difficulties that have come through the continued advertising of white Carnations for Mother's Day, the suggestion of Mr. Blackistone was that three flowers, representing a trinity, be used in combination with greens and with either a rosette of the National Colors or with an American flag in the center. It may be Roses, Carnations, orchids, or even pompon 'Mums, depending on the amount of money that the customer desires to expend. The big feature will be the inclusion of the American Colors. The club thanked Mr. Blackistone for the suggestion and he was instructed to appoint a committee to raise a sufficient sum to cover the four cooperative advertisements that will appear in that number of Washington papers. Our Album of Floral Designs (Solicitor's Design Book)

This highly superior book to any hitherto issued has proved a business getter of the first water—and no mistake. Thirty-six pages and highly ornamental cover; size 9x12 inches.

Eight Pages Are Printed in Wonderfully Attractive Color-Combinations

Four of these pages are in full natural color effect. The remaining four pages are rendered in black and white and green color effect. The entire eight pages are faithful, life-like reproductions, true to color, and consist of such subjects as are in every day demand. Over $500 was paid the engraver for the making of these eight color plates alone. The black and white illustrations, embracing a full collection of designs in every day use, are artistically rendered and simply superb. In all, the book includes 138 designs, every one a selected gem; also 25 emblems of leading American societies.

This Book the Greatest Money Maker Ever Offered

Nothing approaching the scope of this book has ever before been presented to the trade; moreover, it is so arranged that the customer will understand it to have been produced especially by you for your trade. It carries no advertising.

To push your business you will need 25, 50, 100, yes, perhaps 1000 copies. Send 50c. for sample book. If you are not fully satisfied with the value of the book, money back promptly.

Your name and address printed on front cover on orders of twelve copies or over. Price, delivery paid: 12 copies, $4.75; 25 copies, $8.75; 50 copies, $16.50; 100 copies, $30.00. Orders filled without delay.

Owing to increased cost of every item our next edition will have to be sold at a higher price. So better order now.

Floral Designs de Luxe

A Cloth Bound Book for Use by the Retailer in His Own Store

Fifth Edition

Shows the finest selection of designs ever grouped together under one cover for the guidance of the retail florist. Contains over 400 practical ideas in make-up. Covers every phase of the art. Four pages in two-color, and four pages in four-color effect have just been added to this great book, making it the most attractive presentation for order getting ever issued. Bound in cloth boards; 128 pages in black and white effect, 8 pages in superb color effect, and 32 blank pages for pasting additional designs. Size of page 9x12 inches. All superbly printed. If you do not think the book up to our representation, return it promptly in good condition and we will refund you your money.

Price, delivery prepaid, $2.50.

First frost came last week—30 degrees—Nov. 1. This finishes outdoor stock for this year. The call for flowers for funeral work has continued steadily the past week with no let up in sight. Blankets, flags, wreaths, and baskets in patriotic colors have been in heavy demand. Out of town funeral work has been unprecedentedly heavy. The ban on public meetings will continue until Nov. 9, although it has been raised by the State Board of Health throughout the state. Besides the demand for funeral work, little is doing. Counter trade is rather brisk, and many flowers are being sent to the hospitals. There is practically no wedding work.

The supply of 'Mums continues to increase, the season being almost at its height. Fine yellow and white Bonnaffon appeared last week, and Poehlmann, Chrysolora, and Appleton are of splendid quality. Pompons are increasing, and 'Mum plants are selling with a vim. Caprice, in yellow and brown, is a favorite with the public. The supply of Roses, although heavy, is not greater than the demand. Russell, Shawyer, Columbia and Ophelia are the leading varieties. Although many Killarneys are on the market, they are used up in miscellaneous funeral work, as there is not the demand for them as in past years. The supply of Carnations is more adequate, and the quality is showing much improvement, both in the length of stem, and the size of the flowers. Prices are holding firm. There is a good supply of orchids, which clean up well daily. Lilies are bought up as fast as offered. Few Lily of the Valley are in demand here on account of the high prices. Single Violets are being offered, and are used up for funeral work. Still a short supply on all kinds of ferns and greens.

Tattlings on the Trade

The entire force of the A. J. Lanternier Co. has been working overtime on account of the heavy demand for funeral work, especially for out of town patrons.

The New Haven Floral Co. is cutting rather heavily on Chieftain, Chrysolora and Halliday Mums.

While October went far ahead of the same month in any previous year, as far as the demand for funeral work was concerned, yet there was a noticeable falling off in wedding work, and transient trade. Funeral work, however, was five times as heavy as in other years, owing to the epidemic.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey are having a fine orchid crop, principally of Cattleyas. Their heavy cut of 'Mums and Roses is used up daily. This firm expects a fine crop of greenhouse Lettuce within a few weeks, and will have Tomatoes in time for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Lillian Underhill, sister in law of Judge W. J. Vesey, and sister of Fred Lemon, the florist of Richmond, Ind., is ill here with a severe attack of paralysis.

Edgar Wenninghoff reports a heavier demand for funeral designs the latter part of the week than during the past four weeks. Chrysanthemums and Roses have supplied this demand mainly. He is also showing 'Mum plants in many varieties. Florists are much encouraged over the prospect of obtaining 100 per cent. coal and many have put in orders with local dealers to secure their full allowance.

All hands have been busy at the Flick Floral Co., making up funeral designs early and late during the past week. This firm reports that the demand was greater last week than at any time since the outbreak of the epidemic. With the state ban on public meeting raised, business firms are hoping for a speedy raising of the closing order by the local board of health.

Market Report

The extreme flower situation is easing off readily with the passing of the influenza epidemic. In fact, flowers, particularly Chrysanthemums, are becoming very plentiful so that there is no trouble at all in getting a needed supply. An unusually fine supply of Chrysanthemums is at hand this year at $1.50 to $5 per doz. wholesale and $3 to $12 per doz. retail. Pompon and single varieties, too, have enjoyed a wonderful growing season and sell readily at $1 per bunch, six sprays to the bunch. The mid-season varieties, including Richmond, Tiger, the Turners, Chieftan and several of the real new kinds, are shown simply to perfection in the downtown store windows.

The Rose supply is all sufficient and prices have dropped decidedly during the past week; $8 to $15 per 100 for select stock is the usual quotation. American Beauty Roses are selling better than last season at $5 to $60 per 100 wholesale and $6 to $18 per doz. retail. The demand for Cattleyas at 50c. each, Violets at $1 per 100 and miniature Roses at $1 per doz. is not nearly so good as when there are social matters at hand.

There has been a little change noted since the favorable war reports have begun to come in. Some of the wealthy people, who have been conspicuous by their absence, come now and then for flowers for the sick room or for other occasions which they deem decidedly necessary. Let us hope that this class of trade may soon be able to return in its old time humor.

The coal situation seems to be extremely favorable, particularly in this section of the country and the writer would not be at all surprised to see many of the Eastern states relieved of their 50 per cent. shortage ere Spring

Bulbous shipments are apparently arriving with less delay than last year, and as there are a great many cases, there will no doubt be the usual plentiful supply in this locality.

Earl Hager, formerly with Hitz & Son, Brightwood, has accepted the conservatory position at Bertermanns.

Mr. Sharp, the well known Noblesville florist, is handling a lot of fine Chrysanthemums in Indianapolis. They find a ready sale at the Smith & Young Co.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. reports that most of its employees who have been severely ill are again able to be at work, thus relieving the severe shortage the company has experienced.

Tomlinson Hall Market reports a very lively business, both in wholesale and retail lines. There are a great many good 'Mums brought there which find a ready sale.

Hartje & Elder are cutting quite a quantity of their famed pompon varieties of Chrysanthemums.

It is reported in local circles that a number of convalescent soldiers at Ft. Harrison made up a collection with which to purchase some flowers for themselves. The florists have been quite liberal in this direction, but if this report is actually with foundation, the flowers ought to be so well supplied to the soldiers that this will not be necessary. Further than this, it shows how surely flowers are still in the hearts of the people, even among the soldier boys who are farthest from the flower business.

A. Nelson, the well known N. Capitol ave. florist, is cutting an excellent lot of Chrysanthemums.

The condition of the market here is the same as in many other cities. Cut flowers of all kinds are scarce. The daily supply is divided among regular customers, but at that it has been impossible to meet the demand. Florists who were using Dahlias, Cosmos, Snapdragon and other outdoor stock in their funeral work, together with the indoor stock, did not realize the scarcity of flowers until the frost on Oct. 23 which put an end to all outdoor stock. Last year frost came Oct. 11. Never before can we recall such a shortage at this time of year and for such long duration. Retail stores have been forced to turn orders away, so as to take care of their regular customers. At that they make no promise what they will give buyers, telling them that they will do the best they can for the amount of money they wish to spend. Many stores have been closing the door at 6 p.m., but working later nights. Scarcity of green goods is also hard on the florists. Little of any kind is obtainable. In some cases plant baskets have been used to good advantage with a few cuts stuck in to add color. From the present outlook stock will be scarce for some time.

O. H. Frank, representing the A. L. Randall Co. in this section, has resigned his position.

D. S. Grimes & Son have been cutting fine, large, yellow and white Eatons. A choice collection of pompons are seen in the greenhouses.

Ben Boldt has the best Cyclamen plants shown so far, having plenty of flowers, buds and foliage.

The Alpha Floral Co. has an artistic Hallowe'en window display. A full moon rising over a bundle of Corn fodder shining on an owl perched on a tree stump, a scare crow with a pumpkin head, black cats, flying bats, and pumpkins filled with flowers.

The Park Floral Co. sold up clean on 'Mum plants and had to refuse a large order from the South.

At the House of Flowers we found S. R. Lundy, head of the house, as busy as a bee, funeral work being heavy. A handsome blanket was also turned out by the house.

City Floral Co. is the first to cut Golden Wedding 'Mums, also pink and white Chieftain. It has been cutting its 'Mums before they have fully developed, owing to the shortage of stock.

Mrs. E. S. Kennedy and Mrs. C. F. Edgar had an auto trip with Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Lengenfelder.

The Barteldes Seed Co. has been busy in the cut flower department, this being a new venture for the firm. It is pleased with the outlook. An Odontoglossum Grandé in the window drew much attention, it being a specimen plant grown by Mr. Horlacher, the manager, who, specializes in orchids, having some 40 varieties.

Cleveland, O.

The arrival of larger quantities of Chrysanthemums in sizes ranging from teacups to dinner plates has broken the grip of the greatest period of scarcity known in this market. Do not infer from this that business is enjoying a respite; on the contrary, it is heavy but the supply of seasonable stock is such that the retailer can get at most anything he needs without going outside. Valley is in light supply, but fortunately, the call is weak. Consignments of Roses are heavier and the better varieties are to be had in greater abundance. Carnations are improving in stem. Receipts, however, are inadequate. The market is glutted with Cosmos even the better grades having little, if any, market value. New England ferns are still arriving irregularly, causing much inconvenience at times. Adiantum and Asparagus are scarce.

Club Meeting Postponed

The ban upon public gatherings still being in force, President Chas. J. Graham, after a conference with Health Commissioner Rockwell, announced that the Florists' Club meeting scheduled for Nov. 4, would be postponed till a later date. It was necessary to telegraph leading officials of the American Carnation Society who had planned to attend this meeting to complete arrangements for the annual gathering of the Society here in January.

The Market

Roses are fairly plentiful. Taken as a whole they are of a high quality. The Carnation cut is fair. 'Mums and pompons are plentiful. Easter Lilies are in a fair supply. Dahlias and Cosmos are out of the market. Other offerings are Lily of the Valley, Single Violets and Sweet Peas.

Talk of the Town

The Christmas fund committee for the Cincinnati florists' boys in the U. S. military and naval service reports contributions to date amounting to over $400. Florists are requested to send the names together with addresses of all the trade representatives who are in the service from this vicinity, to Miss Laura Murphy, 329 Main st., secretary-treasurer of the committee in charge.

J. J. Broxey, of Dayton, Ohio, motored through to this city last Saturday for flowers for All Saints Day.

Jos. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was in this city last week for the first time since his recent illness. We were all glad to see him about again.

Other visitors were S. J. Benniger, of Marion, Ohio, and Walker Gray, of Hamilton, Ohio.

The Market

Wholesale prices of flowers are about the same as a week ago. Roses are still fine and plentiful. They range from 6 to 30c. each. 'Mums were never so gladly welcomed by the florists as this year. The unprecedented demand for cut flowers ran the supply of Roses almost to notice, ing these being about the only thing on hand. The first 'Mums were eagerly taken by all who could get them. They were well worth waiting for—up to usual standard with local growers, perhaps a little better. They are selling at wholesale from $2.50 to $4 a doz. While Carnations are being cut are good, but still scarce and not being considered much in making up orders.

Business continues as good as for more than a month. October, 1918, has gone down in the annals of every Kansas City florist as a red letter month, breaking every record in the history of the business. It surpassed every holiday in the volume of orders and was better than any holiday because the demand continued for such a long stretch while the holiday business is over in a few days. It was mostly funeral work, due to the epidemic. In all the shops it is the same story—getting down earlier in the morning, working later in the evening, working every Sunday and sometimes working at night.

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Company expects to have a fine cut of American Beauty and other red Roses for Christmas class condition and with anything like class condition and with anything like favorable conditions the cut is expected to be splendid.

The Week's News

Wm. C. Smith of the Smith Wholesale Floral Co. was laid up a few days with severe cold.

The growers will have a meeting at the 11-Mile House on Wednesday, Nov. 6; a 'Mum show will be staged.

Kalish Bros.' Dahlias are over, the frost killing them. They have had a very remunerative season.

The publicity meeting will take place this coming week; all retailers are urged to contribute.

At time of writing it is getting warmer, feels like Indian Summer.

Next meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, Nov. 11, at Dunlop's Hall.

Next meeting of the Florists and Gardeners' Club of Ontario, Nov. 19, at St. George's Hall. Annual election of officers.

Business has been very brisk, there being a great deal of funeral work. This week shows a little falling off, but the demand for flowers is still great. Prices are high, and while retailers expect a certain increase due to the advances in cost of bonemeal, coal, labor, etc., they object to being charged more for stock than the drug stores, thus permitting the latter to cut prices.

During the rush of last week there was a scarcity in the city of Magnolia leaves, Cycas and Wheat sheaves, and it was almost impossible to get wire frames.

Very select Turners are selling for $15 per doz.; Cattleyas at $1 each; Roses at $3, $4 and $5, with select grades at $6 to $12; Violets are quoted at $3 per 1000.

H. G. Dillemuth was showing some exceptionally fine Mrs. Turner 'Mums. In his greenhouse his early crop of 'Mums has been coming along finely. He has been rushed with numerous orders and has been fortunate in having a good supply of flowers. His Christmas stock will be large and he will be ready to handle his extensive Christmas trade in baskets, potted plants, etc.

Dunlop's report flowers more plentiful, but that prices are exceedingly high. In their greenhouses at Richmond Hill they have large stocks of Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Russell, and Mrs. Henry Winnett, the new seedling Rose; also excellent 'Mums.

Simmons & Son have been very busy and are now having what Mr. Simmons calls a lull before another storm. He thinks prices asked by the growers are much too high, and believes that there should be co-operation between the grower and retailer and a distribution of profit, and that the growers should have a uniform price for all.

Coming 'Mum Show

Thomas Manton will have a good supply of 'Mums for the big 'Mum show, Nov. 8 and 9. The retailers are busy advertising the show and expect that a greater interest will be shown than last year. Mr. Manton says a number of growers are holding back in order to have adequate supplies for this event.

J. J. Higgins is to couple a "re-opening" of his Yonge st. store with the 'Mum show. The store has been artistically re-decorated, the furnishings being finished in white enamel.

J. J. Higgins, H. G. Dillemuth and Geo. Geraghty have been appointed a Toronto committee by the S. A. F. and O. H. to assist in the national publicity campaign.

The next meeting of the Florists and Gardeners' Club of Ontario will be held in St. George's Hall on Nov. 19. The annual election of officers will take place.

The next regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club will be held in Dunlop's Hall on Nov. 11.

Peter Bros. have opened a store on King st., Hamilton.

Wm. D. Manton, son of Thomas Manton, who was recently wounded in the head, is at Colchester Hospital and is progressing favorably.

Work is to start shortly on a $5000 timber and glass greenhouse for Wm. Tapping & Son, Ruthven, Ont., who want prices on materials at once.

Mrs. H. G. Dillemuth and family left for Los Angeles, Cal., on Nov. 1, to spend the Winter. Mr. Dillemuth has taken rooms at the Elliot House.

Edward Gale of Dunlop's is back at work after being ill with influenza. Mr. Geraghty is recovering from pneumonia.

Portland, Ore.

The Market

The procession of funerals goes on unabated and as a consequence we find all the shops rushed with funeral work of all kinds. The recent closing of all places of amusement has almost entirely stopped counter sales, and as the ban is on parties also there is little or no demand for stock for such occasions. The hospitals and patients are, of course, well supplied with flowers, so that this line of trade is also brisk. The supply of stock is falling far short of the demand in these abnormal times and prices have risen considerably in all lines of stock. It is about time that this rise in price takes place, as for many a year stock was sold for less than labor cost in many cases, let alone margins. With the early 'Mums out of the way and the midseason varieties not equal to the demand, prices will no doubt remain stiff.

Roses, owing to the fair weather, are coming in in good shape and fair in quantity. Carnations are fine, only there are not enough of them. Among the 'Mums Chieftan, Ivory, Turner and Chrysolora, including some of the odd varieties, about cover the list. Chieftan, when well grown, although not quite so large as some others, brings a very good price.

Carnations retail at $1 per doz. 'Mums, $3 to $7.50 per doz. In the case of Marigold (the new golden yellow) $10 was reached. Pompons retail at from 75c. to $1.50 per bunch; among these Buckingham is the favorite. Pompons bid fair to be rather scarce this season. Roses bring from $1 to $3 per doz. Cecil Brunner Roses are still 50c. per bunch but the demand is weak. Dahlias bring from 75c. to $2 per doz.; Cosmos 50c. per bunch.

New York City

Meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday Nov. 11, at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and 8th ave., 7.30 p.m.

The Market

Nov. 6—Most items of stock are plentiful; the demand in general is moderate, and lower prices rule. American Beauty Roses are in short supply. Special grade blooms are moving well at 15c. to 50c. each and other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses are in large supply and of excellent quality. Top grade blooms are selling at 6c. to 15c. each in general and No. 2 blooms at $2 to $3 per 100. The demand is moderate. Carnations are in seasonable supply and are meeting a slow demand at about $3 per 100 for the best. Cattleya orchids meet a moderate demand at about 50c. each for the choicest blooms. Gardenias are now in the market, but meet with a weak demand at $2 to $4 per doz. for the best. White and pink Lilies are moving more slowly, the former at $10 to $12 and the latter at $3 to $5 per 100. Lily of the Valley is accumulating on account of the small demand, the best realizing no more than $8 per 100. 'Mums are in seasonable supply and are moving fairly well at about $3 per doz. for the best. In bunch 'Mums the whites and light [illegible], which can be used in funeral work meet with a fair demand, but other colors go slowly. Violets are unfit for sales soon after their arrival; many go to waste and others realize no more than 15c. to 35c. per 100. In miscellaneous flowers, there is a small supply of [illegible] rhinum, Delphinium, Gaillardias, Cosmos, and Tritomas. All greens are moving slowly except Oak foliage.

News Notes

At the meeting of the Florists' Club Nov. 11, some of the features will be the report of the Committee on Nominations, a review of the work of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive and probably a discussion of the coal situation. The following letter which H. C. Riedel 49 W. 28th st., of the Exhibition Committee is sending out is self explanatory, and should meet with a generous response:

"For the November meeting of the New York Florists' Club, which takes place on Monday, Nov. 11, the exhibition committee has decided to call on 'Mums. As the committee is anxious to make a good showing it, as well as all members of the club, will greatly appreciate your exhibit. If you haven't any 'Mums anything else will do. You may send whatever you have to reach me any time before 6 p.m. on the above date; if you are unable to come yourself, I will stage same for you."

Under the personal direction of William F. Grell, Park Commissioner, laborers of the Park Department began last week the work preparatory to establishing extensive flower beds on both sides of the famous promenade on the Mall in Central Park. After the ground is prepared the work will be carried out under the supervision of Landscape Architect Julius Burgevin and Park Forester Jacob Kaplan. The plan calls for flower beds extending 800ft. the entire length of the promenade that centers the Mall, and a width of 5ft. These beds will be filled next Spring with Summer bedding plants with greenery at the far ends.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., accompanied by Mrs. Pierson and his niece, were calling in this city on Tuesday. They were on their way to Florida, traveling on the Pennsylvania Railroad. They have taken a house in the "Flower Land" and will pass the Winter there. Their chauffeur also has gone along with them and their automobile has been shipped to their Winter home.

Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J., has been sick and confined to his home for several days.

The Autumn Chrysanthemum exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York is being held during the closing days of this week. A report will appear in our next issue.

Samuel Perlow, of the firm of Spiwork & Perlow, plantsmen, Elmhurst, L. I., died at the age of 37 years on Wednesday, Oct. 30. Mr. Perlow had been at the Presbyterian Hospital in this city sick with pneumonia, from which he had recovered. A few days later he suffered a relapse and was again taken to the same hospital, where he died, and from which he was buried on Monday, Oct. 31. Mr. Perlow was unmarried.

Boston

Market Report

Nov. 5, 1918.—There is a big over production of flowers principally brought on by the Summer weather during the latter part of last month. A few days last week were record breakers for heat in October. The influenza epidemic is practically over here; hence orders for flowers are much lighter. American Beauty Roses are in heavy supply with less demand at $3 to $5 per doz. Hybrid tea Roses are abundant of extra nice quality and in fair demand at $2 to $10 and $12 per 100. Carnations are abundant. The stems have lengthened considerably. During the past week the blooms were rather soft owing to the warm weather. Prices have dropped to 2c. to 4c. each. A better supply of Cattleya orchids, mostly of superb quality, at 40c. to 50c. each. 'Mums are plentiful. Large late varieties such as Bonnaffon and Eaton are in fine form. Prices vary from 75c. to $2.50 per doz. Lilies are slightly more plentiful but prices are still 15c. to 20c. each. Lily of the Valley is not abundant. It sells at $8 to $10 per 100. Violets are abundant but the weather has been too hot for them. There is a nice supply of late Cosmos, plenty of Calendulas, a few Daisies. Bouvardias and greenery are plentiful. 'Mum plants sell well. They are of superb quality.

Here and There.

Patrick Welch, president of Welch Bros. Co., has received word from R. B. Stone, chairman Conservation Dept., Boston Fuel Administration, to the effect that florists who have been restricted to 50 per cent. of their coal requirements may use 100 per cent. of anthracite below No. 1 buckwheat.

Anthony Leuthy has coal enough to carry him through the greater part of Winter.

C. S. Andem, Putnam, Conn., is marketing a large supply of finely grown Carnations through the Boston Flower Exchange, by Mr. Green.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Boston Flower Exchange will be held on Monday, Nov. 11.

The next meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston will be held on Nov. 19. A large attendance is hoped for as nominations for officers for 1919 will be made.

The committee on prizes and exhibitions of the Mass. Hort. Society is working on the schedule for 1919. The principal exhibition of the year will be a large vegetable and fruit exhibition in September. Liberal prizes are to be given. The annual meeting of the society for 1918 will be held at Horticultural Hall at 12 o'clock, Nov. 16, when the business will be the election of a president for one year, a vice-president for two years, four trustees for three years and a nominating committee of five members. Voting will be by Australian ballot. The polls will be open between 12 and 3 o'clock.

William Sim of Cliftondale is marketing superb Violets. His Carnations are looking well.

The Waban Rose Conservatories office and salesroom, for some time at 5 Winthrop sq., is now vacated. The office is at 15 Beacon st., and the salesroom at the Boston Flower Exchange.

H. M. Robinson, Jr., who is in the Navy at Providence, R. I., is editing a paper called "The Trigger," published at Providence, R. I., by the Naval Rifle Range Force. He is a chip of the old block and has energy and push. Undoubtedly he is the youngest editor in New England—only 20 years old. "The Trigger," only three months old, began with a circulation of 3000; now it has increased to 15,000.

place is too small to take care of increasing business. The company has leased the large, roomy store at 23 to 25 Otis st., where it will have a floor space of 10,000 sq. ft. Business this fall has surpassed that of any previous year.

The New England Florist Supply Co., at 276 Devonshire st., reports that the last two months have been the best since it has been in business. The demand for all kinds of supplies was larger than ever before.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are rushed with shipping orders. Funeral flowers are still in heavy demand. They have a large force of men in their wire department and hardly can keep up with the orders. Mr. Robinson has been on the sick list but is now on deck again.

Orchard Brings Big Price

The Apple orchard of Melville Green, located in Frederick County, West Virginia, was recently sold to J. E. Hartman of St. Louis for $155,000. This is said to be the highest price ever paid in this section for an Apple orchard. The orchard comprises eighteen acres and this year's crop amounted to 18,000 barrels. It is said that Mr. Green paid only $18,000 for the orchard when he bought it fourteen years ago.

Chicago

The Cut Flower Market

Nov. 4.—The market has assumed its normal seasonable tone. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and the demand good, all moving at good prices and no surplus on hand with the exception of some poor grade Chrysanthemums. All the rulings regarding the use of flowers for funerals have been called off, and the social life of the city can now proceed as before. The shipping trade is good; the demand for flowers for All Saints' Day in New Orleans cleaned the market up well the early part of the past week. There is more activity in local buying and all prospects point to a good business for the month of November.

American Beauty Roses are in moderate supply with sufficient demand to move all as fast as they arrive at list prices. In other varieties there is enough in all conditions and length of stems. Columbia and Mrs. Russell are bringing the highest prices, with Milady a good second. Short stock in other varieties is selling at $3 per 100; medium and fancy grades from $6 to $10 and $12 per 100.

Carnations are on the short side; more could be sold daily if it were possible to get them. What stock comes in is of good quality and prices range from $3 to $6 per 100. Growers promise a full supply later in the month which they will be able to maintain throughout the season.

The Chrysanthemum season will reach its height within the next week. At present the supply is heavy and comprises a variety of grades and conditions of blooms with prices ranging from $1 to $4 per doz. Some small stock is sold for from $6 to $8 per 100. Pompons are bringing from 25c. to 75c. a bunch. The California stock has about all disappeared from the market and the home growers have things all their own way; even with this it is feared there will be a considerable surplus of stock during the next couple of weeks when most growers will be cutting heaviest.

Th supply of Easter Lilies is just about equal to the demand and prices remain firm. There is sufficient valley for all demand. The orchid supply is ample, all stock clearing daily without much, if any, surplus remaining on hand. Double and single Violets are in good supply, the doubles from the Hudson River section are coming through in good condition. Some good Calendulas are seen and fancy stock brings as high as $4 and $5 per 100. Some greenhouse grown Asters are to be had at $3 to $4 per 100. Pansies are in good supply. There is a small supply of Sweet Peas but at present not in any special demand. The situation regarding fancy ferns and all decorative greens is tight; scarcity of help and difficulties of transportation are assigned as the cause. This is resulting in higher prices for all this material than it has ever brought before.

News Notes

Otto F. Larson, who conducts a flower store near Ashland ave. on 63d st., has been confined to his room during the past week with influenza.

The new store of Wm. F. Schofield, at 754 N. State st., has been finished at considerable cost, and is one of the best equipped on the North Side. The floor is of mosaic tiling, on which numerous large columns are placed that display to advantage many specimen plants and baskets. The floor extends right up to the outer window, which is on the street level, where plant stock can be exhibited to the best advantage.

Henry F. Dunn, who started Dunn's Flower Shop, at 807 N. State st., a couple of years ago, reports good business in his neighborhood, but finds much trouble in getting his orders out on account of lack of help. He and Mrs. Dunn have worked late into the night for several weeks past.

The Keenan sisters, who have been conducting the business of A. F. Keenan & Co., at 1306 E. 63d st., report good trade in their section. Art Keenan, former manager of the store, who joined the Marines some months ago, was leaving for France when he was last heard from ten days ago.

J. M. Cochrane, who has a neat establishment on 119th st., in the West Pullman section of the city, has a fine lot of Boston and other ferns that he has made a specialty of this season. On account of the high price of fancy ferns on the wholesale market he has a bench he is cutting from for cut flower use. He says it is cheaper to cut them than buy the other stock.

Oscar Metz, at 5525 Harper ave., has a house full of Azaleas all in good foliage and well budded. In the large flat buildings in his section his boys made it a specialty to collect the Azalea plants from their owners as soon as the plants had finished blooming. The owners were always glad to get a fern or some small plant in exchange, and in this way an excellent stock has been worked up that under existing conditions will prove to be of much value.

Robt. R. Canfield, who some time ago succeeded Sullivan Bros. as proprietor of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, at 811 E. 63d st., was killed in an auto accident, on Oct. 27, when his touring car collided with a Rock Island train on mer at Pana, Ill., by the American Greenhouse Co., and which are managed by Adolph Neilsen, recently with Gullet & Sons, Lincoln, are reported to be in good condition. They have just commenced cutting; most of the stock goes to the St. Louis wholesale market.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held Thursday, Nov. 7, at 8 p.m., at Randolph Hotel, Wells and Randolph st. At this meeting the nomination of officers for the coming year will be held. A week ago it was thought this meeting could not be held owing to the ruling preventing all public gatherings on account of the influenza. Recent rulings, however, announce the lifting of the ban on all measures pertaining to the epidemic.

The Washington Flower Market, at 77 W. Washington st., has been incorporated, the capital stock being $2500. Incorporators are J. N. McMinn, H. Pitluck and N. W. Campbell.

The new ruling by the Fuel Administration that florists are permitted to use 100 per cent. coal (bituminous) if they can get it is good news to the growers, but it is still doubtful if it will change the plans of many who have already made their arrangements to close up part or all of their houses for the Winter.

With the passing of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign the trade organizations of the city are again called on for War Relief funds. A total of four and one-half per cent. of the Liberty Loan is assigned to each organization as their quota of support to the War Relief associations. This will make the quota of the allied trades $13,500. The campaign begins Nov. 11 and will continue until the 18th inst. The same organization will put it through that so successfully put the Fourth Liberty Loan over the top.

Philadelphia

A slight falling off in business occurred last week. The supply of flowers remains abundant. Chrysanthemums, the leading item, have been in active demand, having preference over other stock. All the leading varieties are to be had with Chieftan, Razer, Bonnaffon, Turner, Marigold, together with a dozen other good sorts to draw upon. Prices scale from $1.50 to $5 per doz. Pompons are not as active. A heavy supply of Roses was further increased by the warm spell that brought the majority of the shipments in soft and well opened. Carnations are moving well with increased arrivals. Easter Lilies in normal supply are taking well. Violets are faring badly. More are dumped than sold. Snapdragon, Bouvardia and Mignonette have reappeared in limited quantities. The supply of Sweet Peas is also growing larger. Dahlias still arrive, but not enough to cut any figure. Cosmos has also run its course.

Club Meeting

Vice President E. H. Harvey conducted the November meeting of the Florist Club. Arthur A. Niessen, chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee, made his report, showing that the florists of Philadelphia have subscribed to the grand total of $420,000; that is over $30,000 more than their allotted quota of $390,000. This is, we believe, a larger subscription than can be shown by the florists in any other city. It ranks among the leading ones in the industrial section of Philadelphia.

Robert Craig, essayist of the evening, spoke of the florist business, giving reminiscences of its early history in this city and of his experience of over half a century as a florist. His talk was highly entertaining and full of optimism for the future of business. C. A. Liggit displayed a splendid vase of the new Rose, Premier, from the E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind. It was highly commended as a commercial variety. Robert Scott & Son of Sharon Hill had four vases of seedling Roses that look promising—a white, a flesh colored one and two pinks.

News of the Town

Joseph G. Neidinger underwent an operation on Nov. 2 at the Lankenau Hospital. From latest reports he is slowly recovering and is believed to be out of danger.

The new Rose, Columbia, has made a favorable impression in this market. Among those growing it are the Jos. Heacock Co., Stephen Mortensen, John Andro, George Burton and Zieger & Sons.

The annual Chrysanthemum Show of the Pennsylvania Hort. Soc. is withdrawn this year.

Clarence Watson, who has been listed among the sick, is again able to resume his duties with the Leo Niessen Co. This house is receiving excellent Bouvardia Humboldtii.

Paul Richter of the Henry F. Michell Co. has written a timely article on "Make a Profit," that may be found elsewhere in these columns. Read it. Manager A. R. Burton of the nurseries at Aulausia, despite the handicaps of labor shortage, has kept the place right up to the mark. The Dahlias came in for a great deal of attention by all who visited the nurseries lately. They have done exceptionally well this season. While the number of varieties runs well into three figures, the matter of seeking any one sort in the field has been simplified by planting the varieties in alphabetical order.

Among the choice 'Mums noted at the S. S. Pennock Co., especially prominent was the variety Wm. Turner.

Wm. J. Baker is featuring exceptionally fine 'Mums in the varieties of Bonnaffon, Marigold and Razor.

Chas. E. Meehan is sending in a good cut of 'Mums to his own commission house from his place at Churchville.

Business among the retailers has quieted down considerably, proving that the influenza has about run its course.

A Flower Restores Speech and Appetite

Richard Vincent, Jr., at a recent meeting of the New York Florists' Club gave his auditors a startling narrative regarding the stimulating effect of flowers on the mentality of a wounded soldier. This story should travel wide and sink deep. Mr. Vincent said, in effect:

At the request of Major Herring the doctor in charge of a certain hospital ward, I visited Fort McHenry to show them how to plant their flower borders and beds around the buildings.

In passing from the surgeon's office to the grounds he stopped me in front of a man sitting on the porch and said, "See that man?" I said "Yes." "Well, that man was injured by a piece of shell and was brought here for surgical treatment. For three weeks he has not spoken a word, but this morning I brought one of the Geraniums in bloom that I procured from your establishment and placed it on the table directly in front of him and, touching his arm, said, 'Look.' He looked and the first word we have heard him utter was right there when he said 'Pretty.'"

The next word he uttered was "eat." That Geranium awoke him and that man, with an occasional glance at the flower, ate the best and most nourishing meal that he had eaten since he was wounded. As Major Herring said, it was the flower that awoke his memory and brought him back to life and feeling.

Major Herring added: "As a testimonial from me as a doctor I want to say that a bunch of flowers in a room of sick or wounded is one of the greatest solaces that we can obtain, often amounting to more than medicine."

Advertising Before and After the War

Let us wander a bit to the time of flower prosperity about a year before the war. How everybody and everything connected with flowers were up to the high mark. No worrying about stocks, coal, labor; everything running along smoothly. No necessity for knowing the cost of producing flowers and plants. Easy come and easy go; happy go lucky about it all. Then the transformation a year after the war started; shortage of coal, which was needed to help win the war; release of men for war work, causing a shortage of man power; and shortage of stock resulting from conditions essential to winning the war.

How has advertising anything to do with the conditions mentioned and how does it benefit or retard our industry generally?

Show me the man immune from using publicity to aid his business during the interval mentioned, and I'll show you that he fell back considerably, both financially and otherwise. On the contrary, show me the men who are spending money to continue their advertising and publicity. They are going ahead and creating new business all the time.

A peculiar thing happened to me when a question was put as to how we are getting on with the help question. Strange as it may seem, we have as yet not felt the shortage; perhaps we may later, though most of our men are past the draft age. I maintain that because of advertising our mails bring many letters from applicants who seek a change of position and having heard of us want to affiliate with a growing concern. Human nature travels that way. Where there is apparent success, there will the crowd follow. This seems to contine in channels both as to salesmen who seek business and also in volume of sales. When conditions are continually changing as in our business regarding present buyers and those of the past it is up to every florist to make known the fact that he has flowers to sell and not to keep.

Advertising is the open sesame between one's store and the buying public. The fellow who keeps up a campaign now and after the war will gain the greatest advantage, provided he keeps time both in quality of flowers and service rendered. These qualifications entitle one to get whatever he goes after; namely success, both as a florist and as a merchant.

Advertising is the stimulant needed and which is now coming into its own for florists generally. Our own National Publicity campaign will probably be the means of a reawakening for many who have hitherto never felt the need in the sale of flowers, but who now feel the necessity as in all other lines. Hats off to the men in our line who saw the light and started this campaign in New York a little over a year ago.

It was the beginning of what some day will be he biggest thing that the florists have ever done in popularizing the uses of floflwers.

"Say It with Flowers" has a wonderful future. Watch the growth!

A Certain Little Jenny Wren

A florist friend in New Jersey sends us an extract from a daily paper, which embodied a story wrought about a certain little Jenny Wren, a poor working girl who has made her somewhat plainly furnished one-room apartment attractive in the extreme through its shining cleanliness and arrangement, her poverty made endurable through a blaze of Geraniums in the one window opposite the door. It's just a plain, simple story, an epitome of the lives of hundreds of young women like unto her. She makes the most of the little she has and "once in a while spends fifteen cents for a new pot of Geraniums." The story runs on: "She'll be waiting there in the little room with the Geraniums until Robin comes home from the war, and when the two start out to make a new home in this land of homes, I am sure it will—no matter how small, how obscure, on what unknown, unheard-of street, and up no matter how many stairs—be one worth having."

Our correspondent adds: "Articles of this character are worth hundreds of dollars to the florists and nurserymen, being read by thousands of women. Just such articles inspire them to do things, where otherwise they might pay little attention to an advertisement directly to the point. Does the trade show proper appreciation for this kind of work, especially now, when the florist business is considered a luxury?

"Would it not be good policy if some such organization as the S. A. F. and O. H., or others, were to show their appreciation to the writers of such articles, and encourage them in this sort of work?

"On more than one occasion I have read similar articles and wanted to thank the author. However my lone effort would appear insignificant."

[Not at all, F. S., a "lone" letter from reader to editor, showing appreciation for services rendered, is always welcomed—they come so rarely nowadays.]

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES
Z-I-N-C-O

WHAT IT IS
Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O
Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O
It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

Great Saving in Preparing Land for Carnation Stock
FOLLOWING is what Kretschmar Brothers, of West Nyack, N. Y., say of the system:

"It has always been a great expense to prepare our land for the carnation stock before planting, as each day we would only plough enough for the day's planting so that we could work in moist soil. This also would be all hand raked to get it in the best condition. We can now plough the whole strip and harrow with a spiked tooth harrow and use the Skinner System after each day's planting to water them down."

Why It Is a Good Time to Buy Glass

THE Government has restricted the output to 50%.

France and Belgium are not making a light and haven't for some time.

It will be long after the war is over before they can again make it.

After the war there is bound to be a big boom in all kinds of building operations.

This means a lively demand for glass, with no chance of the price being lower.

Frankly, it looks as if after the war prices would actually be higher.

That's why now is a good time to buy glass.

We can sell you either Double A or Double B quality in any of the following sizes.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

These leaves are prepared in our own factory. They are flexible, do not mold, and are of a fine color. Cycas are very scarce, and we have been fortunate to have some on hand. War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

WAX FLOWERS

Mr. Florist:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

Recommendations for Bettering the Flower Trade

Otto Amling addresses the Chicago Florists' Club; analyzes the situation; declares that many greenhouses operate at a loss; insists that growers must know production costs; urges establishment of standard grades and uniform prices; suggests stabilizing the market in glut times by giving surplus to hospitals, instead of selling it at cut-throat prices; reviews reconsignment practices and disadvantages; recommends formation of advisory board consisting of growers, wholesalers and dealers to publish semi-weekly bulletins to post the trade; and presents figures as to production cost of Roses

As a member of a committee appointed by the president "to make recommendations for bettering conditions in the trade," I have made a careful study of this subject. My observations and experience lead me to submit first, an analysis of the situation, and then recommendations for improvements.

At present, under existing conditions all branches of the trade are suffering and not getting the returns they should. The hardest hit of all is the grower, the backbone of the business, who has by far the greatest investment of any, the biggest fixed expense in depreciation, and otherwise, and an extremely hazardous business. He is at present facing a serious situation and wondering whether it will be possible for him to survive. However, upon his welfare depends the further existence of the wholesaler and retailer.

Reports show that many greenhouse establishments are now operating at a loss. Of these many, finding it impossible to produce at a loss indefinitely, will close down all, or part of their houses, to keep from losing more. This reduction in the supply, added to the former output of the glass already abandoned, may cut quite a figure in the future of our business, and directly affect both wholesaler and retailer.

To prevent further curtailment of production it is necessary to get better average prices for the grower than those prevailing in past seasons. To this end the cooperation and assistance of all branches of the trade are needed. Better average prices will keep the growers above water, increase the commission and lessen the handling expense of the wholesaler and insure the retailer a steady flow of stock.

It has been suggested that the only solution of the grower's problem is the establishment of a powerful growers' organization to handle the selling and establish a chain of stores for the direct disposal of flowers to the public at profitable prices. This however, may be unnecessary, as there is no reason why the established wholesale houses should not handle the stock at prices that will enable the grower to make ends meet.

Must Know Cost of Production

To accomplish this, it is necessary in the first place, for the wholesaler to know what profitable prices for flowers are, and secondly, to get them. Many wholesalers have no producing experience; that of others is antiquated. Therefore it is necessary for the grower to supply an accurate record of present day cost of production per flower, from which to determine the price he should get for the various varieties and grades from time to time to bring the season's average up to what it should be. I am convinced that a thorough knowledge of what it costs to produce each flower today will open the eyes of many men in the flower business, and lead them to realize more fully that each flower has a value, and spur them on to get better average prices and not sell as cheaply as has been common practice most of the time in the past.

Profitable prices can be gotten by the wholesaler if asked. Many times it requires nothing more than the asking. It should be borne in mind that nature brings on by far the largest quantity of stock during Spring and Summer months, and that the prevailing prices in these months in a great measure decides the season's average price. Even though prices may seem high during some months when production is low, to make up for the low averages prevailing at times, requires selling at these good figures.

Uniform prices by all houses on equal stock, and the establishment and maintenance of a minimum price on flowers, such as $1 per 100 on Roses, 50c.per 100 on Carnations, and similar figures on other staple articles. would also result in materially improving weekly returns to the grower, as frequently as much stock can be sold at these figures than could be moved if allowed to drop still further, thereby demoralizing the market.

Prevent Glut Damage by Gifts to Hospitals

It would be better, in times of abundance, to donate to the hospitals the unsold surplus, if any, after prices have reached these extremely low levels, then follow the practices of many wholesalers to offer stock for sale at 50c. per 100 when competitors are asking a higher established minimum. No greater quantity of stock is sold at the lower figure and the loss to the grower and wholesaler is tremendous. It matters little whether John Doe's stock is sold, or that of Jim Smith, nor whether one wholesaler makes the sale, or another. The main thing is that someone make a profitable sale and not below the established minimum. If all wholesalers keep this in mind the wonderful mutual results will be reflected on the grower's statement.

Reconsignment Disadvantages

Another practice of the wholesaler which has frequently come within my own personal observation, which does not work out to the grower's best interests, is the reconsignment of stock, and the neglect at times of one wholesaler to charge another market price for goods bought although the stock so purchased is ofttimes again billed out at top market prices. In fact, some wholesalers have few or no consignors, and openly boast of being able to buy stock from others at prices enabling them to resell at wholesale at figures yielding them as high as 100 per cent profit. Growers can curb this practice and get the full price at which stock is billed to the retailer less the usual 15 per cent commission by so distributing their stock that no one house will be overloaded on certain stock and placing it as nearly direct to the buyer as possible.

Establish Grade Standards

A uniform system of grading such stock as Roses by all growers, to a certain length of stem, say 12in. and under, 15in., 18in., 24in., 30in., 36in. and 48in., to tie them in bundles of 50 each,allowing one extra for breakage,would materially lessen the expense of handling the stock by the wholesaler as frequently stock can be sold in these original bundles, thereby eliminating some of the breakage and bruises incidental to regrading. Open flowers ready for immediate sale should be kept separate. Bundles of a given length of stem would reduce the practice of some of the wholesalers' employees in cutting stems short unnecessarily, just because they think they ought to be so. Often I have seen this, much to my disgust. It costs money to grow every inch of stem on a rose, so the full length of stem should be utilized whenever possible, and stems reduced in length no more than necessary.

Advisory Board and Bulletins Suggested

A plan that has struck me as practical is the establishment of an advisory board consisting of three representative men from each branch of the trade—wholesalers, retailers and growers—meeting twice a week to discuss prevailing conditions. Such meetings would help in a great measure towards bringing about closer cooperation. Such board, for instance, could issue bulletins after each meeting, a separate one to the retailers featuring the items that represent the best value at the time, owing to the quantity on hand. The prospects of the cut for the next few days, as gauged by the weather conditions and by information furnished by the growers, would also help the retailer with his plants. Retailers would be thus enabled during times of overabundance to get bargains if quantity purchases are made, and should go out and make a splurge, giving the public part of the benefit of their large purchases, thereby moving a large quantity of stock, (much the same as the dry goods man in his line), resulting in new customers, and a handsome profit, besides eliminating the competition of the department stores.

The growers' bulletin would contain timely advice, such as: "Cut stock tighter, due to prevailing heat wave. Market overfilled on Roses; pinch what stock you can to have it come later. Much stock arriving infected with mildew. Get after thrips, etc." The recipient of this bulletin would stop to think whether any of his stock has been neglected in any way, so much could be accomplished toward raising the quality of flowers received on the market. Under prevailing conditions the individual wholesaler often hesitates to call a grower's attention to his neglect, fearing he may lose a consignor even though such advice would mean many dollars in his pocket, still more to the grower and more general satisfaction to the retailer.

Wholesaler Should be the Balance Wheel

After all, the wholesaler, as the grower's selling agent, and the source of supply for the retailer, controls the situation. It is my honest belief that he can do more than any other at this time to furnish immediate relief, enabling the grower to continue his difficult task in these times of stress, and by so doing improve his own welfare, as well as that of the retailer.

My general idea of improvements in the present system to afford immediate relief for the grower, can be termed as "cutting off the rough edges of the wholesaler's present practices" and closer cooperation by both retailer and grower with the wholesaler. Permit me to suggest the following:

Summary of Recommendations

1. Growers, study the costs of production, and bring them to the knowledge of the wholesalers. 2. Wholesalers, don't be bashful about asking a price. Remember that your season's return per flower must average above the costs to enable the grower to live, and that the price received during the months of heaviest production decide the average more than the seemingly high prices usually prevalent when cuts are low. 3. Wholesalers, establish a minimum price of $1 per 100 on Roses, 50c. per 100 on Carnations and similarly on other staple articles. 4. Wholesalers, always bear in mind that even though you may lose a sale by asking a price from a customer who wants to buy for a song, by maintaining uniform prices, some other man will make a profitable sale, resulting in mutual benefits. 5. Growers, consign your stock to the house through which it reaches the retailer most directly. 6. Wholesalers, charge one another full market price, you owe it to the growers. 7. Growers, cooperate with, and assist your wholesalers by a uniform system of grading and bunching, adopting such standard sizes as 12in., 15in., 18in., 24in., 30in., 36in. and 48in., for Roses. 8. Wholesalers, remember that each inch of stem costs money to produce and utilize full length whenever possible. 9. The election of a representative advisory board of nine members three to be chosen from each branch of the trade meeting twice weekly in the trade's interest. 10. The issuance of two semiweekly bulletins one for the retailer, and one for the grower. 11. Retailers to purchase as much as possible the items on the long side of the market in sufficient quantity to prevent stock from reaching the department stores, thereby reaping the benefit for themselves.

It has been my aim to depict conditions as they exist, not solely to criticize, but with a view to affect improvements which will insure the future prosperity of our business, and result in mutual benefits.

Figuring Cost of Production

Cost of production has been arrived at by taking the total operating expenses for the year, including proper depreciation charges and 6 per cent. interest on the total investment and dividing this into the total number of square feet of bench space. Thereafter the cost per suqare foot is used as a basis for all other determinations.

The cost of operation per square foot of bench space of an exclusive Rose growing establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, was 67.6c. per square foot, divided as follows:

Cost of Operating Rose House

Items	Cost in Cents per Sq. Ft.	Items	Cost in Cents Per Sq. Ft.
Wages	24.44	Boxes and wrappings and expressage	1.58
Coal	11.32	Water (power bills and other expenses)	1.40
Commission on sales	10.14	Plants and seeds	1.26
Depreciation on plant and equipment	4.73	Insecticides	.79
Interest on investment	4.35	Taxes	1.13
General expenses	3.88	Insurance	.03
Fertilizers	2.15

The present day cost of operating each square foot is, and the total for the current year will be, much higher than the average prevailing during the past year. For instance, much coal was bought the fore part of the year at lower figures and with lower freight rates attached than obtainable now. Labor also is now considerably higher. The latter you will note comes first in order of importance with coal ranking next. These two represent a grower's heaviest expense items and any increases are reflected immediately on his balance sheet. Of course, the advances of other items since last year also add to a grower's difficulties.

Minimum Gross Return per Square Foot

Considering all advances and the extremely hazardous nature of the business with little or no insurance, due to the almost prohibitive rates, I feel the gross returns per square foot per season, to meet present conditions, and provide a profit commensurate with the chances taken, should be no less than 96.2c. per square foot on Roses, and similar crops requiring the same high temperature, fertilizer and amount of time to handle. These figures would be somewhat lower in the case of Carnations and other cool growing crops.

The cost of operating per square foot is the basic figure for all other determinations. Some varieties of Roses such as Russell are sometimes set closer, but the average planting distance of most growers is 12in. x 15in. Each plant thus occupies 1¼ square foot of bench space. The gross returns per plant on Roses should be not less than $1.20 on varieties occupying 1¼ sq. ft., and proportionately according to distance set.

Giant California Hybrid Amaryllis

With the shortage of many of the customary Easter Plants these Giant Flowered Amaryllis which are more easily grown in pots than Easter Lilies and are far more showy, should prove a valuable addition among flowering plants for late Winter, early Spring and Easter use.

We have been familiar with and have watched this particular strain for a number of years; we have not only seen it growing with the originators, but tried them out in pot-culture in our own houses. The flowers are of enormous size: flowers with full rounded broad petals 10 inches in diameter are not unusual, and 5 to 6 flowers to a stem, frequently two stems being pushed to the bulb. In color there are selfs and stripes, ranging from the purest white ground color with rose or red markings to rich orange-scarlet, cherry, crimson and maroon and all with a satin-like lustre, which in the deeper shades shines as though burnished.

Give these a trial, as we feel certain you will be pleased with the result.

Price: Extra Heavy Selected Bulbs, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100, $400.00 per 1000. 50 supplied at 100 rates, 250 at 1000 rates.

The above prices are intended for the Trade only.

Single Violets

Nothing like Violets for an ideal cold house crop. Not a florist in the country but can make good use of them if they are any good at all. If the doubles don't do well for you why not try the singles? With many growers the early and even a good part of the midseason sorts of 'Mums have left the houses before a serious frost has done much damage outdoors so the single Violets out in the field, or lifted plants in frames, are in the very best condition to be brought in now and be planted in one of the cleared 'Mum benches. There is no reason for changing the soil; work it over well. Maybe add a little. Most likely all the nourishment the Violets will need is already in it. Later on if the plants do well you may apply a couple of doses of liquid cow manure. But let the plants get established first. Don't plant runners and all; but clean the plants nicely. Take off all the decayed leaves; remove the runners. It is far easier to do this before planting than to pull the plants all over the bench just as the roots get hold. If for any reason you like to plant a house when the temperature is to be kept just above freezing, Violets will be the proper thing. They won't pay during Midwinter in such a house but will give you a mass of flowers in early Spring.

Snapdragons

As a Paying Crop

This is a good time to plant some 2in. or 2½in. Snapdragons on a sunny bench for early Spring flowering. Hardly anything one can plant now will yield so much before March and April. Snapdragons are as ideal a crop to follow 'Mums as the florist can handle. As with everything else don't overdo it. Because you have 1500 nice plants ready for benching isn't any good reason for planting them all when you have use for only 300 or 400 plants. Don't depend on wholesaling your surplus if you have a limited amount of glass and grow for retail trade. Plant just enough of what you can dispose of and devote the balance of the bench room to some other crop. It's variety you need. With the specialist it is quantity. He or the commission man may supply your shortage. With Spring crops in particular it is apt to happen that at the time you have a surplus on hand and send it to the market expecting some wonderful returns, judging by what you had to pay for stock during Midwinter, you find everybody else with a surplus of the same thing. Then you promise yourself never again to grow this particular crop, when the fault is all yours and not the crop's. Rust and a dry, warm house go well together with Snapdragons, while a cool house, fairly moist atmosphere, yet plenty of ventilation, keep rust down.

Spanish Iris

Among the Spanish Iris we have a dozen or more beautiful sorts most desirable for forcing under glass for early Spring flowering. It will pay to grow at least a few of them with the little work attached to it. Make use of bulb pans, 10in. or 12in. in diameter, or flats the same as you would for the small flowering Gladioli. Place them after being planted in a deep coldframe and water thoroughly. Keep them until needed to place into a Carnation house temperature next February. By the middle or end of March, they will set buds and if you wish they may be hustled along a bit if necessary.

Outdoor 'Mums

Have You a Good Supply on Hand?

When at noon on Nov. 7 the church bells started to ring and the whistles began to blow to start the celebration of what turned out afterward to be a false report regarding the great war having come to an end, we were cutting excellent 'Mums outdoors. The plants, protected with a temporary frame over them and glass, ought to be in good shape for some days yet. While this is unusual for so late in the season there is hardly a year when one can't make this class of 'Mums pay. While they may not be as perfect as pompons grown indoors they will answer every bit as well for decorative purposes, help to make your store a show place and sell other 'Mums. Every retail grower has good use for them even in localities where the plants can't stand the Winters without being well protected. Lift a few stock plants now and heel into a frame where they may remain until February. If you have good early sorts I suggest propagating heavily next Spring. Plant them in the field in beds 5ft. wide so when Fall comes you may place a temporary frame and glass over them. With such the thermometer may go down to 25 deg. without doing any harm to either plants or flowers. Even if they should partly freeze and spoil or prove a complete failure in some years it will still pay well to handle them. You should have a good sized stock on hand in the way of small plants to offer to your customers next Spring for their own grounds.

Freesias

If you started Freesias, six to seven bulbs in 4in. pots, the present is a good time to plant them out on a bench to follow 'Mums. The July planted stock is ready to form buds. It looks as if there won't be any trouble in getting them to flower by Christmas. This means that they will more or less replace Roman Hyacinths and Paperwhite Narcissi with many of the smaller growers. See to it that the early planted stock will be properly supported. Don't keep the house they are in over 50 deg. If you plant the rows far enough apart, of the ones you bench now, Pansies or some other crop may be planted between to take the place of the Freesias later on.

Small-flowering Gladioli

What we know under Gladiolus Colvillei and to which such beautiful sorts as the Bride, Blushing Bride, Fairy Queen and Peach Blossom belong, form desirable cut flowers during early Spring. The bulbs may be planted any time between now and the end of December In a bench by themselves they hardly pay the man with a small area of glass. They occupy the space too long. To plant them along the edge or between Carnations is just as bad If the Carnations are so bad that there is room to plant another crop between the plants it is high time to fire them out. If Carnations are paying for themselves don't spoil them with trying to grow other things between them. If you have early Pansies or Freesias in rows across the benches and far enough apart these small Gladioli may be planted in double rows a couple of inches apart between the bulbs. Another way, and a good one, when you plant only a small number of bulbs, is to plant in pans. Don't crowd the bulbs. Have at least 2½in. between them. The deeper the pans the better. The advantage of pan culture is that the smaller grower may shift them about anywhere and at any time. The smaller a place and the greater the variety of stock grown in it the more shifting and handling is usually to be done. If you have other uses for your bulb pans small flats may be used instead, but allow at least 4in. depth of soil. Shallow flats spell failure. You may obtain a fair growth of leaves but usually the buds will dry up. That doesn't pay. Don't attempt to handle more than you can take care of.

Callas

No matter what may happen this much is certain: Lilies next Easter won't be over plentiful. I predict a larger business than ever for that great flower day. The nearest thing to an Easter Lily is a Calla. There will be a ready market for all that will be offered. Why not grow at least a few? You don't need a 60 deg. house. If you want the plants to flower during the latter part of April a Carnation temperature is good enough. Plant the bulbs now and let them come along in a cool house below a bench if necessary. After the holidays bring to the light. If kept cool you will obtain short stocky plants just the thing for pots. By watching them a little you may have every plant in time for Easter week. They may need a little pushing or holding back during the last five weeks.

Ranunculus for Forcing

The giant French and Persian Ranunculus will be appreciated by your patrons next April. After a season of Carnations and Roses they are something out of the ordinary. They last for days in a cut state. Plant a few now and treat them almost like the Spanish Iris. Because the bulbs are cheap don't crowd them into the pans nor try any severe forcing on them. They won't stand it. While Tulips and Narcissi are the main items in the list of bulbs for forcing don't stop there. With the many other things these are rarely seen, yet there is so little to the forcing itself that one should really pay more attention to it. Keep on showing something out of the ordinary and it is sure to be appreciated.

National Publicity Campaign

Judging from the clippings of advertisements coming into our Promotion Bureau, the trade is not using our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," to nearly the extent expected. A little thought of the fact that this slogan is featured in all our magazine advertisements should determine the advisability of using it as widely as possible in all advertising, on stationery, boxes, parcels and wherever it can be introduced. While it is not absolutely necessary that the line conform to the design of the one used in all bureau publicity (printers, of course, being able to provide a bold setting for any purpose) still as the public is now accustomed to seeing it in our own style, it would be better to get a line electrotype from the bureau, or have one made especially. We can supply electrotyes of lines 1½in., 2in, 6in. and 9 in. long carrying all these sizes in stock for immediate despatch on receipt of orders.

In addition to the magazine advertising already arranged for November and December, the program for January and February embraces a list of 27 national magazines which are to carry a series of advertisements featuring the slogan in connection with special days and seasons. In 18 of these magazines an advertisement will appear twice, and nine of them three times. The combined circulation of these magazines is roughly estimated to be in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 copies, and it must be remembered that this field is to be gone over twice, and 40 per cent. of it three times! With all this publicity our slogan as a trade mark will have a value almost incalculable, and florists may, and ought to use it as much as possible.

The list of magazines is as follows: Atlantic, Red Book, American Magazine, Century, Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, Harper's Magazine, Hearst's Magazine, Metropolitan, Munsey's Magazine, Popular Science Monthly, Review of Reviews, Scribner's Magazine, Vanity Fair, Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, World's Work, Sunset, Argosy Combination, Collier's Weekly, Christian Science Monitor, Independent, Leslie's Weekly, Life, Literary Digest, Outlook, Scientific American.

It is now almost a year since our publicity campaign started with an appeal for subscriptions. We aimed to raise a fund of $50,000, but if our object is to be attained we must raise about $5000 more before the close of the year. Shall we do it? If the florists who have not yet subscribed will give our project the consideration it deserves, we shall. As has been said many times before, this is not work for the benefit of any one florist, it is for all in the trade, collectively. One man cannot get more than another, our policy of using journals of national circulation insuring against this. The larger the city, the larger the number of florists, of course, so the benefit is equitably distributed. It may be said, without fear of contradiction, that the campaign for 1918 has resulted in a stabilization of business despite adverse conditions. It has increased the demand for flowers considerably; it has built up business for special flower days; and has caused the public very largely to look upon flowers and plants in a new light, as subjects highly suitable for gifts.

As "drives" for the attainment of important objects are the fashion today, why not start one by yourself, sending in a subscription to the fund if you have not already done so? In your own community you have brother florists; why not make a little drive and send in a community subscription? You would feel the better for it.

Remember, all subscriptions are published. JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

1170 Broadway, N. Y.

The Late Admiral Aaron Ward

The executive committee of the American Rose Society has adopted the following resolutions on the death of Admiral Aaron Ward:

WHEREAS, Since the last session of the executive committee of the American Rose Society, our friend and counselor, Admiral Aaron Ward, has passed into the "Great Beyond," and

WHEREAS, We feel keenly the loss of his wise counsel in the work of the Society where his keen love of Roses and his thorough knowledge of their culture, both in this country and abroad, made his membership in this committee and in the Society of inestimable value, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That we express to Mrs. Ward and family our sense of loss, our deep sympathy for them in their bereavement, and our appreciation of the rare quality of the character of Admiral Ward; and be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent Mrs. Ward, a copy spread on the minutes of the Society and copies inserted in the horticultural press.

A large commercial grower came hastily into this office the other day to insure space to dispose of his stock, asking the very proper question: "Why, sir, have you always called your splendid paper THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE?" "Simple enough, and our friends who have profited by us will join us in saying it is the one great exchange mart, or clearing house, for the enjoyment of all florists, nurserymen and seedsmen, with contemporary trades, in America and elsewhere. You see, sir, you simply bring the news of your stock to us, we clear it out for you, and exchange it into money. All you have to do is to receive your checks, credit your customers on your books, take a little surplus and your motor down to the seashore and enjoy a good dinner, just as you see them doing all the time, so then, you being one of us—why not you?"*

The SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

President: F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; First Vice-President: W. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md.; Second Vice-President: David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary-Treasurer: C. E. Kendel, 2010 Ontario St., Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary: Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich

European Notes

(The following letter was of course written before the armistice, which practically ends the world war, was signed.)

Short days and long, humid nights do not help the seed grower much; less than ever now that both our coal and light is not only rationed but also very seriously reduced. As, however, it is for "the good of the cause" we do not complain. Our friends on your side will, we feel certain, not be too exacting as regards the time of delivery, seeing that we are doing our best to win the war. The changed conditions in connection with the awful struggle now proceeding is having its anticipated effect in neutral countries, which have for the past two years been trying to balance themselves upon the fence. As a result a number of offers are flying around, some of them of a somewhat tempting character. The greater part, however, are priced on the lines laid down by the most exacting French grower, and are consequently out of reach.

For some few special lines, notably the popular varieties of Cabbage, the demands of the growers will have to be complied with, but the more bulky articles, such as Beet, Carrot, Mangel and Onion are likely to cause the aforesaid growers grievous disappointment. As regards Carrots it is very odd that the white varieties are worth considerably more than the red or yellow. Supply and demand are the cause of this, and the few growers who have consistently held on to the culture of the white varieties are reaping their reward. They deserve it.

Chicory and Endive, which have been extremely difficult to procure at any price are turning out so well at present that prices are once more on a fairly moderate basis. The plains of unhappy Belgium, if they can be prepared for cultivation in time, will doubtless absorb a considerable quantity of the large rooted and Witloof varieties; this is a culture for which Belgium has long been famous. The Belgians are said to prefer the Chicory Coffee to the genuine article, and while the present writer does not share their tastes, he is bound to admit that he has never tasted Chicory in such perfection in any other country.

Your English correspondent, in describing, on page 426 of The Exchange of Sept. 14, the culture of Chicory in England as a "stunt," has evidently been misinformed. It has been grown quite extensively, for an article of this description, for several years, and quite successfully so far as the cultivation and handling of the product are concerned, but it can hardly be considered a great financial success; and its culture will most likely be discontinued after the war is ended.

New York Seed Trade

Larger Demand Probable

Consequent upon the close of the great war many former employees of the seed stores in this city will probably be released from the war service to which they were called, and will be seeking positions in their old line of work.

Some questions of importance in the seed trade are now coming up: First, will the sale of garden seeds, both vegetable and flower, and of field seeds be larger than that of 1918? It certainly appears as if this question must receive an affirmative answer, for many private places will no doubt again be reopened in early Spring, and commercial truck and field farming will probably expand, since more help will be available to carry on these lines of private and commercial horticulture and agriculture; perhaps, too, though this is far from certain, indeed doubtful, more fertilizers of some kinds will be available. The second question is, will Pacific Ocean line steamers be available and will they bring to the United States, though late, a considerable number of this year's crop of Japanese Lily bulbs? This certainly seems possible and perhaps probable.

There has been no further arrival of Dutch or French bulbs. All bulbs are said to be selling well, and there appears to be no probability of any large surplus.

The general hilarity in this city on Monday consequent upon the close of the Great War prevented the transaction of any considerable business on that day and, in fact, during any of the earlier days of the week.

Thomas Page, of Great Barrington, Mass., was in town last week attending the two Chrysanthemum exhibitions, also was George L. Stillman of Westerly, R. I., the Dahlia specialist.

Now that the advance bulb orders are mostly filled there is little business doing in the way of sales in the several seed stores of the city.

Chicago Seed Trade

Dealers in French and Holland bulbs complain of the delay in receiving their full supply. Shipments come through at intervals. Many varieties in ready demand have not come in so far. Wholesale orders are only partially filled. Some of the houses are reserving the largest portion of their stock for their retail trade.

The W. W. Barnard Co., had an attractive bulb advertisement in the Sunday Tribune. M. K. Smith states that the company is having a brisk retail trade. In the wholesale department it is oversold to an extent of several thousand dollars. Stock comes through in such small quantities nearly all wholesale orders are filled short.

Winterson's Seed Store reports a good demand for bulbs at retail notwithstanding the fact that all bulbs are selling at much higher prices than formerly. This has not lessened the demand. Buyers are willing to pay the price.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., states that the demand and inquiries for bulbs this Fall are so far ahead of the supply that only old customers who placed their orders well in advance with his company can be supplied.

The Onion set situation is quiet at present. A considerable portion of the crop is still on the farmers' hands.

Vaughan's Seed Store is having a large call for all bulbs and plants for Fall planting. While there is a good supply on hand there is some shortage in many items. Geo. Mohn is taking care of the wholesale orders from the West Side store at Randolph and Halsted sts. Mrs. J. C. Vaughan has gone to Miami, Fla., for a rest.

Building permits have been issued to the Stratton-Ladish Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., for construction of a $60,000 warehouse, a $40,000 addition to the present seed plant and $11,000 office building, sanctioned by the War Industry Board.

Canadian Seed Importation

Regulations respecting seed importations into Canada to take effect Nov. 1 have been published in a "Memorandum," dated Oct. 26, by the Dept. of Customs, prohibiting the entry of "unfit" seed in lots of 10 pounds or more. The seeds covered are Clovers, grasses, Vetches, Rape and other forage plants, field, root and garden vegetables. The regulations cover what constitutes unfit seed, taking of samples, delivery on examination or in bond, delivery without examination or bond, release or cleaning under bond, recleaned seed sampling, unfit seed exporting, release of cleaned seed, prohibition of mixing unfit shipments with other seed, notice of removal from port of entry, reports of disposition of detained shipments, failure of importer to report, and penalties.

Canada Growing Seed Supplies

The war has made Canada produce her own seed. Previously field, root and vegetable seeds came from Europe largely. Mangel and Beet seed came from France and Germany, Turnip from Holland and Great Britain, and Carrot from France and Great Britain. Cabbage, Cauliflower, Celery, Parsnip, garden Beet and Radish were mainly of European stock. Tomato, Cucumber, Onion and Melon seeds come from the United States. Last year over 64,000 pounds of these seeds were produced in Canada. The Canadian seed branch has been working in cooperation with the American Seed Reporting Service Bureau of Markets at Washington in making surveys and exchanging seed supplies. The Canadian seed commissioner has just returned from a conference at Washington of the American Seed Stocks Committee with representatives of the Food Administration, War Trade Board, Seed Trade and Seed Growers. He arranged for Canadian exchange with the United States of seeds which were required to supply shortages in either country. Canadian gardeners are thus assured of a sufficient supply of field, root and vegetable seed for their next season's crop.

Vegetable Seeds for Europe

Requested to give an opinion as to what vegetable seeds, if any, American seedsmen would be in a position to export if called upon by European needs, the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., of Cambridge, N. Y., say they doubt if the man lives who is able at this time to tell either what the demand will be from abroad or what will be available for use there. Further, they add:

"Without a doubt a good many kinds of vegetable seeds are more plentiful, or, at least, less scarce this year than they have been for the past two or three years, but so far as we are concerned we see no prospect of any real surplus in any lines after taking care of the orders we handle, and providing the necessary insurance against future shortages or crop failures.

"The weather during September and the first part of October was so exceedingly bad that the harvest was greatly delayed and we do not know yet what we are going to get on many things. We have the feeling that a good many seedsmen in placing their orders early this year estimated rather liberally as to their requirements and some, if they get orders filled 100 per cent., may feel that they have some surplus, but we do not think this would be large, taking it all together, and that it would go very far toward helping out any serious deficiency which might arise on the other side. Indeed, we feel it will take some years to get back to the normal supply of seeds for the world, even though peace comes at once."

C. J. Van Bourgondien, at Arlington, N. J., manager of the American offices of K. Van Bourgondien & Son, of Hillegom, Holland, reports an exceptionally brisk demand for Dutch bulbs. His firm is preparing for the Spring trade and has cabled to the Holland offices for a large quantity of high grade Gladioli bulbs. It is expected that these will be shipped by the regular route, as it is belived that shipping conditions will be normal by the early Spring.

A Chatty Letter from Overseas

The following was recently received at The Exchange office:

I was very glad indeed to receive your kind letter of Sept. 6, and in answer to your question as to "just who are you?" I am very pleased and proud to say that I am, as you surmised, the son of George Arnold of Rochester, N. Y. (although he is now at Ensenore, N. Y.) It was under his most excellent tutelage that I received the best part of my training, my especial interest being in seed breeding work. I am getting The Exchange quite regularly, as my father placed a subscription for me this Summer. At the time of enlisting I was with Joseph Harris Co., of Coldwater, N. Y. I wish to thank you for your offer to send me The Exchange.

I have been over here a year and have traveled over a good bit of France, but as I have been up near the front with a railway operating regiment I have had very little chance to see much of interest to the trade. There are many interesting things in connection with the war, both horrible and humorous, that I could tell, if I were permitted, but you probably get enough of that in the daily papers.

Asiatic Labor in France

There is a statement in the Seed Trade columns of The Exchange of Aug. 24 that I would like to comment on. France has imported Asiatic labor as well as Algerian, etc. But I do not know of their being used as domestic laborers, as all I have seen were brought in as Colonial troops and are largely used for construction work under military supervision. In fact, we have many of the Chinese working with us as laborers on the railway. However, I am glad to see the majority of the trade not in favor of importing them into the United States.

French Agricultural Methods

I have found the French agricultural methods very interesting. Although many of their practices seem "old fashioned" to us, I am not so sure that they really are. They are surely much more thorough in their cultivation than we are, and I think it is only the fact that most of their implements are rather crude that makes their farming and gardening appear old fashioned. The ground is mostly worked in small plots and much hand labor is used.

The lack of labor saving tools is surprising and it is hard to see how they produced the seed that they did at the low prices, even considering the cheapness of labor. I think the reason is that the people were satisfied with living conditions that did not require big returns.

I have seen farmers who were considered the leading farmers of the town and they were not living as farmers in the same class in America do. A stone house of the simplest design, a few rooms, crude furniture, the house heated by fireplaces, and with the barn incorporated in the same building; plenty to eat of plain food, plenty of wine, a few francs laid by, and they were happy and contented. They don't spend much time or money traveling; they don't desire an auto, or a furnace and bathroom. But I think these times are past and we will never hear of cheap French seeds again. Wages are high and the people have traveled more than ever before and I can see that they are never going to be satisfied again with the old order of things.

Good Seed Can Be Grown in the United States

With our more modern tools and our way of doing things, as Geo. D. Clark would say, "in the most expeditious manner," there is no reason why we need import so much of our seed from Europe, providing we introduce some of the French thoroughness into our stock selection. Another thing I have noticed here is a lack of conserving fertility by saving manure or using cover crops, and the soil is badly in need of it. I have not seen a manure pit or a cover crop. From my observation in the gardens it looks to me very much as if the French stocks have run down considerably in the last four years. A good clean stock of any variety is hard to find in any of the many, many gardens I have seen, both military and civilian. I repeat that I cannot help feeling that with proper care in stock seed selecting America could soon lead in seed production.

(Concluded on page 776)

Cold weather will soon be here and the shipping of plants will be difficult. If you order at once they will go through without danger of freezing. We have a splendid lot of KENTIAS to offer, in both single and combination, of a quality and finish that cannot be excelled.

French War Gardens

The French have a very admirable system of war gardens which means much to them. There is a special department for the carrying out of this work and for supplying seed, tools, etc. Each camp has its garden and it is obligatory that it be properly worked, even though the men are to move on in another month and others take their places. These gardens are very neat and efficient and are producing something the year around. I have seen them up at the front where they were subject to frequent shell fire. I have read that last year vegetables to the value of over 2,500,000 francs were produced.

U. S. A. Garden Service Dept.

The Garden Service Department of the Quartermaster Corps of the U. S. Army is also doing some good agricultural work. Each regiment stationed permanently is supposed to cultivate 2½ acres. As to their work I will give in part a letter I have recently received from Sgt. G. A. Erickson of the Garden Service:

"Versailles is the headquarters for the Garden Service. We have a large farm of about 500 acres, and in addition a seedling nursery for the production of seedlings, which, when large enough, are transported to our numerous gardens in France. There are numerous gardens wherever troops are stationed, in order that they may be supplied with green vegetables. In addition to this, bulk production farms are being established for growing vegetables in bulk, principally Potatoes, Cabbage, Beans and root crops. These farms vary in size from 500 to 1200 acres."

Commends U. S. Florists' Patriotism

With great pleasure I have been noticing in THE EXCHANGE the spirit shown by the trade back home. It is surely fine and the patriotism shown by the patriotic actions taken, collectively and individually, places the trade on a high plane. You have showed that you are far from "slackers," and it is such things being done at home that make our work over here much more worth while.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am, etc. PVT. SCHUYLER ARNOLD,

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

John Jackson, of Jackson's Flower Shop, of Kalamazoo, Mich., is in the aviation service.

Herbert Clawsen, of the America Flower Shop, of Denver, Col., has been ordered to report at Camp Pike.

On his return from 15 months in France Jack Mills of Toronto, Ont., has taken up his old work at Allen Gardens.

John Bartsh, formerly with P. C. Hahn of Cleveland, Ohio, writes from France that he is feeling "like a duke," and having a good time.

Victor Ferrari, son of Emile E. Ferrari, of San Francisco, Cal., is in New York undergoing instructions for Ensign in the United States Navy.

Henry P. Gessner, a former employee of the Whitney-Eckstein Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes from France that he was recently lost in "no man's land," not an unusual occurrence to a despatch bearer.

Mr. Western, who for six years past has been well known to the Denver trade and was in business there under the firm name of Davison & Western Floral Co., enlisted in the Army several months ago.

Sergeant J. W. Kolinsky, formerly with the Taylor Arcade Flower Shop, of Cleveland, Ohio, writes that he is enjoying novel experiences at Pisgah Forest, N. C. The camp is 8000ft. above sea level.

One of THE EXCHANGE boys who is "Over There" writs an interesting letter. This stands out particularly: "I had my hair trimmed by an old barber who has been in the same place for 37 years, and I daresay the scissors must have been there the same length of time."

Dick Vesey, son of Judge W. J. Vesey, wholesale and retail florist, of Terre Haute, Ind., left home on Nov. 5 to join the motor transport corps at Washington, D. C., whence he will later be moved to a training camp. David Vesey, his younger brother, left the same day for Washington to be in the hardware and metals department of the war service. Dick is a graduate of DePauw University of Michigan. Each is married and has two children.

Who for his country falls."

The trade generally and the many friends of Chas. F. Drawiel, florist of 268 Ninth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., will regret to learn of the death of Mr. Drawiel's only son, Wilbur A., who died on Oct. 31, at the age of 19. The young man was in U. S. Service at the time of his death, in the Medical Corps. After enlisting in October, 1917, he contracted pneumonia and was finally sent for treatment to the base hospital at Gun Hill Road, near Mount Vernon, N. Y. Tuberculosis developed, however, and he was sent to Lierty, N. Y., for five months, but his case was hopeless and he died at his parents' home. He was buried at Greenwood Cemetery on Nov. 3.

E. E. Stone

A telegram from R. C. Kerr of Houston, advises us of the recent death of E. E. Stone, nurseryman of Dickinson, Texas, who was killed in action in France. Mr. Stone, who was a Canadian by birth, volunteered in the Canadian Army the first of this year, and went to Toronto, subsequently being sent to France.

He was well known in the trade as a wholesale grower of Asparagus plumosus and ferns, as well as a general grower of shade trees and ornamentals. At the time of his enlistment he disposed of his nursery business, which was a side line, his wife continuing the fern business. During the great hurricane which swept over the Southern Coast in Aug., 1915. Mr. Stone sustained the loss of a number of his greenhouses. He took occasion at that time to make records of the hurricane and for graphic details the report was considered most complete. Mr. Stone was highly commended by the florists of Texas, when he enlisted, and his death will be keenly felt by many.

Various Flower Shows

Flower shows were the order this week in Toronto. On Tuesday, Nov. 5, the Gardeners and Florists' Association held its annual 'Mum show in St. George's Hall, 14 Elm st., and on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 8 and 9, under the auspices of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, the Toronto florists had displays of magnificent 'Mums in their various stores, making a show which marked this year as the "best yet." The show on Nov. 5 was for private greenhouses only. The displays were excellent and the hall was crowded during the whole evening with flower lovers. First prizes in the five classes were all awarded to Sir Henry Pellatt; second in Section 2 to Sir Edmund Osler; in the other four sections to Exhibition Park.

Sec. 1. Best 6 distinct varieties; Sec. 2. Best 3 distinct varieties; Sec. 3. Best 1 bloom; Sec. 4. Best vase of singles, with own foliage, arranged for effect, vase not more than 4in. across; Sec. 5. Best vase pompons, own foliage, arranged for effect, vase not more than 4in. across. The following made the entries from the above greenhouses: Sir Henry Pellatt's—George Thompson; Exhibition Park—Arthur Hasted; Sir Edmund Osler's—W. Allen; Allen Gardens—W. Hermiston.

Special prizes were awarded for a number of exhibits. W. J. Hoath, retail florist, 272 College st., was awarded a special prize for the best arranged basket of various 'Mums. F. Noton of Sir Joseph Flanell's greenhouse a first for a vase of new singles. A beautiful, large basket of a new yellow seedling called the Margaret Noton secured another special prize. Mr. Noton also showed a pink seedling. H. G. Dillemuth, vice-president of the Gardeners and Florists' Association was judge. The committee in charge consisted of Alexander Simpson, president; Geo. H. Mills, treasurer, and Geo. Douglas, secretary.

Retail Florists' Club Show

The 'Mum show on Nov. 8 and 9, under the auspices of the Retail Florists' Club, was a big success in spite of rainy weather on the 7th and a big celebration which interefered with the delivery of flowers. The Dale Estate at Brampton gave the florists a surprise in the quality and quantity of the blooms. Usually the florists make the rounds of the greenhouses previous to the show but this year so many florists were ill and others so busy that they were unable to make the usual visits. The blooms on display supplied by the various greenhouses, were gorgeous and occasioned much favorable comment both by the florists themselves and the public who thronged the stores.

E. E. Stone

Bonnaffon, Chieftain, Childs, Chadwick and similar varieties retailed at $4 per doz.; Turner, Tursell and exhibition varieties sold for $12 to $24 per doz., pompons were $1.50 per bunch and Mensa at $1 per doz.

All the stores were beautifully decorated with various kinds of 'Mums arranged for best decorative effects. They filled the windows and were decked in banks in the store in collections to show to best advantage. All the floral merchants in the city took on the cooperative plan of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club. The big celebration on Thursday, Nov. 7, following the peace announcement interrupted the supply of flowers and dealers were afraid of the 'Mum deliveries which, however, were made promptly Friday morning. Dealers were not slow to recognize the holiday and sent out all flowers tied with tricolor ribbons.

Agincourt Hort. Society Meeting

The second annual meeting of the Agincourt Hort. Society was held at Agincourt, Ont., on Nov. 6. The retiring president, G. B. Padget, announced that the first year's work of the society had been successful. One hundred and sixty trees have been planted in the village, and the society has opposed with success the mutilation of shade trees by the hydro. Officers elected are: Mrs. Geo. S. Henry, honorary president; Frank Weir, president; Mrs. T. A. Paterson, first vice-president; Mrs. G. B. Padget, second vice-president. Board of Directors: John Elliott, W. H. Paterson, W. G. Preston, Mrs. A. Doherty, Mrs. John Quantz, Dr. E. N. Coutts, T. A. Paterson, George Padget and R. T. Lang.

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Hort. Society, held at Belleville, Ont., Nov. 7, the following officers were elected: President, W. M. Mott; first vice-president, W. R. Vallance; second vice-president, H. Gorman; secretary-treasurer, W. J. Diamond; directors, F. D. Diamond, W. J. Diamond, S. J. Wedden, H. J. Clarke, B.A., A. E. Thrasher, H. Wilkin, John Harris, Jesse Harris, and A. R. Walker; auditors, F. D. Diamond and A. R. Walker. H. J. Clarke was appointed delegate to attend the annual meeting of the Ont. Hort. Ass'n., to be held at Toronto. A committee on inducements was appointed as follows: President Mott, Messrs. H. J. Clarke, S. J. Wedden and W. J. Diamond.

Trade Topics

The gardeners and florists of Toronto visited the greenhouses of Sir Henry Pellatt and Sir John Eaton on Saturday, Nov. 9. The former is in charge of George Thompson and the latter in charge of E. Whittick.

S. A. Frost, College st., is on a hunting trip in the north country.

C. A. Urbach, 490 Bloor st. west, died recently. He had been at the same location for the past 25 years.

George Geraghty, manager of Dunlop's, has returned to work after his serious illness.

By a recent amendment to the destructive Insect and Pest Act shipments of nursery stock from England or other European countries may now enter at the Port of Quebec. Previously Montreal was the only port of entry for the Quebec district.

E. S. Estlin, representing the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board in connection with the gas situation, issued an order on Nov. 4 that on and after Nov. 15, greenhouses might use gas only between the hours of 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. During other hours there must be some other kind of fuel for heating purposes. He emphasized the fact that having other fuel on hand will also be a precautionary measure should the natural gas supply in the western counties of Ontario become weak and it should be necessary to cut off all commercial users. Until Nov. 15 the greenhouses may use gas as they have done before, for all purposes.

E. Long, 66 Weston st., London, will construct a glass and frame greenhouse.

On his return after being in France for 15 months, Jack Mills has again taken up his work at Allen Gardens, Toronto. G. C. K.

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES

Z-I-N-C-O

WHAT IT IS

Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

On The Value of Printer's Ink

Amid all the factors contributing to the successful conclusion of the war, printer's ink has been pre-eminent; its free use has given unstinted service. That the duty of the users of printer's ink—nay, their privilege—the distribution of the information so necessary to the consolidation of the feelings of millions of people, giving full expression to their will to win the war, has been next most important to the actual fighting on the field, few will deny.

A great task has been met in a great way.

The use of printer's ink in connection with the various Liberty Loan campaigns is a serviceable illustration of the value of its work.

Printer's ink was the common ground on which all the Allied Governments could meet their people at any time or place. It was actually the use of the local road on express schedule, in that while it dropped its information at all stations, it covered the entire route in lightning time.

Surely there is in this work performed a great business moral which keen advertisers will not be slow to take advantage of.

Cladrastis tinctoria "Yellowwood"

(This week's illustration)

In the list of papilionaceous flowering trees there are w of those of the temperate zone that will equal the auty of our native "Yellowwood" as a specimen lawn ee. We use the word beauty advisedly, thinking not ly of its flowers, but also of the foliage and the whole portment of the tree, which is wholesome and clean all seasons of the year. With these attributes in favor, one would naturally expect to see it more ely used, yet it is rarely we come across a good ecimen of it. The only answer to this as far as we n see is that the tree is but little known the public and perhaps even to those in e trade.

There are few people who have not a stinct liking for pea shaped flowers (no ubt because of an association with Sweet as) and were the Cladrastis better known would surely be in demand and consetently be a good seller.

While native to the middle South and for is reason considered a Southern tree, it is proved hardy in the Northeastern States, during our Winters quite as well as many her plants considered hardier. The illusation herewith, which shows a tree at Chestut Hill, Philadelphia, proves the truth of e foregoing statement. The tree stands on ther high ground, with little or no proction; in fact, it is quite exposed to the ll blast of the prevailing northwest winds at sweep across the Whitemarsh Valley. ne manner in which it has come through e exceptionally severe Winter just passed id retained its health, producing a wealth flowers and foliage is sufficient proof, think, of its hardiness.

At the date our photograph was taken, ay 27, the flowers were at their best. The ee bloomed somewhat earlier this year than ual, it being generally classed as a June wering tree. The fragrant flowers appear pendulous branching racemes, 15in. to in. long and are white, with pale yellow arkings on the standard petal; these markgs are not noticeable unless the flowers e closely observed; to all appearances the ooms are pure white when seen at a disnce of a few feet. The individual leaflets the pinnate leaf are larger than those of any other leguminous trees and shrubs and r this reason the plant is not so readily cognized as belonging to the legume family the casual observer. One cannot, however, mistake its class identity when the tree in full bloom, for its pea shaped flowers ll the story. It has a remarkably thin and ooth bark, which happily seems imperous to insect attack. Even the leaf miner, hich spoils the attractive appearance of e Yellow Locust seems not to bother the Cladrastis the least, so that the Yellowwood, in the Fall, has added charm in its foliage, the leaves turning a lden yellow before they are shed.

The common name, Yellowwood, is derived from the ct that a yellow dye of commercial value is extracted om the wood, and has no reference to its leaf colation. Seed is usually produced in sufficient quanty to make this mode of propagation best, although e tree is also increased from root cuttings. As with her members of the order, it does not produce many rous roots unless frequently transplanted in the nurry, which induces a root system essential to a final ccessful planting when the tree leaves the grower's nds.

The specimen illustrated is about 30ft. high, with a read of 25ft. This tree's ideal form is due not one to good preparatory planting measures but also a wise and judicious thinning out of the head just hen it was needed; a process too frequently overoked by many, in connection with trees, during their rly years, when growth is more rapid. As a result this thinning and good culture a handsome, sturdy ee was produced, one which was well worth waiting r.

Catalpas

The Commercial Introduction of Catalpa speciosa

In June, 1844, Dr. John A. Warder, a practicing physician of Cincinnati, O., while attending a medical convention in Dayton, noticed a few Catalpa trees in front of a residence there that were in full bloom, while Catalpas in Cincinnati were not yet in flower; this, in spite of the fact that vegetation generally in the latter city was several days in advance of that of Dayton. The trees in Dayton were much taller and of more symmetrical growth than the ordinary C. Bignonioides; their appearance convinced him that these were of distinct and superior growth compared with the ordinary Catalpa. The doctor was so impressed with the superiority of the Dayton trees that he called attention to the matter in the next issue of his Western Horticultural Review, a magazine he was then conducting.

Cladrastis tinctoria. See text

My brother, John C., and I, had a little nursery at Spiceland, Ind., and we wrote the man who had the new Catalpa trees in Dayton, as we wished to procure seeds. In due season we received a quantity, which we planted the following Spring and grew several thousand seedlings. We sold 1000 of these seedlings to Suel Foster, a nurseryman of Muscatine, Iowa. In this locality C. speciosa proved much hardier than Bignonioides which was often killed by the cold in Iowa.

After C. speciosa was considerably disseminated E. E. Barney of Dayton, who was largely interested in the construction of railroad equipment, conceived the idea of using Catalpa timber for cross ties under the rails. He put down ties of Catalpa, Oak and Walnut under the rails at a point near the station at Dayton, where the cars were passing every few minutes through the year. After a thorough test Mr. Barney concluded that Catalpa was superior to any other wood tested. The idea took hold of railroad interests in the West and resulted in the planting of many millions of Catalpa speciosa seedlings on the prairies of Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, in the hope of producing timber for cross ties and possibly telegraph poles. Where these plantings were properly cared for the result was a success, but where prairie fires and jack rabbits had full sway failure could only be expected.

I received a letter not long ago from the D. Landreth Seed Co. of Bristol, Pa., which read: "Fifty-two years ago we bought Catalpa speciosa seedlings from you and from others, altogether more than 100,000. These were planted on our lands in the Shenandoah Valley, Va. Since then they have been turned into railroad cross ties by parties who bought the plantation from us."

Catalpa Bungei

Catalpa Bungei is supposed to be a sport from C. Bignonioides, but I do not know when or where it was discovered. I planted it to see what it would do, 25 years ago, and as it did not do anything I expected of it, I allowed it to grow up to a scraggly plant 10ft. or 12ft. high. It did not bloom nor seed and I used it to take cuttings from. It forms a beautiful dwarf plant 3ft. to 4ft. tall, and about the same breadth.

I think it was about 1880 that A. H. Griesa, a nurseryman of Lawrence, Kan., first offered the Umbrella Catalpa, C. Bungei, grafted on speciosa stock 6ft. to 7ft. tall. This has had a wide sale.

There are a few specimens of this Umbrella Catalpa near where I write, planted ten or more years ago, with stems 8in. or 9in. in diameter. Last Winter these heads extended about 10ft. across. Last March the heads were cut back and I think the spread was reduced to a quarter of what it had been. I feared the pruning would kill the trees, but they have put out splendidly. I fear the inner branches must smother.

E. Y. TEAS.

The Plume Poppy

Plume Poppy, the common name for Bocconia cardata, is so unlike a Poppy that one may well wonder if a relationship exists. But B. cordata is a Poppy and one may find it listed in the order Papaveaceæ with such better known garden favorites as Papaver, Eschscholtzia and Sanguinaria. It towers above all these in height, being 6ft. to 8ft. This, together with the fact that the plume-like panicles of cream white or rose tinted flowers are not generally regarded as suitable for cutting, does not entitle it to a place in the small formal garden.

Massed in the background of a flower border or in connection with a plantation of shrubs, however, it is very striking. It starts to bloom early in July and continues for five or six weeks. The lobed, heart shaped leaves are light green above and silvery beneath and with the panicles of seed, persist well into November. This last feature might well be utilized in connection with Autumn bouquets at 'Mum shows, in much the same manner as one sees plumes of the hardy ornamental grasses used with artistic effect. For this use alone why not buy a dozen plants (about $1.50 for the lot?) Set them out in two or three groups along the back fence with Scarlet Sage or some lower growing plant to cover the lower part of the stems, which become leafless toward the close of Summer.

The Plume Poppy comes from China. It is quite hardy and spreads rapidly, so that a dozen plants after a few seasons would provide a stock for sale. Seed, of course, would be a better means of propagation if plants were wanted in quantities.

Victory Increases Allied Food Needs

The Federal Food Board has issued a statement that, contrary to victory making a relaxation of our food conservation program, it will increase our obligations to save. It declares that whereas of last crop year we shipped about 12,000,000 tons of food, we must ship 50 per cent. more during the present crop year, and from stocks not materially larger. Florists who have available areas adapted to vegetables may well devote space to food production, at least of crops easy to grow and handle; for instance, Beets, Carrots, Tomatoes, Eggplants, Parsnips, Beans, Cabbage, Spinach, Dwarf Peas and Turnips.

No Further Loss of Labor

According to Secretary of War Baker and Provost Marshal General Crowder there will be no further inductions into the army, but all men between the ages of nineteen and under thirty-seven years of age will be expected to complete their registration and classification. Soldiers who were entraining for various camps on Monday, Nov. 11, were recalled, some 5000 in New York City alone. These men resume their order and serial number but are otherwise free to again take up their ordinary avocation. Men over 37 are freed from all obligations to the army, according to our latest information. Eighteen to 21 year old men must complete their classification.

This will be good news to florists, nurserymen and the allied trades.

Anticipating Peace

Again threw THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE a day behind in getting into the mails. Everthing was moving on time for the first week in three when the excitement reached the "zero" mark. The bells, sirens and hubbub in the streets started downtown in the early afternoon, struck Fifth ave. by 2 p.m. which promptly jammed with people and autos. Employer and employee alike deserted desk, customer or tools; the big department stores lost their help—there was no restraining anybody. Before long the news reached outlying streets and great factory buildings were emptied as though by magic. Impromptu parades started and where all the bonnie beflagged lassies came from was a mystery. Meanwhile from every building of size dropped millions of bits of paper—emblematic of the "scraps of paper" of historical memory; so great was the enthusiasm in this direction that in some cases everything resembling paper went out of the windows, even to entire writing pads—in certain blocks one literally had to wade through paper.

Bulletins went up in several newspaper offices denying the peace news but, by this time, the people were wrought up to high pitch and would hear of no contradiction of the good news.

All in all Thursday Nov. 7 was a memorable afternoon.

The Great War is Over

Praise God, from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him, all creatures here below;
Praise Him above, ye heav'nly host;
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost!

In quick succession, so rapidly that the man in the street can grasp it only by reference to his marked calendar, came the surrender of Bulgaria, then Turkey, followed by Austria, culminating on Monday morning, Nov. 11, with the news of the unconditional surrender of Germany.

One by one these countries have collapsed like houses of cards, and with them has been swept away their monarchs, and the pretense of these to rule by Divine right.

Our boys, the men to whom we owe everything, are happily freed by the armistice from intensive fighting and our anxieties on their account may now be reduced to a minimum.

There remains the uncertainty as to whether the new rulers of all the sesubdued nationalities will be able to establish an acceptable (which means an orderly) Government, one free from the troubles now besetting Russia. This may be determined in a comparatively short period. At the best 500,000 American troops will have to remain in Europe an indefinite numbers of months.

At once, on the very Monday, a pruning down of Government expense was inaugurated, and from week to week we will see reductions. There is every reason to feel that this will be done in a way to prevent all possible dislocation of industrial employment, although there is bound to be more or less in view of the tremendous number of both males and females in Government employ whose services are now no longer required.

Coming to our own lines: Resumption of florist and nursery activities in full will be retarded by three factors: shortage of coal; shortage of material owing to non-propagation; shortage of labor.

The first will be relieved as Government requirements fall off and more men get back into the mines; the second will come to an end as quickly as the florists regain their courage, but the propagating nurseries are likely to remain short of material until they get back their skilled men or are able to import from abroad. As to labor, which shortage will gradually lessen, we can make our minds up that there will be no surplus for years to come, consequently it will have to be well paid.

Under all these conditions the wise man, while continuing to practice business economy, will see to it that he obtains cost plus overhead plus a reasonable profit on all he handles—for in that is the only way out.

That an improved demand for flowers will quickly make itself manifest is altogether likely for it will no longer be a reproach to those who have the means to gratify their desire for flowers to their hearts' content—this had been the case, we all know, since we entered into war.

Private estates and our city parks will feel the rejuvenating hand of peace and the call for material to supply their wants will be beneficial to all.

As to our seedsmen: of vegetable seeds, if any can be spared, these will have to go to Europe; flower seeds will cease to be a drug immediately the season opens.

It is reasonable then to expect a renewal of full activity in every line before Easter, 1919. The war has created thousands of new flower purchasers and tens of thousands of new vegetable gardeners; these latter having acquired the taste and the desire, will remain with us in great part, while, additionally the amateur gardeners can be persuaded through judicious advertising, to add flowers for their leisure, all of which will make to the commercial advantage of those who know how to improve an opportunity such as now presents itself.

Is it not Time to Celebrate?

IRWIN BERTERMANN

Is it not time to celebrate: not only the ending of the war bu t the beginning of a new era for the flower business? Every prospect seems brighter than for many years; the love of flowers has been instilled more firmly in the hearts of the people; the national advertising campaign is serving a wonderful purpose; the work of the F. T. D., so great heretofore, now looks forward to a still more wonderful future; the art of charging a righteous price for flowers has been demonstrated, and the future of the willing florist seems practically assured. Those who have struggled during the past years will have surely arrived at the "green pastures" and will reap the rewards which are their du

[Mr. Bertermann has struck the keynote. Every flori is entitled to press forward toward a success undreame of before the Great War started in 1914. Since then th people have learned to value flowers in a nobler and mo enduring way. This lesson, pressed home, will redoun to the credit of both nation and profession.—A. T. D.]

American Dahlia Society

A meeting of the executive committee of this socie was held in the Grand Hotel, New York, on Nov. Those present were Geo. W. Kerr, Geo. L. Stillman, H. Langjahr, James Duthie, President R. Vincent, J and Secretary J. R. Lewis. Important action was tak regarding the definition of a seedling Dahlia. Resol tions of sympathy were adopted on the death of Willia Wallace Wilmore, Jr., son of W. W. Wilmore of Whea ridge, Colo., who died in a military hospital in Fran on Sept. 22, last.

The Coal Output

Recent reports to the Geological Survey indicate th the combined output of bituminous and anthracite co slightly exceeds 11,000,000 tons weekly as against mo than 13,0000,000 tons weekly during late Summer. B tween 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 have been saved this F because of the mild weather. Economies in consum tion in factories and industries as well as in residenc have helped to reduce the needs. Since April 1 the ou put of the mines is said to be 13 per cent. more th that of last year.

A Wise Owl Said:

There's too much good material in the trade papers read them hastily; take them home with you and re them while sitting in your easy chair. Spend one ev ing in each week after reading your daily, in think over your profession with the help of your trade pap

Too many florists, especially the busy retailer, ceives his trades papers with his mail, gives them glance and that ends it.

Now, instead of that, a wise owl said to me day: "Don't look at your trade paper during y business hours, take it home and give it a little m time than usual." I took the owl's advice and e since then have realized I learned a lesson. I did t the trade papers home with me and, to my surprise can state that many a pleasant evening I have sp digging deeply into the store of material th furnish, and many a dollar have I made by study them and gaining more knowledge of my professi In the ads as well as in the reading matter and editor of our trade papers there is a key that can make y ring up sales a great deal more often than you h any idea of. Recommendations for Bettering the Flower Trade

The average annual wholesale price that must be obtained to reach this figure depends on the quantity of flowers a plant will produce on an average per season. Later we expect to have an accurate record of the average length of stem of other varieties, but compilation of the average production of good average flowers per plant from records of the past three years together with the average length of stem on Russell shows as follows: Russell, 17.3 flowers; Brilliant, 32.4; White Killarney, 35.1; Milady, 25.4; Ophelia, 26.5; Sunburst, 26.4. Taking $1.20, the lowest amount a plant should return in a season and dividing it into the average yield of each variety for a series of years, gives us the average price that should prevail on each variety, namely: Russell, 6.26c. each; Brilliant 3.69c; White Killarney, 3.29; Milady, 4.67; Ophelia, 4.38; Sunburst, 4.52.

The selling price should necessarily be considerably higher for select stock and correspondingly lower for stock grading lower. Also the prices during the cold season when the yield is limited and operating costs heaviest should go above the year's average because of the exceedingly low prices during the season of heaviest production.

Although I have no late records on Carnations, from past experience and from the best information obtainable, I would venture to say that the gross returns should be no less than 81c. per square foot. Figuring a Carnation plant as occupying 5-9 sq. ft. of bench space, and taking a general average yield on all varieties of eighteen flowers per plant would bring the seasons' price to 2½c. Selling prices of all other flowers and plants may be determined from the foregoing basis.

Gardeners' Conference at Boston

The New England gardeners' conference, which was scheduled to be held in Boston, Oct. 18, but postponed, will be held at Horticultural Hall of that city under the auspices of the Boston members of the National Ass'n of Gardeners, on Friday evening, Nov. 22. The meeting will be called to order at the early hour of 6:30 to permit of ample time for a full discussion of the subjects to be presented.

Several prominent speakers will address the meeting; their topics will include the post-war problems confronting the gardener, the effects of plant import restrictions on American horticulture, and the best means of perpetuating the gardening interest aroused by the war gardens.

All affiliated with the profession of gardening are invited to attend the conference and participate in the general discussion, which may be counted on to prove of more than ordinary interest. The gardeners' patriotic spirit will not be found wanting on this occasion, following closely on the announcement of the great victory of world democracy, and the evening's program will provide a fitting celebration of this glorious event.

M. C. Ebel, Secretary.

A Peace Offering

Isaac Hicks & Son, nurserymen, Westbury, N. Y., lost no time in advertising a peace offering, it appearing in the New York Times of Nov. 12. We repeat the wording, for the reason that our copy of the ad. was not a perfect one, and the text may not be clear in the reproduction presented herewith:

To celebrate the approach of peace and help along the big task of reconstruction, we will send at once, free to every one who has the space in which to plant it, a Hicks Apple tree (guaranteed to grow superb fruit) on receipt of this pledge card with signature and address. (Tear it out and mail it today. Deferred delivery if desired.)

Then follows the pledge:

You may send your peace offering of an Apple tree which I agree to plant and care for. I pledge myself to do my best to make my own grounds produce more—more fruit, more food, more flowers—and I will follow carefully your advice to this end, so far as lies within my power. (Signature and address.)

This advertisement is to be commended on account of its timeliness and for the opportunity which it offers to secure as future customers at least 50 per cent. of the people who sign the pledge card and secure an Apple tree gratis. It is opportunities similar to this for which the keen advertiser is ever on the lookout. To think out a bright advertising scheme which is also going to prove successful, calls for continuous, steady and a most careful reading of the news and the trade papers in search of ideas and of course for boldness and originality. Undoubtedly Hicks & Son will be flooded with orders, and while it will be all out-go and no in-come for the present, we cannot see how such an advertisement as this can fail to be highly profitable in due time. Mark, too, how it sets the recipient on his or her honor to become a better producer, a more careful worker. This pledge not only insures to the benefit of the advertiser, but it is helpful to the entire trade.

A Southern darky, named Jones, appeared at his accustomed corner after an absence of several weeks, and was greeted by one of his cronies with: "Howdy, Mistah Jones! Habn't seen yo' fo' a long time. What you-all bin doin'?" Jones drew himself up proudly as he replied: "Ise suah bin doin' a heap ob business, Mose." "How you bin doin' so much business?" "Yo' know dat mare I used to hab?" "Yessir." "I traded her, fo' some sheep." "Whe' am de sheep?" "I dun trade 'em fo' some cattle." "An' you got de cattle?" "Nope, traded dem fo' some hawgs." "An' what am de hawgs wuth?" "'Bout sixty dollars." "What was de gray mare wuth?" "Guess 'bout sixty dollars." "Mistah Jones, whe' you bin makin' eny money?" "Go long, you fool niggah! I didn't say I make money; but jes look at de business I been doin'!" —Author Unknown.

Cornflower lovers are delighted that it has outlived the onslaught made upon it by certain individuals who professed to have discovered that it is the favorite flower of the Kaiser. When the "demonstration" was at its height a lady acquaintance bought a hat somewhat profuse but tastefully trimmed with the little blue beauty (artificial, of course). "Why, mother," said one of her boys, "wear that hat and you'll carry about the floral emblem of Germany." Like a true American patriot, she indignantly discarded the dainty piece of millinery. A messenger took it to the big store in New York whence it came. The invoice was endorsed, "Not returnable," but when the circumstances were explained to the manager he unhesitatingly refunded the cost. All honor to him! Happily, however, the tale of the German emblem was not substantiated and the popular Cornflower—the pride of grandmother's flower garden—survives.—P.

Tarrytown (N. Y.) Horticultural Society

Owing to war conditions, the usual large Fall exhibition was omitted and a small exhibition was held on Thursday, Nov. 7, in the society's own rooms in the Corporation Building at Tarrytown.

Competition was open to members only. While the exhibits were not large, the quality was equal to that of any previous exhibition. A particularly fine lot of fruit was exhibited, principally by Dr. C. C. Brace and Mrs. Stanley J. McCormick. There were also fine exhibits of Chrysanthemums, etc., by John D. Rockefeller, Finley J. Shepard, Dr. C. C. Brace, Emil Berolzheimer, J. I. D. Bristol, David L. Luke, Robert Mallory, and Henry Sidenberg. An exhibit of pot plants of the Chrysanthemum Nag-ir-ro by Finley J. Shepard grown in 6in. pots, attracted considerable attention. These plants were particularly well grown and made a fine exhibit; it was awarded a cultural certificate. The largest Chrysanthemum was a bloom of Queen Mary, shown by Emil Berolzheimer.

The flowers, fruits and vegetables on exhibition were sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. A box of Apples, arranged in the form of a Red Cross, was exhibited by Dr. C. C. Brace and received honorable mention.

The judges were William J. Sealey of Port Chester, Robert Williamson of Greenwich, Conn., and William Smith of Port Chester. The awards were as follows:

Chrysanthemums:

Lilian Doty, 18 blooms, disbudded, single stem, 24in. long: 1, Finley J. Shepard, Charles S. Russell, supt.; John D. Rockefeller, George Wittlinger, supt.

Six blooms, distinct vars., 15in. stems: 1, Emil Berolzheimer, Wm. Jamieson, gdr.; 2, David L. Luke, John Elliott, gdr.

Largest bloom: Emil Berolzheimer. (var., Queen Mary).

Three blooms, one each, white, pink and yellow: 1, Finley J. Shepard; 2, Emil Berolzheimer

Six vases, 6 vars., 5 sprays ea., pompons: 1, Henry Sidenberg, John Mair, gdr.; 2, Finley J. Shepard.

Singles, 6 vases, 6 vars., not disbudded: 1, John D. Rockefeller; 2, Dr. C. C. Brace, George McIntosh, gdr.

White, 6 blooms: 1, David L. Luke; 2, Finley J. Shepard.

Carnations:

White, 12 blooms: 1, Henry Sidenberg; 2, Robert Mallory, William Smith, gdr.

Scarlet, 12 blooms: 1, Robert Mallory.

Dark Pink, 12 blooms: 1, Henry Sidenberg.

Light Pink, 12 blooms: 1, Robert Mallory; 2, Henry Sidenberg.

Crimson, 12 blooms: 1, Robert Mallory.

Violets, bunch 50 singles, blue: 1, John D. Rockefeller; 2, Finley J. Shepard.

The prizes for Apples, Pears and vegetables were divided among Dr. C. C. Brace, Mrs. Stanley J. McCormick, Chas. J. Wood, grd.; David L. Luke, J. I. D. Bristol and Finley J. Shepard. Several special prizes were also awarded; these were taken by exhibitors previously mentioned.

Obituary

Mrs. Mary D. Boland

Mrs. Mary D. Boland, widow of the late James B. Boland, long identified with the florist trade of San Francisco, died in this city on the 27th ult.

Charles R. Miller

Charles R. Miller of Flushing, L. I., N. Y., for many years head salesman for Walter F. Sheridan, 133 W. 28th st., New York City, died after a brief illness of double pneumonia, at his late home on Saturday of last week. Mr. Miller was fifty years of age; he had been in poor health for several years. The funeral services were held on Tuesday of this week at the church in Flushing and interment was at Calvary Cemetery. The deceased is survived by a widow and six children.

Emile E. Ferrari

We report with deep regret the death on November 6 of Emile E. Ferrari, who with Peter Ferrari, conducted the well known firm of Ferrari Brothers of University ave., San Francisco. Mr. Ferrari was 50 years of age, married and was the father of five children, one of whom, Victor, is now in New York undergoing instructions for Ensign in the United States Navy. Mr. Ferrari was well known and well liked in the trade.

J. R. W.

Benjamin Connell

As we go to press the regrettable news reaches us of the death of Benjamin Connell of Merchantville, N. J., on Nov. 9, last Saturday. No further particulars are available at this writing. Mr. Connell was a very quiet and unobtrusive gentleman and was not a leading figure in clubs or society life. He was one of the old time florists and had been a consistent advertiser through The Florist's Exchange for over twenty years. If we are not mistaken he claimed to be the originator of the plant mail trade. He became a member of the Society of American Florists in 1886, at which time he was at West Grove, Pa., but in 1906 dropped out.

Chrysanthemum Society of America

Annual Meeting and Show, at New York, November 6 to 8, in conjunction with the 87th Annual Fair of the American Institute

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America was called to order at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 6th, in the auditorium of the Engineering Building, 25-33 West 39th st., New York City, by Pres. W. W. Vert.

In the absence of Secretary Charles W. Johnson, Arthur T. Herrington of Madison, N. J., was appointed secretary pro tempore. Mr. Herrington, in behalf of the American Institute, spoke a few words of welcome. He also mentioned the present adverse conditions which militated against the extent of the show as compared with those of former years. Mr. Herrington, on behalf of the American Institute, extended an invitation to the society to hold its show in New York again next year, under the auspices of the Institute.

After Mr. Herrington's welcome President Vert followed with his annual address:

President's Address

Another year has rolled around and we are once more assembled, this being our seventeenth annual meeting. This year the list of exhibitions throughout the country will be greatly reduced, due to the fact that most of the large private estates are closed and therefore the number of growers of exhibition flowers is much smaller than in previous years. It is to be hoped that before another year has passed the Fuel Administrator will permit the large private greenhouses to have coal, as they have been accustomed to having so that horticulture may once more be conducted on its accustomed plane.

As you are all probably aware, the society last year voted to hold its show with the Pittsburgh Gardeners and Florists' Club and the Western Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. These two societies, in conjunction with the Sewickley Horticultural Society, were anxious to make the 1918 convention a success and I have no doubt that they would have accomplished that end. It is a matter of regret that, owing to local conditions, they were unable to carry out their contract and requested to be released from their engagement. The American Institute, on being asked if they would again take up the invitation they forwarded last Fall, very kindly agreed to do so and to them our grateful thanks are due for placing these rooms and the exhibition hall at our disposal. This is the reason we are here today.

While the large exhibitions may not be as numerous throughout the country this Fall, the fact remains that the average man or woman has great liking for the Chrysanthemum. This is shown by the quantities of blooms growing everywhere in the gardens.

The present Fall, thus far, has been wonderfully favorable for the Chrysanthemum; outdoors, the singles, early flowering kinds and pompons have been equally fine. Under such favorable conditions it is a matter of surprise that we do not have scores of amateur growers desiring to join the C. S. A., and contributing their dues to help out our finances.

The Chrysanthemum season is so short that it seems difficult to hold the interest of new members from year to year and if any of our older members have suggestions to offer along these lines we shall be only too glad to hear from them.

Before closing I would suggest that the medals of the C. S. A. be offered to the horticultural societies throughout the country where it is shown that the exhibitions of these societies are of sufficient importance to warrant it; this, I believe has been done previously, when requested. Such action gives every Chrysanthemum grower an opportunity to compete for the C. S. A. medals at his local club exhibitions. However, I believe that this privilege should be restricted to C. S. A. members.

The report of the secretary was then read.

Secretary's Report

At the annual meeting held in Cleveland, Nov. 8, 1917, the invitation of the Pittsburgh Gardeners and Florists' Club, the Sewickley Horticultural Society and the Western Pennsylvania Horticultural Society to hold the C. S. A. 1918 meeting and exhibition in conjunction with their 1918 Flower Show was accepted. After arranging for a number of special prizes for the exhibition, your secretary received a letter from the secretary of the Pittsburgh Gardeners and Florists' Club stating that, owing to the unsettled conditions of the country, it was thought best not to hold a flower show until conditions became normal again. Then the club would be pleased again to extend the C. S. A. an invitation to meet at Pittsburgh.

Your secretary took the matter up with Pres. Wm. W. Vert, who made arrangements with the American Institute for the 1918 meeting and exhibition. A second letter to the firms and individuals offering the special prizes brought a responsive sanction for all the prizes to be transferred to the present exhibition. Your secretary appreciates, on behalf of the C. S. A., the kindness of those whose generosity makes the list of special prizes possible.

As instructed at the last annual meeting your secretary had 20,000 membership application forms printed and sent to the leading 'Mum growers for insertion in their 1918 catalog. So far the gain in new members has scarcely paid for the outlay.

The general outlook for the Chrysanthemum is very satisfactory. Not for many years has the demand for cut blooms been as heavy as this season. The pompons and single varieties are also being called for in larger quantities.

The routine work of the secretary's office, consisting of sending out statements to the members, recording the varieties disseminated, getting out the report of the sixteenth annual meeting and the solicitation of special premiums was attended to in due season.

Your secretary wishes to acknowledge the kindness of Elmer D. Smith in furnishing him with a complete list of varieties disseminated in 1917, which was a great help in getting up the annual report.

The trade papers very generously published all notices sent to them from time to time during the year, for which we owe to them a vote of thanks.

A detailed report of all money received and paid over to the treasurer accompanies this.

The reading of the secretary's report was followed by that of the treasurer, which was examined by the auditing committee, Eugene Dailledouze and Charles H. Totty, and recommended for acceptance.

There was a discussion of Mr. Vert's address and of his recommendations in regard to offering of medals for competition at the exhibition of local societies and his recommendations were generally approved, but action thereon was deferred till a later date.

Some discussion ensued as to the lack of interest shown by Chrysanthemum growers generally in not becoming members of the C. S. A. and a motion was finally adopted that at future exhibitions competitors for C. S. A. prizes who were not members of the C. S. A., be required to pay an entrance fee of $2, this to apply toward giving them membership in the C. S. A. for the year.

No other invitations having been extended to the society as regards a place for holding its exhibitions in 1919, on a motion the invitation of the American Institute to meet in New York under its auspices was accepted.

The election of officers then took place.

In the evening a dinner was given to the judges of the show and a few invited guests, including W. A. Eagleson, secretary of Board of Managers of the American Institute.

1919 meeting and show with the American Institute at New York City.

The Exhibition

The annual exhibition was held in conjunction with the American Institute of the city of New York in the Engineering Building on November 6 to 8.

The exhibition, for obvious reasons, was not as large as in previous years, but the flowers shown were of excellent quality. The exhibits were well staged and the show was a credit both to the exhibitors, who thus showed their loyalty to the Chrysanthemum Society and the Institute and also to the managers of both organizations. In the commercial classes the several exhibits of Charles H. Totty of Madison, N. J., were the saving feature of the show.

The judges were: Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; John MacNicholl, Cedarhurst, L. I., N. Y.; Alexander MacKenzie, Locust Valley, N. Y.; Eugene Dailledouze Brooklyn, N. Y., and William Turner, Oceanic, N. J.

J.

Horticultural Society of New York

The Autumn exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, of Chrysanthemums and other flowers, both cut blooms and plants, was held in the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West and 77th st., New York City, on Nov. 7 to 10 inclusive.

Although the number of exhibits, because of present conditions, was smaller than usual, nevertheless the show was of a quality which reflected credit both on exhibitors and on the management. The principal awards were as follows:

Chrysanthemums—Plants (Open to All)

The large 'Mum plants, grown in several forms and occupying a large space in the foyer of the building, were a commanding feature of the show. These were exhibited by Jose Rafael De Lamar, Robt. Marshall, gdr., Glen Cove, L. I., and were awarded seven first prizes, two specials and a gold medal. The several plants with yellow blooms were of the variety Mrs. R. H. Pearson; those with white blooms, the varieties Lady Lydia and Miss Ella Scoville; those with pink the variety Wells' Late Pink; the Anemone flowered white, the variety Emma, and a plant with Indian yellow colored blooms was of the variety Greystone. The gold medal was awarded to a three tiered pagoda shaped plant of the variety Mrs. R. H. Pearson.

Chrysanthemums—Cut Flowers (Commercial Growers)

Twenty blooms, one var., stems not less than 3ft.: 1, Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., with Meudon.

Twenty-five vars., all named sorts, stems not over 15in.: 1, Mr. Totty.

Pompons, 25 vars.: 1, Mr. Totty.

Singles, 25 vars.: 1, Mr. Totty. This collection was one of the most attractive exhibits of the show.

Roses—Cut Flowers (Commercial growers)

Fifty light or flesh pink: 1, Mr. Totty.

New variety, not in commerce: Mr. Totty, silver medal for "Premier."

New Plants

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., for an Epidendrum, silver medal.

Orchid Plants (Commercial Growers.)

Collection: 1, Lager & Hurrell.

Orchids—Cut Blooms.

Display of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ: Gold medal to Joseph Manda, West Orange, N. J. In this large group of exquisitely beautiful blooms there was a new hybrid Cypripedium, a hybrid of C. radiosum shortiillense and C. Fairieanum which Mr. Manda has named Sergeant Manda, after his son, Sergeant-Major Edward Manda now in France on the fighting line. This new hybrid was awarded a silver medal.

Foliage and Decorative Plants.

Group of greenhouse foliage and flowering plants arranged for artistic effect, to occupy 150 sq. ft.: W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., staged a group which was one of the finest features of the exhibition.

Group of Winter flowering Begonias, the brightest and prettiest of the flowering plant exhibits: Special to John Scheepers, Inc., 2 Stone st., New York. Mr. Scheepers also exhibited a vase of beautiful blooms of Pancratium and fruit of his new everbearing Raspberry, La France.

There were a few meritorious displays of vegetables and a small display of fruits. Mrs. Whitney took first for her collection of 20 vegetables, arranged for effect.

The society's silver cut, valued at $100, was awarded to the group of trained Chrysanthemum plants exhibited by J. R. De Lamar.

The silver achievement medal of the Garden Magazine was awarded to Mrs. Payne Whitney for her exhibit of vegetables.

Special Prizes

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., for collection of Tradescantias, silver medal; for plants of Fourcroya Watsoni, silver medal.

Mrs. Payne Whitney, for vase of Salvia leucantha, vote of thanks.

Mrs. Geo. D. Pratt, Glen Cove, N. Y., for exhibit of dehydrated vegetables and fruit, silver medal.

Howard Phipps, Westbury, N. Y., L. J. Muller, gdr., for collection of seedling 'Mums.

Mrs. H. W. Chapin, Flushing, N. Y., for display of hardy 'Mums.

Mrs. F. Allen, Pelham Manor, N. Y., Jas. Linane, gdr., for collection of Dahlias.

E. H. Wells, Montclair, N. J., Alex. Robertson, gdr., for single pink seedling 'Mum, honorable mention.

Mrs. C. I. Hudson, for six Onions, Invincible.

J. R. De Lamar, for pagoda 'Mum plant, gold medal, and for three others, cash; for display of fruit.

John Scheepers, N. Y. City, for bed of Winter flowering Begonias; for everbearing Raspberry La France, certificate.

Theo. R. Hoyt, Stamford, Conn., for a plant of Cypripedium Sedeni.

J. A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., for display of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ, gold medal; for new hybrid Cypripedium Sgt. Manda, silver medal.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., for display of orchids.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., for display of Phœnix.

The Desoris Lane Dehydrating Plant of Glen Cove, L.I., made an interesting and educative exhibit of a large number of kinds of dehydrated fruits and vegetables.

A number of Phœnix palms exhibited in the foyer by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., added much to the beauty of the exhibition.

Among the private gardeners who were prize winners were: Robt. Jones, Glen Cove, L. I.; Robt. Marshall, Glen Cove, N. Y.; A. MacDonald, Yonkers, N. Y.; Louis Prantin, Great Neck, L. I.; Chas. Thomas, N. J.; James Foster, Stamford, Conn.; Wm. Reid, Orange, N. J.; A. Paterson, Stamford, Conn.; John Thomas, E. Norwich, N. Y., A. V. Carver, New Canaan, Con.

New York Florists' Club

A meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the Club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23rd st. and Eighth ave., on Monday evening, Nov. 11, President Chas. Schenck presiding.

After reading the minutes of the previous meeting, the chairman referred to the somewhat lighter attendance than usual, which he attributed to the carnival of rejoicing then in progress as a result of the signing of the peace armistice. It was a proper evening for celebrations, he said, and intimated that the club would have one or two that evening.

Fourth Liberty Loan Returns

As chairman of the Florists and Allied Trades Committee in the placing of the Fourth Liberty Loan, Mr. Schenck announced that the subscriptions booked through the committee aggregated about $400,000, exceeding the quota expected by the Government, and very greatly exceeding the total collected in the previous Liberty Loan drive. Lack of coal, shortage of help and other disagreeable factors notwithstanding the florists had done better than before when conditions were not so hard. He asked Secretary Young to read a letter received from Governor Strong of the Federal Reserve District, which letter expressed the Governor's appreciation of the loyal and generous subscription of the florists. Mr. Schenck said also that, of the subscribers, F. H. Lea, of Henry & Lea, had collected subscriptions for about $65,000 worth of bonds, and Lord & Burnham Co., through Thos. Boothe DeForest were largely responsible for the very substantial subscription total raised at the last meeting, and therefore were deserving of the thanks of the club. Thanks were also due to Robt. E. Berry, Laurenceville, Va., who sent up $500 for bonds for issue through the club rather than buy them in his own district, which would have been to his advantage.

A Fiftieth Anniversary and a Forty-fifth

Patrick O'Mara was referred to by the chair as one whom the club could well congratulate on his ability that evening to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the business of Peter Henderson & Co. Mr. O'Mara gracefully acknowledged the compliment, and spoke somewhat at length of his duties during the period of his service, dwelling in a humorous manner upon his hours of work in the early years of his service, which were from the time the boss chose to call him, any time after 4 o'clock a. m., to continue until sundown.

C. H. Totty moved that the club tender its congratulations to Mr. O'Mara on this occasion, and presented, in behalf of the club, a beautiful bunch of the new Rose Premier, which had formed one of the exhibits in the trade display that evening, a proceeding which Mr. O'Mara acknowledged with a graceful compliment.

Philip F. Kessler, whose clever work as chairman of the house and entertainment committee, has endeared himself to the members, was then called upon to receive the congratulations of the club upon reaching his 45th birthday at a time such as the present. Phil thanked the gathering for their remembrance, and announced that after adjournment all were invited to indulge in a turkey lunch which would be "on him," personally.

Fuel Matters

The secretary read a letter sent out by the Fuel Administrator for King's County, conveying the information that florists will not be allowed to use broken sizes of coal used for domestic purposes, except in an emergency and pending the procuring of coal in the variety allowed for commercial uses. The matter was discussed by the meeting at some length, but no action was taken, for the reason that national conditions now are such as to warrant the belief that many fuel orders will shortly be withdrawn, or compliance with them fail of enforcement.

Flower Show Committee's Report

Vice-President P. W. Popp reported for the Flower Show Committee that later in the month his committee would decide whether or not a Spring flower show would be held.

Memorial Resolutions

Secretary Young read memorial resolutions upon the death of C. B. Weathered, Jr., L. Schmitz, Jr., and A. D. V. Snyder, which were adopted. The secretary also announced the deaths of Ralph M. Ward and Walter R. Siebrecht, members, also the deaths of William Weber, son of Charles Weber, the wife of Carl O. Giessler, and a brother of A. G. Vescelins. Committees were directed to be appointed to prepare resolutions of sympathy in all these cases.

Thanks the Club

A. L. Miller introduced Capt. Munro of Camp Mills, the officer directing all horticultural plantings at the camp, who visited the club personally to thank the members who had contributed plants for the soldiers' use and enjoyment.

Mr. Totty made a short report of his visit as president of the S. A. F., to Washington, to attend a hearing before the Federal Horticultural Board to protest against the proposed prohibition of importations of plants. A full report of this hearing has already appeared in THE EXCHANGE.

Arthur J. Radice, 55 W. 26th st., was elected a member, and Clarence Ankers, Rockville Center, L. I., was nominated for election at the next meeting.

The secretary read a letter from A. T. De La Mare, which concerned a letter of thanks received from the parents of the late J. H. Dick for courtesies extended to the family of the deceased at the time of his death.

U. S. Chamber of Commerce

The secretary read a letter from the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in regard to the formation of a florists' section in that organization, and, upon motion, the appointment of a committee of two was directed to take the matter under advisement and report at the next meeting.

View of the Dept. of Agri. 'Mum Show, held recently at Washington, D. C.

Described on p. 736 of THE EXCHANGE of Nov. 9

The meeting ended with three cheers for President Wilson.

The Exhibition

There was a good exhibition, covering mainly Chrysanthemums. The exception was a splendid vase of the new Rose Premier, which was in fine form. The exhibits were as follows:

By A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. A collection of pompon and single 'Mums, comprising the following varieties: Elizabeth Firestone, Big Baby, Virginia Holden, Seedling No. 5, Seedling from Western Beauty, Donald, Hilda Canning, Quinola, Eugene Langaulet, Western Beauty, Frank Wilcox, Seedling 237, Katewood, Little Gem, Romaine Warren, Dusky Maid, Golden West, Doris, Lucille Knoble, Yellow Anemone Seedling, Reggy Bulkeley, Golden Climax, Delphine Dodge, Virginia Holden and the exhibition variety Barbara Davis. The exhibit was awarded a silver medal.

By R. L. Dunn, St. Catherines, Ont., Can., Vase of new Chrysanthemums, a yellow sport of Wm. Turner. It scored 85 points and was awarded a preliminary certificate.

By C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J. Vase of new Rose Premier. This was given 91 points and was also awarded a preliminary certificate.

Thanksgiving Day Decorations

In this article the writer, Joseph H. Sperry, of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE staff, gives us "something different" from the stereotyped form of article. He briefly reviews Thanksgiving as an ancient custom, gives an idea of the mainsprings for the 1918 Thanksgiving, mentions in a general way the material for decorations, and then adds some general suggestions in which figure the common things of the farm with the flowers of the florist. He most interestingly indicates decorations in which will be typified the four great events which have elapsed since our previous Thanksgiving; namely, Abundance, Victory, Peace and Service, the latter given by this country for the benefit of other nations.

There is little doubt that from time immemorial men on fixed days offered thanks to that particular deity which they thought had given them in abundance the products of "Mother Earth" they were depending on in a large degree for the maintenance of life.

The Roman people had "gods many"; in fact, a separate God not only for each object in nature, as the sea, the lake, the river, the garden, the field, but also for each action of man, as marriage, childbirth, death, seed sowing and the ingathering of the crops. To this god of the ingathering of the harvest they annually gave thanks and made offerings and in his honor feasted on the crops he had given them.

The Hebrew people, too, who worshipped the true God, had similar customs.

Our Thanksgiving Day had its origin with the early settlers of New England, who, after suffering from hunger one Winter, the following Spring devoted a day to fasting and prayer, and in the Autumn of the same year appointed a day upon which they, in their churches offered thanks to the All-Giver for the abundant harvest of the season and the mercies of the year, while in their homes, surrounded with kinsmen and friends, they feasted upon God's bounties in His honor.

The fact that men do not now so generally attend church services on Thanksgiving Day may not indicate that they are less thankful than in former days, but that there is a stronger tendency to find expression for their gratitude to God for His gifts through family reunions and feasts and social gatherings where good cheer and joy prevail.

When men have, as it were, come up out of the lowlands and reached the broad plateau of the highlands of life, then on Thanksgiving Day they will offer their thanks not alone for what Deity directly and through men has done for them, but most of all for what they have been permitted, guided by Deity, to do to help their fellowmen; in brief for the privilege of service.

The 1918 Thanksgiving

No other year in the world's history has been fraught with so great events as that which happened since last Thanksgiving. There are at least four events of this year which should be featured in our 1918 Thanksgiving, namely: (1) The victory over militarism and world empire ambition, which has made the world "safe for democracy;" (2) The fair outlook for permanent world peace; (3) Abundant harvests, and (4) That the United States has had the privilege of helping to make possible through victory a permanent peace, the privilege of service.

Material for Thanksgiving Decorations

The material for decoration changes little from year to year. It consists largely of flowers, foliage, fruits, grains and vegetables. It remains for the florist to select wisely from the material at his command for the larger and smaller decorations, both for general effect and also for depicting distinct ideas, e. g., Victory, Peace, Abundant Harvests, Service, Liberty, Democracy, etc.

Some General Suggestions

We are not going to attempt to tell exactly how to decorate the home table or that of the banquet hall, or the home rooms or public hall, or ballroom for social occasions, or the barn for harvest home on Thanksgiving Day, but merely to make some general remarks and suggestions. In smaller decorations pyramids of tree fruits and grapes, and of grains, placed in receptacles on the table or directly on the table itself, and interspersed with vases of flowers and tracings of foliage, will suggest abundance. On the table at a large banquet the same idea may be expressed with pyramids having a base of Pumpkins, Squashes and Mangels surmounted by smaller vegetables, such as Potatoes, Carrots, Onions and Radishes. Chrysanthemums and full blown Roses may be placed in the interstices of the pyramid in concealed vases or tubes of water.

In a large private or hotel ballroom sheaves of Corn stalks, Wheat, Rye and Oats may be massed in the corners of the room or around pillars and at other points of vantage. In vases concealed in the base of these sheaves and filled with water may be placed Chrysanthemums, Roses, Carnations, Lilies and Snapdragons. Heaps of Pumpkins, vegetables, tree fruits and grapes, placed at the base of the sheaves of grain will be effective. Long sprays of Bittersweet berries and of red berries and boughs of Oak foliage may be placed at points of vantage. In a large ballroom or hall an immense pyramid made of all the materials just mentioned and located in the center of the room would indicate abundant harvests and be effective.

A Victory Wreath designed by Penn the Florist of Boston—See Text

Abundance, Victory, Peace, Service

Ways of indicating the abundant harvests of the year have already been mentioned. This idea is in fact the easiest of all for the florist to indicate in Thanksgiving decorations, for nature has given him the material with lavish hand.

Suppose the florist has before him the long table of a banquet room, and he would like to carry out in his decorations the four ideas: Abundance, Victory, Peace, Service. Pyramids of vegetables, grains, fruits adorned with flowers, placed at intervals on the table would indicate Abundance. A statuette of Victory, standing on a base of red fruits, and surrounded by red flowers, typifying the precious blood which has been shed, would represent the glorious victory which is to be the salvation of every nation of the world, both those of the victors and the vanquished.

A white dove with an Olive branch in its bill, suspended above an American eagle in a position of rest, the whole being surrounded with white flowers, such as Lilies, Lily of the Valley and White Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums would suggest peace.

Figures of soldiers, sailors from the navy, the merchant marine and fishing fleet, of farmers, carpenters, smiths, bakers, butchers, and other trades and occupations, of Government officials, financiers, and of members of the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Red Cross, Salvation Army and other religious and philanthropic organizations, each with the implements of his trade or occupation, or profession, in his hand, will represent service.

Shakespeare's Hamlet, in his celebrated soliloquy, said "There's nothing good or bad, but thinking makes it so." Using Hamlet's word with a little different shade of meaning may we not truly say that "thinking" makes all the difference between a Thanksgiving floral decoration which is merely a promiscuous gathering of heterogeneous material, and one which is a skilful and artistic carrying out of well conceived ideas.

We are writing on the eleventh day of November of the year nineteen hundred and eighteen—old time—but the first day of the first month of the year of a new world in which we firmly believe the relations between the nations and between the individuals of the nations will be on a higher and broader level, and in a clearer atmosphere, and more lustrous light than mankind in the past have ever experienced. How can we but be thankful on this coming Thanksgiving to have lived to see these days?

Looking at this coming Thanksgiving Day from the commercial side it is within the ability of every retail florist to take advantage of the historical event which this year so closely connects itself with the event. Commence your advertising without delay—in local papers, by circulars, special letters and window features. Make Thanksgiving for Victory the keynote.

The Victory Wreath

At the suggestion of THE FLORIST'S EXCHANGE, Penn the Florist, of Boston, Mass., chairman of the S. A. F. Publicity Committee, has sent us a photograph of a Victory Wreath which he thinks would be a popular one on account of its simplicity. It is reproduced in these pages. Mr. Penn says: "The tri-colors are interwoven among the Magnolia leaves with streamers of red, white and blue. A cluster of flowers might be added to make it more elaborate."

Such a wreath as this might well be introduced generally throughout the country, and should sell well from now on to right up to the time, at least, when formal peace is proclaimed.

Victory Corsage

McKenney, florist, at 503 Fifth ave., New York, has been making up dainty Victory corsage bouquets, representing the national colors, by tastefully combining red Carnations, white Chrysanthemums and blue Violets, finished off with a white paper collar and a bow knot of narrow red, white and blue ribbon. The corsage assumes the appearance of a miniature old fashioned formal bouquet, as will be seen in the illustration, and is very striking in appearance. Mr. McKenney keeps four or five corsages in the three colors, but made up in different flower combinations, displayed in his show window each day, accompanied by a sign which reads: "Victory Corsage Bouquets of Natural Flowers —50c." In this way hundreds of these little bouquets have been readily sold; in fact, it required the services of three people in the store one day this week who kept busy making up the corsages, and still the demand was so heavy that it could not be entirely met.

This demonstrates the opportunity that is offered to retail florists all over the country to increase their sales perceptibly every day in the year, and more particularly on special days through just such offerings of corsage bouquets at a moderate figure. It is, of course, essential in making the window display that the price of the corsage be advertised.

Say Your Thanks With Flowers

By Ella Grant Wilson

Now that the armistice is signed, and the war practically over, is the time for the florist to get busy. We should put across the greatest Thanksgiving Day in history, and it will take the form of flowers if we hustle and work for it. The time is limited, but if every florist will advertise and every local advertisement carries the slogal "Say Your Thanks With Flowers," it should on that day clean up every flower in the United States.

The national advertising campaign has not the time to carry the message to hundreds of thousands of our people, but if every florist will carry the sign in his window, if he will advertise in his local home paper, it will be the precursor of a wonderful day—such a day as Mother's Day has developed into.

Tell everybody to wear a flower to express their gratitude—their visible symbol of thanks for the triumph of the world democracy. Spread the word everywhere!

The ancients celebrated their victories with wreaths of foliage. Let us emulate their example, changing it to the wearing of flowers and the decoration of our homes and tables with them.

Let us urge that the boy "Over There" be honored and remembered by a flower.

Never was there such an occasion for rejoicing—for wearing God's symbol of peace—so let us spread the message broadcast and do our share toward uniting all peoples.

Who knows, this may be the precursor of a world custom to memorialize the triumph of democracy throughout the republics of Europe—perhaps the United States of Europe, we have dreamed of. Let us hasten the day with flowers.

F. T. D. Suggestions from the Cleveland Meeting

So much F. T. D. food has been jammed into those who attended the Cleveland meeting through its two days' session that it will take just as long to digest it all as it takes a normal person to overcome an overloaded stomach.

In digging through some of the papers from this meeting I came across the file with the various suggestions sent in for competition and, as I have made a study of F. T. D. work for the past eight years, I feel in justice to all those who participated in this contest, and without casting any reflections on the committee whose duty it was to judge this contest, that a good deal more valuable information and suggestion for the benefit of the F. T. D. were contained in the correspondence of those who were not prize winners. I feel it, therefore, my duty to personally thank all the participants in this contest, and have only one wish to know who the different parties are.

Sooner or later one or the other participants will find that part of his suggestion will be adopted in one way or the other to carry on our F. T. D. work, while I hardly think the suggestions of the prize winner can ever be carried out and be practical for these several reasons:

1. The F. T. D. has never and should never be allowed or have to bow down to as low an arrangement as buying in its membership. Retailers who cannot see their benefit will never make good members if their membership is forced upon them.

2. If a traveling man enlists a new member in a town where we are not represented, he, perhaps, has been the last one of ten or twelve others who have tried to make this certain retailer see the benefit of belonging to this organization. This same retailer has filled perhaps a number of orders for our members, and everyone of our members has brought some pressure at one time or another to make him join the F. T. D. and yet, according to the prizewinner's suggestion the traveling man who happens to come along just at the time when this retailer is ready to join would have all the credit to himself for which perhaps 25 or 30 others have worked hard.

The F. T. D., as an organization, does not care who gets retailers to join our membership as long as we get them and get them without buying them in.

3. The traveling man is liable to get retailers to join who cannot qualify according to rules and regulations and endless correspondence would result.

4. The traveling men are our coworkers and will gain indirectly through our building up larger fields of business; most of those I know would not consent to accept any pay if perchance they could be the medium of enlightening a retailer in a small town whereby he can find and build up a nice little extra business by joining the F. T. D.

Yours for a better retail florist trade,

ALBERT POCHELON,
Secretary F. T. D.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association

We sometimes wonder if A. T. Stewart, when he founded his modest store on lower Broadway, N. Y., many decades ago, had a vision of what it was going to lead to—that he, before his career was ended, would be the first real merchant prince of the United States.

Renowned as his department store became it would be among the commonplaces in this day, but that fact does not take away from his glory, however, for not only did he found the department store but, greater than that, he founded it with a system which has enabled those who have since followed along his lines to elaborate the methods of buying and selling until it has become a science, the only weak point in which is human fallibility—in this case mainly the cheaper help—the one factor which genius of the highest order cannot mould to the degree of perfection necessary to produce human mechanism that will work without a flaw.

We often think that higher prices paid to the mass of employees in a department store would secure a more reliable grade, whose superior ability and greater natural interest in the business would recoup itself to the owner by the elimination of the errors and disagreeable incidents which today all too often befall shoppers in these busy caravanseries.

The F. T. D. cannot be likened to a department store as to buying and selling, but it can take pattern by the system which controls it.

The F. T. D. has many advantages over the department store; it has more skilled employees in proportion to unskilled, and it has a far greater proportion of heads of departments—the employers themselves, every one of whom is vitally interested in the success of the business.

And the greatest asset of the F. T. D.—an asset the value of which will be realized as the system is perfected, lies in this—it has No COMPETITION.

To one who has faced bitter competition all through his career the knowledge is dazzling that here is an industry which can encircle the globe—if it takes advantage of its present opportunities—absolutely without competition. F. T. D. members themselves have local competition, but the F. T. D. system has none.

System and Service, then, are the two elements necessary to the widest success. System to control its operations; Service to render it impregnable to any great capitalistic combination of the future—for capital, attracted by success, could establish a chain of stores and, aided by unlimited advertising, undoubtedly cut a swath if not headed off by service.

More anon on System and Service.

Messages of Flowers

—OR—

THEIR FLORAL CODE AND DICTIONARY

By GEORGE H. O'NEILL

Lovers of flowers and their lore will find a treasure house in this interesting and comprehensive little manual. A dictionary of flowers covers more than thirty pages, giving the common names, in alphabetical order, of hundreds of flowers; each followed by the meaning of the flower and its botanical name. In the section "Messages of Flowers," the idea of the message to be conveyed by a flower is condensed into a single word, and the list of these words is arranged alphabetically. Opposite each word is placed the name of the proper flower and beneath appears the expanded message. A "Floral Calendar" gives the name of the flower appropriate for each month of the year, with its meaning, its botanical name, and a bit of verse about it. The mythology of flowers, with many interesting facts about them in modern life, fills nearly twenty pages, taking in alphabetical order thirty or more of the best known blooms. An explanation of the arranging of bouquets to make them carry messages fills another section, and advice about caring for cut flowers and a score of poems and quotations from famous poets about flowers complete the pages of this handy little manual of flower language. Of invaluable assistance to florists as a ready reference guide and as an instructive manual to amateur gardeners and lovers of flowers.

Can be sold by retailers, a 25c copy for the customer's own use and a $1.00 copy for the lady who is to receive the flowers.

'Mums for Red Cross

Local florists report an exceptionally good business. The supply of flowers is not plentiful, but there is a very active demand for 'Mums which seem to have the preference. The 'Mum show now being held at the conservatory of the Park Department, has been a great attraction; there are 40 varieties, including an exceptionally fine display of pompons. The entire exhibit has been turned over to the Red Cross; more than $500 has already been realized and Mrs. Dr. Carr, in charge of the local Red Cross, expects to make sales for more than $1000 additional. CHAS. L. SEYBOLD.

Lancaster, Pa.

Meeting of Lancaster, Pa., Florists' Club, Thursday, Nov. 21. Visiting trip will start from Chamber of Commerce at one o'clock.

Retail business is good. The shops are glad for the let up over that of a few weeks back which has now become a matter of history.

Mrs. Geo. Goldbach was on a sick bed the week trade was at its highest but fortunately had arranged for a supply of flowers that met all demands. The business done was phenomenal. She has the contract for decorating more than 100 graves of deceased B. P. O. Elks of Lancaster for Memorial Sunday, Dec. 1.

The B. F. Barr Co. is having wonderful windows lately with immense supplies of flowers and is doing a remarkable business.

Flowers are coming a bit too fast in view of the wholesale demand. Sweet Peas have started that naughty habit of dropping their buds, owing to the spell of unseasonably hot weather. With a full supply of coal assured a little cooler weather will be welcome to put better quality in the stock. This dropping of buds seems to be an unpreventable reduction of the crop. Elmer Weaver, Chas. M. Weaver and Rudolph Nagle are shipping heavily of Sweet Peas.

The Geranium growers are getting orders faster than the stock can be produced. Other seasons November was a slow month. Just what has made the change is a bit hard to decipher. I suppose we will have to blame it on the war. In addition to reducing the stock and the growing space to comply with fuel regulations the shortage of help is a serious matter in a business that requires so much work to prepare and put flowers on the market.

Club meeting at B. F. Barr's store, Nov. 21, preceded by a visiting trip to the city florists, startingg from the Chamber of Commerce at one o'clock, via machines, will make some news for next week. ALBERT M. HERR.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Nov. 11.—Trade last week was only normal. The floral trade has completely fallen off and business has reached its former level. The supply of 'Mums is fairly good and there is a good cleanup every day. Roses seem to accumulate and the demand is only fair.

Lilies are scarce. There is a normal supply of American Beauty Roses and a fair demand. Violets are plentiful and find no sale. An active trade in all lines is looked for during the remainder of the year.

Peace and the realization of its significance furnish the principal food for thought for every member of the florist trade this week. Unrestrained joy filled the hearts of employers and employees alike in the florist busines when official news of the cessation of hostilities was received here early Monday morning. All the big factories closed for the day and downtown section was crowded with celebrators. The flower shops there, Palmer's, Anderson's and Stroh's, catered to an active trade. On their way down town many of the celebrators bought 'Mums, etc., at Scott's, the Colonial and other flower stores.

It is generally conceded that peace times will see a heavy demand for flowers. Working people will continue to have plenty of "flower money," because the local industrial plants will keep up production at full speed. Factories working on war orders will turn to the manufacture of products which they featured in normal times. All these plants have stacks of post bellum orders so part of the millions to be distributed among the local wage earners will eventually find its way to the local flower shops.

There will be a revival of social functions among wealthy Buffalonians and it is said this will mean a restoration of their old-time trade at the local flower stores.

Thursday afternoon the florists and their employees "succumbed to the hysteria of happiness," when the premature news that the armistice had been signed was heralded in this city. Every flower shop was a-flutter with the Stars and Stripes. A pleasing feature of the florists' stores was that the show windows displayed this sign of striking proportions "Give," which refers to the present drive of the United War Workers.

It may be some time before the hundred and one war time restrictions, which hampered the Buffalo florists, are lifted, but, according to optimists in the trade, everything is positively headed toward an unprecedented boom in the florist business.

Personals

S. A. Anderson, Buffalo florist, has received many congratulations on his success at the recent city and county elections. He won handily in his contest for election as treasurer of Erie County, N. Y., with 40,729 votes in Buffalo against 32,364 for his opponent, and an added 5,500 plurality to that lead in the towns. He made a clean, active campaign and stood upon his merits as a candidate. He put into the drive the energy which characterized his boyhood career. Like many other successful Americans he went to work at 10 years old. The education he obtained at school he supplemented by reading and studying during spare moments. When 22 he went into the florist business in which his success is well known. The Buffalo Evening News recently said of him "He has always been a public spirited citizen. He has served on commissions and taken part in many campaigns for boosting the city and its interests. He is unassuming, but, as his friends say, is made of the stuff that does things."

Henry P. Gessner, a former employee of the Whitney-Eckstein Co., Buffalo, writes from France that one of his recent experiences was to be lost in "No Man's Land." He said this was no unusual occurrence for his duty was to carry messages.

A report from Hornell, N. Y., says that Lilac buds are coming out and Dandelions have begun to blow again in that section as a result of the warm weather. The report says that a year ago the ground there was covered with snow.

'Mums are in the height of their glory in the various greenhouses at Delaware and Humboldt parks and at the South Park Conservatory. It is estimated that in the three buildings are at least 10,000 blooms, large and small, on the 125 varieties of 'Mums on exhibition. Three single plants bear the total of 2200 blossoms. The art with which the many stems have been separated to form an outline of perfect symmetry is a pleasing feature.

JOSEPH A. MCGUIRE.

Rochester, N. Y.

There has been a considerable falling off in general business during the past two weeks. Demands for stock are as light now as they were heavy during the rush a few weeks ago. Funeral work is not so plentiful and with an ample supply of Chrysanthemums demands are as usual light. Carnations are becoming more plentiful. Roses, while not over abundant, are coming in sufficient quantities to fill all needs. The market generally speaking, is well supplied. Pompons are plentiful and do not move as readily as usual.

George T. Boucher is making preparations for a Chrysanthemum Show, which he plans holding at his store next week in an effort to stimulate the demand for 'Mums. The idea is a commendable one and will no doubt be well worth the time trouble and expense necessary to put on the display.

E. Kendig has engaged F. Peartree, for some time connected with George T. Boucher, to take charge of the Rosery Flower Shop, which he recently purchased. Mr. Kendig is a frequent visitor to the ity now that he has interests here. He reports business as being brisk in Oswego.

Outdoor flowers are all in for the season, recent frosts having put the finishing touches on them. On the whole, the past season has been a fairly successful one for those engaged in growing outdoor stuff. H. B. S.

Clubs and Societies

Nassau Co. (N. Y.) Hort. Society

Annual Show

The 14th annual 'Mum show of the society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y. on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1. Competition was strong in all the 41 classes. The 'Mums, as usual, were large and of excellent quality. Exceptionally fine vegetables as well as Roses, Carnations, Violets, decorative work and fruit were shown. Particularly meritorious were the large double specimen bush and standard "Hooper Pierson" 'Mums and an unusually fine collection of foliage plants exhibited by Capt. J. R. De Lamar (Robt. Marshall gardener.) This group was awarded the Nat. Ass'n. of Gardeners Medal for the most meritorious exhibit in the show. Special mention is also due Mrs. Percy Chubb, Robt. Jones gar. for cut 'Mums, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Geo. Ferguson gar., for Carnations, F. W. Woolworth, Wm. Churchill gar., for Roses., Mrs. Harold I. Pratt, F. O. Johnson gar., for Violets, Irving Cox, Frank Petroccia, gar., for vegetables A. V. Davis, Alex. McKenzie gar., for a collection of Apples; also C. F. Cartledge, Wm. Noonan gar., for 'Mums, and Mrs. J. G. Pratt, John W. Everitt, gar. for hardy 'Mums, the latter exhibit being awarded the Mrs. F. B. Pratt silver cup. Other prize winners were W. J. Jennings, Frank Sargent gar., J. E. Aldred, Thos Twigg gar., Mrs. W. Gibb, Ben. Sutherland gar., Mrs. J. P. Morgan, Angus B. McGregor gar., Mrs. F. B. Pratt, Harry Goodband gar., Mrs Andrew Fletcher, Ed. Harris gar., and Mrs. M. Daball, Chas. Stangs gar., the table decorations were a feature of the second day of the show. The judges awarded the Mrs. H. L. Pratt silver cup as 1st prize to Geo. Ferguson. A cultural certificate was awarded to Joseph Manda, West Orange, N. J., for a beautiful display of orchids, and special mention to John Dombrowskie and Frank Petroccia for seedling 'Mums. Jas Gladstone, assisted by Arthur Smith and Ben. Sutherland, were the efficient managers. The judges were Geo. Ashworth, Alex. McKenzie and Thos. Proctor.

Stamford (Conn.) Hort. Society

Flower Show

The Stamford Hort. Society recently held a successful show at Stamford, in which many attractive exhibits were shown. The prises consisted of War Saving Stamps and Thrift Stamps and a number of gardeners on the estates in the vicinity of Stamford competed. At the close of the show the exhibits were auctioned off for the benefit of the Red Cross, Geo. B. Cannon, prop. of the Quality Seed Store of Stamford, officiating as auctioneer. Mr. Cannon's enthusiasm and efficiency helped to swell the fund for the Red Cross, to which was also given the sum resulting from the sale of tickets for admission.

Westchester (N. Y.) and Fairfield (Conn.) Horticultural Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Soc. held in Greenwich, Conn. Friday evening Nov. 8 was well attended. As it was Chrysanthemum night the exhibits were numerous and of fine quality considering that our gardeners have not been allowed to use coal. If mild weather continues, we may be able to cheat the fuel men. The judges were Pres. Harry Wild of the Stamford Hort. Soc., W. A. Besizekie and James Foster; their decision as to leading prizes were as follows: One specimen 'Mum plant from Thomas Ryan, first; 3 'Mum plants from Robert Williamson, first; 12 blooms assorted, James Stuart, first; six blooms assorted, vase of large blooms arranged for effect, W. Graham, first; vase of single 'Mums arranged for effect, James Stuart, first; vase of pompons for effect, W. Sealey, first; basket of 'Mums arranged for effect Fred Lagerstram, first.

A display of single seedling 'Mums from Alex. Geddes was highly commended. When the coal burning question came up for discussion the fuel commissioners came in for much criticism. It is a shame that the working man should have to pay famine prices for coal where no famine exists. James Foster opened up a discussion about changing the names of Roses with German names. He was followed by Harry Wild, W. A. Besizekie and others. It was the unanimous opinion of the speakers that the names remain as they are. The nominations for officers for the ensuing year were submitted by the executive committee, their election subject to the approval of the members will be at our next meeting on Dec. 13. Jack Conroy, Cor. Sec'y.

Gerbera Jamesonii, or Transvaal Daisy

Albert Knapper of Los Angeles, Cal., who is making a specialty of the Gerbera and has been handling it successfully for five years, has, at our request, sent us the following particulars in regard to its culture:

To grow the Gerbera requires a temperature of from 45 to 60 deg., the same as is given monthly Carnations. It needs a great deal of sunlight and air. In the East it cannot stand Winter exposure. During the Summer months it does well out of doors. It is advisable to grow it in soil mixed with sand and as to watering a light sprinkling twice a day is required. The flowers are very effective for table decoration, and at the present time, when patriotic decorations have so much call, it lends itself as one of the best sellers for the red, white and blue combination. Hybrids cannot be recommended as being true to color.

Worcester, Mass.

Red Cross Chrysanthemums and 'Mums exhibited for the American Fund for French Wounded transformed Horticultural Hall into a scene of indescribable splendor last week when the Worcester County Hort. Society held its annual show. No exhibit of this kind has ever surpassed it. The decorating of the stage was in charge of H. F. A. Lange. Southern Smilax hung from ceiling to floor, screened the orchestra. For the background palms, Bay trees and other decorative plants and flowers were used. Brilliant painted wooden birds swinging amid the greenery gave the setting a fairyland effect. The space on the opposite wall from Lange's exhibit was that of Harry I. Randall's beautiful exhibit of fancy plants, cut flowers and basket arrangements, etc., in charge of Al. Bock. The east side of the hall was given over to the exhibits from G. Henry Hutchins estate, "Ard-Na-Clachen," and the Summer home of Dr. Homer Gage, "Iristhorpe." Both added greatly to the show. On the west side was another garden effect by E. W. Breed of Clinton—English Yews, English Holly, Freesias, Maidenhair and Begonias set off the 'Mums. Mr. Breed shared the west wall with A. N. Pierson Co., of Cromwell, Conn.—an unusual showing of rare foliage plants, 'Mums and specialties for Christmas. Many new 'Mums in singles and pompons shown by Mr. Pierson attracted considerable attention. A certificate of merit was awarded this concern for a new reddish bronze pompon called Hilda Caning which Mr. Pierson will have disseminated next season. Chas. D. Mackie, formerly of Worcester, was in charge of the Pierson exhibit.

Among the smaller exhibitors who had beautiful displays were Mrs. P. G. Forbes, Miss Lucy Coulson, John C. Whiten of Whitensville and A. H. Knight. The feature of the show was Friday evening at 8 o'clock when an auction of flowers, plants and fruit took place, with Harry Worcester Smith as auctioneer. The sale netted the societies already mentioned about $200 in addition to the amount made on other sales and admission fees of 25c. each. The average price received for the fancy blooms was 50c., while some brought $1.50 each. The bidding being rather low for quality received.

Business with the florists the past week was good and a surprisingly big advance in transient business was noticed, especially on Friday and Saturday. Carnations are of good quality and are bringing from $2 to $5 per 100; Roses $3 to $10; Violets $1; 'Mums, good quality and of large variety, $1 to $3 per doz.; Lilies $1.50 per doz.; pompons and singles 50c. to $1 per bunch; Asparagus plumosus sells well at 50c. per bunch.

The market was steadier last week than since the outbreak of the epidemic. The ban on public meetings is still on. Funeral work was heavier during the latter part of the week. No flowers were in demand for the hospitals. Counter trade was normal. The supply of flowers, especially Chrysanthemums, has increased beyond all bounds during the past fortnight, due to the warm, bright weather. Many varieties of double and pompon 'Mums are in, and most of the varieties generally timed for Thanksgiving market are appearing now. According to all reports 'Mums for this holiday will be scarce. Handsome Odessa, Wm. Turner, Dr. Enguehard, white and yellow Bonnaffon, and other excellent varieties are being offered. Pompons were never before offered in so many varieties and colors. Prices have come down to normal since the increased supply. Display windows are filled with the choicest of 'Mum blooms. Roses in increasing supply are finding ready sale. Carnations of splendid quality are bringing good returns. Especially fine Cattleyas, Vandas and Cypripediums are in this market. Lilies are holding their own at good prices. Chrysanthemum plants are more than plentiful but far from a drug on the market. Other offerings in cut flowers include Sweet Peas, Violets, Cosmos and Marigolds. Ferns are of splendid quality and selling well. Asparagus and Adiantum are still scarce.

News Jottings

The great celebration on the 7th and the 11th stimulated flower sales. The first was so spontaneous that florists kept open shop to supply the people with flowers, but on the 11th they closed in the afternoon.

Mr. Worthington, representative of the Peters & Reed Pottery Co., of South Zanesville, Ohio, called on the members of the trade here last week.

Two sons of Judge W. J. Vesey, wholesale and retail florist, have joined the Army on Nov. 5. Dick, the elder, enlisted in the motor transport corps. He left for Washington, D. C., where he will remain about a week, before leaving for a training camp. David also left for Washington, where he will be stationed permanently in the hardware and metals dept. Dick is a graduate of DePauw University, and David of the University of Michigan. Each has been prominent in business and social circles of the city; each is married and has two children.

Miss Helen Patten of the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo, Ohio, is spending a week with her mother, Mrs. Mary Patten. She reports a record breaking trade this Fall, with a good outlook for the coming Winter. She some time ago offered her services to the Red Cross and has been expecting her call daily for service either here or overseas.

The Flick Floral Co. is the first to be cutting Golden Wedding 'Mums. It is offering a wide range of varieties in both doubles and singles. Miss Marguerite Flick is entertaining Private George B. Jansen, her fiance, of the hospital corps, Camp Sherman, Chillecothe, Ohio.

Florists' Club Meeting

The November meeting of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club was held on Friday evening, Nov. 8, in the store of the Flick Floral Co., with President Wenninghoff in the chair. The principal business was the question of the disposal of stock from the city greenhouses through the department stores and 5 and 10c. stores, below market price. The managers of the city greenhouses seem to believe that the florists should buy all their surplus stock, no matter what the quality, or that they are at liberty otherwise to sell it through these stores at cut prices. A letter of petition to the Board of Park Commissioners, signed by all members, was sent by the Florists' Club, asking that the stock from the city greenhouses be sold at least at market prices. No answer has been received as yet. It was decided by the club not to hold a flower show this year, in view of present national conditions. The next meeting will be held at the store of A. L. Lanternier & Co., on Wednesday, Dec. 4.

There is still an active demand among all lines for what flowers are on the market. Funeral work is in the lead and much work is being done in good priced designs. Indeed the prices are and have been exceptionally good, many orders calling for $20 pieces, and some considerably more. The eidemic is responsible for most of this work so now it is happily on the wane that part of the business is likely to give way to the more general lines.

The continued mild weather brings in the 'Mums so fast that Thanksgiving Day will probably see the clean up of them and as they are the main standby just now, a fair amount of business in December will use up all the stock in sight as soon as cut. Indeed, the prospects are for a big shortage all through Midwinter. With the war ending satisfactorily to us and our Allies it is not unreasonable to expect among the general rejoicing much entertaining and social happenings which will entail the use of many flowers.

Personal Pointers

John R. Van Bochove has returned home after an extended auto trip which took him into North Dakota. As the main object was to benefit his health I am glad to say it was a success.

Smith the Florist who succeeds the Minks Est. says the season opens up satisfactorily and promises good prospects.

William Thomas continues to improve in health since his return from the hospital. He finds much to do in preparing for the Winter.

Casper Van der Veen is in charge of Jackson's Flower Shop, taking the place of John Jackson, now in the aviation service of the Army. James Jackson is attending to the growing end of the line. He is cutting a nice lot of 'Mums.

Cleveland, O.

The epidemic—the big influence in October business—has abated and trade has returned to a normal basis. Demand is active but is met with a generous supply of seasonable flowers. Chrysanthemums occupy first place. While the crop in some leading sources of supply is not up to the standards of previous years, excellent stock is obtainable, both of the big fellows and the pompons. The peak of the 'Mum season is now passing.

Some growers, compelled to time their crops a little differently this year because of the fuel restrictions, are experiencing heavy cuts of Roses at this commonly considered unfavorable time, resulting in marked declines in values. Rose sales had to be pushed during the latter part of the week ending Nov. 9. For the first time in many weeks there was a surplus at the close of business.

Sweet Peas of good quality are being offered but, thrown into competition with the choice pompons, their movement is slow. Single Violets meet with little call and the demand for New York doubles is rather weak.

Lily of the Valley is turning out so badly in the frames that local growers seriously talk of discontinuing it. Under present conditions a price of $10 per 100 would scarcely make it a profitable crop. This is to be regretted as the belated express service makes the handling of Valley shipped from a distance practically impossible.

Fine dwarf Boxwood from the South is arriving and is hailed with great satisfaction because of the dearth of local greens.

Carnations are steadily improving in quality and can now be had in abundance.

A Busy Florist

During the flow of business in October practically every florist worked early and late, but the record established by T. W. Lisy, the Broadway florist, is particularly worthy of mention. From October 15 to November 1 he averaged 12 funerals daily. This compelled his force to labor day and night on several occasions. The largest funeral was that of Angelo Cellura, the well known wholesale fruit dealer, on Nov. 1, to fill the orders for which two entire benches of Chrysanthemums and Snapdragons at the greenhouses on East 116th st. were cut in addition to heavy purchases from the market. Mr. Lisy is a firm believer in patronizing the home market. He is ably assisted by two sons, Frank J. and William, the former doing the buying and the latter having charge of the retail store at 4517 Broadway. His daughter Sylvia has made a special study of wedding decorations and is annually increasing that phase of the business. Mr. Lisy spends his time for the most part in the greenhouses, where, with the help of competent growers, he produces a splendid output of plants and flowers. Constant application and the faithful cooperation of his sons and daughter are the cornerstones of his success.

Club Secretary Recovering

Word has been received that Walter E. Cook, secretary of the Cleveland Florists' Club, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, at Newark, N. J., has passed the danger point and is now upon the road to recovery. He became ill while on a business trip East in late October.

Business Briefs

Letters from Sergt. J. W. Kolinsky, formerly with the Taylor Arcade Flower Shop are to the effect that he is enjoying his novel experiences at Pisgah Forest, N. C. The camp is situated 8000ft. above sea level and hasn't had a single case of the "flu."

Commenting upon the recent scarcity of flowers Ed. George, of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio, stated that practically everything about the place usable by florists has been cut, the outdoor Roses in particular being much sought.

F. C. W. Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., spent the latter part of last week in New York and other Eastern cities.

John Bartsh, formerly with P. C. Hahn, the Superior ave. florist, now in France, writes entertaining letters home to his friends, stating that he is feeling "like a duke" and having a good time.

Business was suspended at noon, Nov. 11, in all the wholesale and retail stores to enable the staffs to join in the city wide celebration of the end of the war, which announcement in the early morning of that day created an excitement never before equaled in intensity in the Sixth City.

J. M. L.

St. Paul, Minn.

Conditions during the past week regarding cut stock probably have been easier. With the epidemic subsiding in Minneapolis and increasing in St. Paul flowers have been used extensively for convalescents while funeral work has been heavy despite private funerals. Stock though more plentiful does not exceed the supply. Carnations are perhaps most short. Local Roses are about out of crop. All classes of Chrysanthemums sell readily and realize good prices. With dull weather the past two weeks few Violets are to be had. They are selling for $2 per 100. Calendulas are finding a ready sale, early Mignonette also.

Probably never before in the history of St. Paul has the demand been so great for Army and Navy funeral designs. Weather conditions have been unfavorable for all kinds of stock. The Twin Cities have not seen the sun for over two weeks. Naturally this reduces stock considerably. At present writing no frost is in the ground, whereas in other years at this season difficulty has been experienced by the landscape workers through the ground being frozen several inches. Even the Salvias in their scarlet splendor were not killed until a week ago.

O. R. Eckhardt reports a brisk shipping trade to all points in the Dakotas and Montana.

Bulbs in small quantities have reached the Twin Cities, but the increased prices of transportation, coupled with cost of labor and production, scarcely pay for handling them.

With the growers a splendid lot of holiday pot stock is noted.

Merriam Park Floral Co. have an exceptionally good patch of Poinsettias. Much berried stock is noticed together with Primroses, Begonia Chatelaine and Christmas red. The warmer growing Begonias have been discarded in favor of plants that staud lower temperatures because in a cold climate such as ours they are easily chilled during holiday business and have never satisfied customers. Merriam Park has also planted considerable cool stock such as Stevia, Calendula and Forgetmenots.

Hiawatha Greenhouses are supplying the trade with well grown Holly pans, Cyclamen and potted Chrysanthemums.

Manzey of Minneapolis is cutting fine pompons and singles from his greenhouses coming in about a week earlier than most growers in this section.

Many friends and acquaintances of Miss Whitted will be pleased to learn of her successful opening of a little store on Spruce st., Minneapolis, where old time customers are giving her support.

Recent visitors were Mr. Hunkel of Milwaukee and S. S. Kairns of Dreers.

The Rose supply is fairly large and generally of a high quality. Carnations are again in a fair supply. 'Mum receipts are heavy and generally meet with an excellent market. Easter Lilies may be had but they are not meeting with any particularly strong call. The few Sweet Peas that come into the market clean up readily. Some single Violets and Lily of the Valley are available.

All florists' stores in this city closed as soon as possible on Monday.

Walter Eck was home on a furlough last week.

The Hill Floral Co. has decorated one of its windows with a War Chest to spur the War Chest Drive during the present fortnight.

Cut flowers have not increased in supply any over the past week. Roses, Carnations and 'Mums clean up daily on the wholesale market. The demand has been reduced somewhat.

'Mum Show Cancelled

Owing to the Board of Health' ban on public gatherings the annua 'Mum show in the City Park green houses will not be held. The green houses are filled with shaggy and ga colored 'Mums of about 50 varieties grown by Frank T. Rushmore, foreman of the houses. Every preparation ha been made to make this a show wort while. Among the most noticeable va rieties on display are Geo. F. Turner "L'Enfant des deux Mondes" (Child o the Two Worlds), Caprice, Freda Be ford, Mrs. F. F. Whittington, Mrs. T Carrington, Jossier, S. D. Wright, Ge eral Hutton, Colonel Appleton, Mrs. Mo ton F. Plant, Negoya, Dolly Dimpl Lynwood Hall, Vivand Morrell, Charl Davis, Constable, Mrs. H. A. Alle Golden Age and Louis De Black. Man well grown 'Mum plants were in exce lent condition for the display, also Be gonia Cincinnati, with a mass of shin pink blossoms. An added attraction fruit of which weighs on an average four pounds each. Some of the Lemo on this tree measure 18in. in circum ference. There are about 25 Lemo now on the tree, each of which has to carefully held up by a wire to preve the weight of the fruit breaking th branches. All cut flowers and bloomi plants grown in these houses are donat to the hospitals of Denver from time time. John L. Russell, superintende of City Park carries a large variety bedding plants in the house for the u of beautifying the park.

Denver enjoyed its first snow stor Nov. 6 and 7.

The Bright Spot Greenhouses are now under the control of Charles N. Page, who is an ex-president of the American Seed Trade Association, founder and until recently manager of the Iowa Seed Co. These greenhouses were formerly controlled by the Davison & Western Floral Co. Mr. Page writes that October trade with him was more than double that of last year.

A New York traveling man entered the store of the Colorado Seed Co. and after looking around said to Mr. Root: "I am glad to see you keep in with the live ones." As he picked up THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE he said: "I have seen this dear old paper in nearly every store I have visited.

Stock is somewhat more plentiful owing partly to the increased cut of midseason 'Mums and partly to the early closing ordered by the health officers. The stock in this case would accumulate a great deal faster were it not for the heavy demand for funeral flowers. That is the main use for flowers, the ban being on everything in the party and dance line and even the weddings are limited as to the number of guests. Out of town funeral work is also keeping the local trade busy.

News

Some of the trade regarded the closing order by the board of health rather skeptically, but the mayor gave them to understand that although there is no law by which violators may be punished it would be made very hot for them nevertheless. It naturally works a hardship on the trade doing a transient business. Some showed a good deal of uneasiness about closing as others were doing business on the side; but the mayor's strict orders followed by the call of an officer did the work. Most shops are busy until after 6 p.m. getting ready for the next day's work. Just how long the order will be in force no one knows. But the probability is that the good news of the war's end will help cure up a great many.

The Market

Nov. 12.—The early days of this week saw just a seasonably full market of cut flowers. Even 'Mums, which many feared would swamp the market this Autumn because many would grow them, and after the crop was over close up their houses on account of a short fuel supply, are not in an unseasonably large supply as compared with other years.

American Beauty Roses are about the only item in short supply. The best of the special grade blooms are selling at 50c. each in general with a few sales of extra choice blooms at 60c. Hybrid tea Roses show a large range of varieties, mostly of those which have come to the front during the last three to eight years, few of the old timers being seen any longer. The quality is fine, and the demand fair. Top grade blooms are selling at from 6c. to 50c. as per quotations in price list and No. 2 grade at $2 to $3 per 100.

The supply of Carnations is not over large, but they have now to compete with 'Mums of all sizes and colors, and therefore prices are moderate, like the demand, ranging from $1 to $3 per 100, with extra choice blooms realizing $4.

Cattleya orchids are in medium supply and not moving over fast, at about 50c. each for the best. Gardenias are going slowly, though not overabundant, at $2 to $4 per doz. for the higher grades. There are plenty of white Lilies, but no pink worth mentioning; the white go slowly at $8 to $10 per 100. There is a small demand for Lily of the Valley at $3 to $8 per 100.

'Mums are, of course, the leading feature now; it is a question whether they will hold out until Thanksgiving. The larger flowered kinds are selling well at from $1 to $4 per doz. and the bunch 'Mums not over freely at 10c. to 60c. per bunch.

Violets meet with little call at low prices. A few Sweet Peas are now arriving and are selling at about $1 to $1.50 per 100.

Very few of what are classed as miscellaneous blooms are seen; there are some Antirrhinums and Mignonette of improving quality, a few Gaillardias, Calendulas and Delphiniums.

All greens are meeting with a fair demand, and are in seasonable supply.

Club Meetings

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st., and Eighth ave., on Monday evening of this week. A full report of this meeting will be found in this issue.

The Retail Florists' Ass'n of New York City had a meeting on Tuesday night at Lenox Hall, 59th st. and Madison ave. An election of officers was held and resulted as follows: President, Charles H. Brown; vice-pres., Wm. A. Phillips; Sec'y, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr.; Treas., G. E. M. Stumpp, Jr. Directors: Marshall Clark, Max Schling, Albert Small and M. A. Bowe. The members present expressed their belief that the outlook for the retail flower business was excellent.

The close of the great war on Monday at 6 a.m. produced various manifestations of hilarious joy beyond precedent all through the day and night, such as will never be forgotten by those who witnessed them.

The two flower shows, the one of the C. S. A. in association with that of the American Institute, and the other that of the Horticultural Society of New York, which were held this week, and of which a report will be found in this issue, bring to a close the Autumn shows in this city and indeed in this section of the country.

A. M. Henshaw, president of the Henshaw Floral Co., 127 W. 28th st., has been promoted to Lieut. Commander in the U. S. Naval Reserve, the highest rank attainable in that branch of the naval service.

A notably large supply of 'Mums this season in great variety have been, and are now being handled by the Henshaw Floral Co., 127 W. 28th st.

Some large, unusually well grown Bonnaffon and Razer 'Mums from Joseph Riede of Middle Village, L. I., the best we have noted this season, were seen this week at E. C. Horan's, 55 W. 28th st.

Philip F. Kessler, 55 W. 26th st., celebrated his forty-fifth birthday on Monday of this week, by giving a turkey dinner that night to the members of the Florists' Club and their guests.

The blooms of exhibition 'Mums in several varieties and in all the 'Mum colors seen daily at Joseph S. Fenrich's, 51 W. 28th st., are in a class of their own. The pompons and singles too are of excellent quality.

We regret to learn that Lieut. Gordon Boyd, a brother-in-law of Edward McK. Whiting of the National Florists' Board of Trade, 56 Wall st., has been killed in action while on outpost duty. He was with the 120th Infantry.

The annual Chrysanthemum show opened in the greenhouse at Prospect Park, Brooklyn on Nov. 2 and continued until Nov. 16. More than 8000 plants were on display to the public at large. There were 110 varieties in all, which were arranged for color effect. Park Commissioner Harmon has been in charge, aided by his gardeners, David L. Thompson, James Quigley and David Quick, to whom he gives much credit for growing the plants and enabling him to present what he considers the finest exhibit of Chrysanthemums Brooklyn has ever seen.

Mayor Hylan has appointed Philip Berolzheimer as Commissioner of Parks for the Boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond to succeed former Commissioner Wm. F. Grell. Mr. Berolzheimer has served New York City as special Deputy Commissioner of Parks in charge of music in all the parks of New York City.

Among the callers in this city this week were F. C. W. Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; H. J. Anderson of the traveling force, and A. G. Blomberg of the 'Mum section of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; W. H. Stone, the Carnation grower, Blue Point, L. I., and R. L. Dunn, grower and retail florist, St. Catherines, Ont., Canada. Mr. Dunn brought with him blooms of a lemon yellow sport of the Wm. Turner 'Mum. He reports that he is getting for fuel a 70 per cent. supply of "grate size" anthracite, that cut flowers are commanding a high price, and that it is a question not so much of the price, as of how many you can furnish. Mr. Dunn forces bulbs as well as grows cut flowers in his range of Lord & Burnham houses. He received his Dutch bulbs direct from Holland and planted them six weeks ago; he is still awaiting the arrival of his French bulbs, via the United States.

The Market

Nov. 12.—Business during the past week was normal. A lot of flowers has accumulated and undoubtedly there will be a big slump after the victory holidays. All predict a big Thanksgiving business; in fact, larger and more glorious than any previous one in this great country. Prices remain much as they were last week with every indication that quantities of flowers will be used before the week end at banquets and other joy feasts

Boston—Continued from page 796

Joseph Manda of West Orange, N. J., staged as fine a table of cut flowers of Cypripedium insigne Sundvacc as was ever seen in this city, and was awarded a silver medal. L. S. Webster staged a magnificent well grown group of Winter Begonias. The varieties shown were Mookham, Optima, Elatior, Fireflame and Rosalind. They were awarded a silver medal. A single large pan of a new variety named Begonia Exquisite was also awarded a silver medal. A certificate of merit was awarded to F. Dorner & Sons Co. for a pink Carnation, No. 119,. This company also received honorable mention for scarlet Carnation, No. 107. Both were grown by S. J. Goddard. Miss E. P. Mason received certificates of merit for Chrysanthemum, Monadnock and Chrysanthemum Nashawtuc. Allston Conservatories had a nice group of flowering and foliage plants. There were also exhibits of Apples, Pears, Quinces and Grapes. The collection of vegetables were of good quality and nicely staged. The exhibition was open to the public free of charge and was well attended.

Hort. Club Meeting

The Horticultural Club of Boston held its monthly meeting at the Parker House on Wednesday, Nov. 6. The evening was a delightful one. William P. Rich read an interesting paper on "Native Plants of Economic Value, Edible, Medicinal and Aromatic." The Waban Rose Conservatories are sending to the Boston Flower Exchange excellent Russell, Hadley and Ophelia Roses. Their single stem 'Mums are as good as any seen this season.

The flower business on Monday was practically at a standstill. Every one was rejoicing over the great victory so there was no time for business. Stores of all kinds were closed. Never before have I seen such crowds of people in the streets. The Governor proclaimed Tuesday as a holiday, so this will be a short week for business.

William H. Elliott is having unusually good success with his Roses at Madbury, N. H. He is cutting fine grade flowers of Ophelia, Mildred, Columbia, Sunburst, White Killarney, Victoria and single flowered Roses. His 'Mum plants from his Brighton greenhouses were never better than this season.

On Nov. 18 the B. A. Snyder Co., wholesale florists, will open its new store at 21 to 25 Otis st.

The annual meeting of the Mass. Hort. Soc. will be held on Saturday, Nov. 16, at 12 o'clock. This is an important meeting and all members should attend. Several amendments to the by-laws of the society will be presented and voted upon.

The next meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club is on Tuesday evening, Nov. 19, at Horticultural Hall. A full attendance is wished for as officers will be nominated then. R. C.

Chicago

Market Celebrates

Nov. 12.—Chicago went wild with joy last Monday. The wholesale cut flower market closed for the day to join in the celebration. The premature peace announcement on Thursday caused closing for the afternoon. Despite these interruptions there is a lively market; plenty of stock and plenty of business, with prices satisfactory in all grades where quality justifies it. The shipping trade is good and the local buying satisfactory. At this writing it is safe to say the peace proclamation will give additional boom to the market. With no great amount of stock obtainable after the passing of the Chrysanthemum crop the season now well opened will be one of the best in history. The Thanksgiving demand will this season be the heaviest on record. Dealers are already becoming alarmed lest there may not be enough stock to go around.

The supply of Roses is equal to the demand with nothing to spare. Prices continue satisfactory regardless of the heavy supply of 'Mums. It is probable that before the week is over the demand may exceed the supply as many crops are reported to be passing off for the time being. Carnations, not in large supply, have been bringing better prices through October and up to the present time than they have ever done before at this season. The Chrysanthemum supply seems to have reached its highest mark of the season. The flowers are to be seen everywhere in large quantities. Some really excellent blooms are to be had from all the dealers. Pompons are in greater supply in proportion to the large flowering varieties. For this reason they are being sold at low prices to keep them moving. Although more 'Mums are on the market than at this time a year ago, considering conditions as they existed up to Monday, they have brought better prices than in former years. With the new conditions just begun, good prices will doubtless continue until the end of the season.

There has been enough Valley so far; all sells at list prices. Orchids are becoming more plentiful and prices continue firm. Easter Lilies are good property selling as high as $15 per 100 and in small lots for $2 per doz. more than they have ever brought during this month in other years. Violets are plentiful and moving fairly well. Gladioli have disappeared, but a few greenhouse grown Asters are still to be had. Calendulas have of late become a feature of the market and will no doubt continue to a larger extent as soon as 'Mums are gone. Some Pansies, Daisies, Snapdragons are to to be had in limited quantities. All green stock is in sufficient supply. Boxwood has made its appearance and is selling as high as 20c per pound, considerably higher than in former years.

There has been no check on the delivery of flowers to funerals during the week. The ruling against them on account of the epidemic is off. The week's market opened Tuesday with everybody in high glee over the end of the war. Pessimists have all passed out, and prospects have never looked brighter.

Ed. Neiman, proprietor of the Morton House at Morton Grove, was buried last Monday. His death resulted from drinking poisoned whiskey in the premature celebration of peace last Thursday. It was first reported that nicofume liquid was taken by mistake. If so this would make two deaths within a year caused by this insecticide. Mr. Neiman had many friends in the florist trade having on a few occasions been caterer for the florists' picnics at Morton Grove.

The prospects for a strong retail florists' association looks encouraging. Abo 25 met at the Congress Hotel on No 4, the second meeting toward forming new association. At the next meeti it is hoped to have matters so arrang as to be able to announce them to t trade.

BUY ROSES

Although the supply of flowers will be smaller in other lines, we will have just as many Roses as last season.

We never had better varieties to offer. Our growers have discarded some of the older varieties and have replaced them with such varieties, as RUSSELL, COLUMBIA, PRIMA DONNA and SHAWYER.

You will make no mistake in depending on us this season for your supply of Roses. You do not know what we can offer you until you have tried a shipment.

BEAUTIES

The quality of our Beauties is the best. We have them in quantity, and can fill your order any time for as many as you need.

BOXWOOD AND LYCOPODIUM

We are booking orders now for later delivery for BOXWOOD and LYCOPODIUM. The supply is not as large as last year, and for that reason order early.

to membership and the applications of Grant Wiffin, Henry D. Neve and Xavier Wojtkiewicz, all of Des Plaines, were received and allowed to take the usual course in such cases. T. E. Waters, chairman of the good of the club, spoke of having more activity among the publicity committee of the club and suggested that we have a big meeting in December in the way of an exhibition of Christmas novelties so all retailers of the city could participate. A committee was also appointed to secure the film of the moving pictures shown at Cleveland during the recent meeting of the F. T. D. association. It is hoped that these pictures will be ready for the December meeting. A dance and ladies' night was also suggested for some time in December. This was referred to the sports and pastimes committee. It was also suggested that a series of moving pictures be gotten up showing scenes in the Chicago wholesale cut flower market and views of the large greenhouses and other points of interest relating to the local florist industry. A committee consisting of T. E. Waters, A. Lange, O. J. Freedman and Geo. Asmus was appointed to look into this matter and report the feasibility and probable cost at a future meeting.

J. C. Craig, who was apointed at the last meeting to make suggestions as to the betterment of conditions existing between the retailers and wholesalers and for remedying grievances among the trade, read a paper giving many excellent suggestions for which he was given a rising vote of thanks. The paper was referred to the trustees of the club for them to take such action on it as they thought fit. Otto Amling, treasurer of the club read a paper on the betterment of trade conditions from the standpoint of a grower. He also was given a rising vote of thanks.

President Lautenschlager thanked the club for the gift of a clock presented to him by the club in appreciation of the good work he has done in publicity matters, especially in the sale of stamps and postcrettes for such occasions as St. Valentine's Day, Mother's Day, etc. Through these much good has been done for the trade in general as well as being of much financial benefit to the club. He said every tick of the clock will in future remind him of the thoughtfulness of the club in presenting him with such a substantial token of esteem.

At this point the club nominated officers for the ensuing year. For president, A. J. Zech and Geo. C. Weiland, for vice-president, Walter Amling; for secretary, A. T. Pyfer; for treasurer, Otto Amling to succeed himself. Fred Lautenschlager was nominated for trustee to take the place of H. N. Bruns whose term expires at the end of this term. The only contest will be for president. The election will be held at next meeting, Dec. 5.

A. J. Zech was made chairman for the War Relief Fund, the drive for which started on Nov. 11. The florists' and allied trades are expected to subscribe $13,500.

It was suggested that the club give a victory banquet at the close of hostilities, the time and place to be decided in the near future. It was understood, however, that the club as a body should not bear the expense of such a banquet.

Philadelphia

Quiet Market

Nov. 12.—There has been very little activity in the cut flower market. The supply continues strong, especially in Roses, which require a little pressure to move them. Prices remain about list figures, except for some of the shorter grades. 'Mums are doing well and are in better demand than any other flower; they are arriving in quantity and in numerous varieties. Pompons are not taking as freely. Carnations are coming in strongly. There are not as many Easter Lilies, but the Calla supply is increasing. All the outdoor flowers are done blooming. There is a normal supply of orchids. Violets are not meeting with any response. There are a few more Sweet Peas. There is a good supply of greens and Oak foliage. Shipping business is better than the local demand.

Peace Celebration

With the glad news of peace this city on Monday declared a holiday that suspended all business; virtually the whole city turned out in celebration. Philadelphia, the cradle of Liberty, was rocked with patriotism as probably never before since the days of the Revolution. The jubilation exceeded any celebration ever witnessed here and impromptu parades were everywhere in the making. The bell in Independence Hall once again rang forth its glorious peal of Liberty. Some of the signs carried by the paraders were extremely funny and to the point. A good one was, "The kaiser wanted more territory, so we gave him hell."

About a dozen members of the craft have taken a motor trip, visiting the leading growers of Bucks and Montgomery counties this week.

FOR SALE OR RENT

FOR SALE—One of the best equipped greenhouse establishments, with the finest store, in a city of 25,000. Store rents at reasonable price. Cars run past store and also one half block from greenhouses, which is only 5 blocks from center of the city. The land consists of 35 building lots, 40 ft. front, 4 acres and 6 perches, sloping about 10 degrees from the south. One 8-room dwelling, all on one floor, built of stucco, with 2 large cement front steps; 1 large 2-story stable, 26x50, built with No. 1 white pine. The greenhouses consist of one 33x200, one 22x200 and one 6x200, all Lord & Burnham built, all double thick A. glass. The heating is by steam, with a 50 h. return tubular boiler, and all fitted with 1¼-in. wrought iron pipe. Cellar big enough to store 125 tons of anthracite coal, coal being taken to the boilers with scoop shovel on a track at ceiling; ashes are put straight out on dump cart. Cellar of building is 12 ft. deep and 90 ft. long, made of concrete. The place is stocked for the winter with 50 per cent of buckwheat coal, plants and bulbs, also a fine lot of Rose plants for Easter. 1 horse, 2 delivery wagons, 1 board wagon, 1 dump cart, 3 sets of harness, about 45,000 pots, all necessary tools, also about 4,000 Carnation supports that have never been used. The place was built only 4 years ago. Good business—can't grow enough for the store. Will be sold for less than what the land is worth, as I would like to retire from business on account of death in family. Will take ⅓ down and the balance on easy terms. For particulars. Address P. L. care The Florists' Exchange.

FOR SALE—Greenhouses, land, stock, store, etc. Established 25 years. Yearly business $75,000. Will sell outright or incorporate.
H. F. Littlefield, Worcester, Mass.

FOR SALE—Having other business that requires my attention, I offer my 14 greenhouses and connecting store for sale. The greenhouses, consist of 35,000 ft of glass, all in first-class condition. Season's coal supply on premises. Houses are all planted for winter. Also a fine 12-room dwelling house, stables and garage.
Greenhouses have been established 20 years and doing a fine business in a town of 25,000. Books are open for inspection.

Patriotic Boutonnieres

T. Nielson Geiger did a rushing business during the peace celebration with his patriotic boutonnieres. The boutonniere was made up of a red and white Carnation and a few Violets. They could not be turned out fast enough.

The seed houses are in the thick of getting out their bulb orders; so far the present supply is inadequate to the demand. Moreover, the number of varieties have been cut down and the list comprises only the leading standard sorts and in some instances only a few of one variety is to be had.

It is pleasing to hear that Jos. G. Neidinger is on the high road to recovery, following his operation.

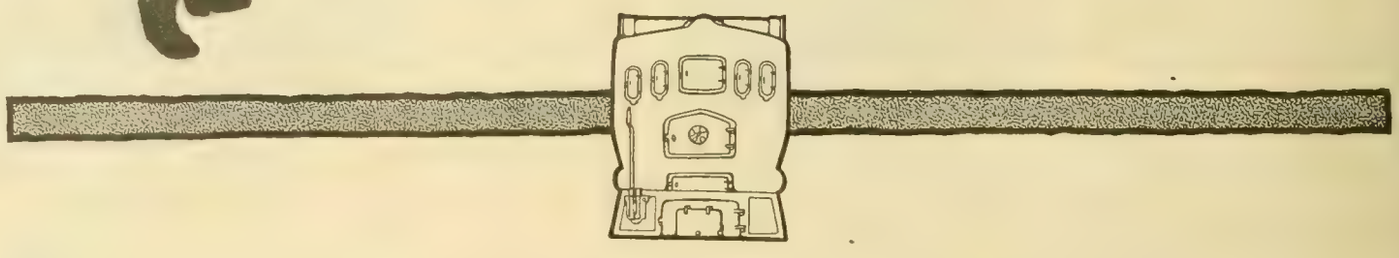
How do you feel about it By this Time?



GETTING the heat out of your coal that you ought to?

What's to blame?

Is it a poorer grade than usual; or filled with "scoopings" like so much was last year?

Is it so that your boiler ought to have another section, or that some of the coils act kinky and don't heat up quickly?

If any of these things are so, don't you think it would pay you to send for our Coal Eater Detective and find out what's wrong and make it right?

Of course his detecting services may cost you something. But the chances are he will also save you something.

We don't guarantee he will make one ton do the work of two, but we do know that if you are burning needless coal he will locate the reason why and tell you exactly how to overcome it.

THE NEW GLORY FERN

We have ready for shipment an excellent stock of this new variety of Farleyense, which is as hardy and will stand up in homes and stores as well as Adiantum Croweanum. It is of good form and beautiful color, the new fronds being tinted with pink. We shall send this out this season in place of the old type of Farleyense, and we believe it can be used more extensively than that variety—especially on account of its keeping qualities.

ONION SETS GROWERS FOR THE TRAI

Full Steam Ahead!

Leading Seedsmen, Florists, Nurserymen and others in the various lines covered by THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE give our readers their idea of just what the armistice, signed last Monday, Nov. 11, means to the trade—its future from now on particularly. Naturally, where so many views are brought together there are conflicting ones, but the consensus of opinion is clearly to the effect that very shortly, with every impediment removed, we will be able to drive ahead at our fullest capacity and toward a more generous and profitable business than has ever been known in our history

Follows Some of the Replies:

J. C. Vaughan, President Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York:

The immediate outlook for commercial florists is good. ere is money to spend the coming months and enough ple have it to make our trade good. The grower produces a good supply will get big prices if he s them, and because of last year's losses he is now itled to recoup himself. The retailer who provided a line of attractive flowers, plants and greens will get the business he can do if he uses reasonable publicity. short, I predict good winter business for those who prepared for it, and partly for one simple reason: many of our trade discouraged by early coal restrics have not provided even a normal supply or output. t busy and push your trade. The war is over. Forget ex-Kaiser.

R. Brunswick, Secretary M. Rice Co., Florists' Supplies, Philadelphia:

We firmly believe that for the next two years at least the rists are going to experience the biggest business that ey have ever had in their history. Regardless of what ect the reconstruction period may have on businesses at have been profiting from war industries, we feel that e effect of the armistice and peace can bring nothing t good to the florists' trade.

The resumption of normal social activities, the gradual urn of the troops over a period probably covering the xt two years, with its attendant celebrations and fe ities of all kinds, seems to us certain to make the demand flowers and floral decorations the greatest the trade has own. We are especially optimistic about the future.

R. A. Vincent of R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.:

Why should not the florist rejoice as much as others that ace has come? Our armies have helped win the greatest ctory the world has ever known. The florists and gar ners have each done "their bit" over there, also at home giving up space intended for flowers so that vegetables ight be grown that the nations of the earth might be fed. ey have also contributed liberally of their means that e war might be won.

Naturally, there will be shortages for some time to come; portation of florist and nursery stock will be limited, and her conditions help to shorten production. Nearly every ower had cut down his source of supplies to meet the el administration's rulings, and the modifying order me too late for him to get his stock in normal condition. abor conditions have also curtailed production.

When we once more get back to normal, trees, shrubbery d flowers will be more in demand than at any time in r country's history, as we have not lost, but gained by e war a knowledge of what makes home life beautiful.

The true florist sees good not only in the money making d of his business but, with a generous kind heart, stands ady at all times to lend a helping hand to those who have ouble by the wayside, by making life brighter through e gift of a few plants or flowers, knowing that their ilture and study invariably elevates—certainly never grades—and is apt to make customers for some one.

In a few months, and for the next two years, the soldiers ll be coming home, they will be entitled receptions nd no reception will be complete without flowers.

"Keep the Home Fires Burning," can be no better ex mplified than by "Keeping the Front Yard Blooming," that wherever a soldier left flowers blooming when he nt away he will be looking for them on his return. They ll be either planted before he comes home, or if he comes ome before planting time he will have with him memories f the flower gardens of Europe and will want to make his ome grounds better than those over there.

The abnormal war vegetable gardens will be a thing of e past and many of those who destroyed flower beds, wns etc., and failed to plant flowers on account of the d of growing vegetables will be anxious to return to their eautiful flower gardens.

Flowers in plenty will be placed and planted upon graves f honored dead, who have given life, not for glory, but hat the world might be better and greater than it ever as in its previous history. And our people are bound to ok for a higher civilization than ever before existed and othing can help this more than the home made beautiful.

And we expect to see our florists and gardeners called pon to do this making a business for them that has never een equaled.

By The Storrs & Harrison Co., Nurserymen, Florists and Seedsmen, Painesville, O.

If we knew what the signing of the armistice meant to the trade, especially in the near future, we would be mighty happy ourselves, and would be more than glad to spread the news.

We think that there is no question that the demand for stock, both in the nursery and florist line is going to be greater than the supply, and that, especially in the nursery line, many items will be unobtainable. We believe that an increased demand will be found for the coming Spring's planting.

It seems to us that the one great problem will be labor, and whether that will be released in sufficient quantities, so that nurserymen and florists can handle the large trade, if they get it, and take care of their planting, propagating, etc., is a question. We very much doubt if our business will be able to go back to its old time production for several seasons.

By David Burpee, President and General Manager W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Seed Growers, Philadelphia:

I am glad to write THE EXCHANGE what I think the armistice signed on Monday, Nov 11, means to the seed trade.

During the war I have taken a great deal of interest in watching the various tendencies in the seed business of the different European countries because I believed that as we got further and further into the war there would be similar reactions in America.

In France and England it seems the demand for flower seeds fell off tremendously after war was declared. But when those countries began to suffer great losses of men then the people turned more and more to the flower gardens and the demand for flower seeds increased steadily until the demand almost reached the normal.

The demand for vegetable seeds in our allied nations, of course has been tremendous since the beginning of the war. Food prices were high and so long as food prices continue high there will continue to be an abnormal demand for vegetable seeds.

In this country sales have fluctuated in a somewhat similar manner. The demand for flower seeds fell off a great deal, but I believe had we continued at war another year or two, and had practically every family in the country suffered from its horrors, then the people would surely have demanded the relaxations of the flower garden.

With us the demand for vegetable seeds doubled the year the United States declared war. For that matter, the total volume of our business in 1917 was pretty nearly double that of any previous year. And the increased demand held up pretty steadily throughout 1918.

It seems to me that the gardeners of America have shown somewhat a feverish activity because of unsettled conditions and I believe we will all benefit greatly by the coming of peace. Business will very gradually become more steady and it is almost certain that prices for all lines of seeds will drop gradually during the next three years. The signing of the armistice has come too late to affect prices of seeds to any great extent for [illegible] of 1919. We can expect large supplies of some seeds to come in from Europe but [illegible] depend upon them for the coming season. On the other hand, there is going to be an immediate demand for supplies of a great many varieties of seeds for the export trade just as soon as the embargoes are lifted and ships are available. For we know there is an alarming shortage of most vegetable seeds in Europe today.

The principal thing now for us all to guard is quality of seeds. Until conditions get more settled there is great danger of there being offered seeds of unknown source and of inferior quality.

While I am speaking of this subject I would like to say just a word in defense of the seedsmen of America. During the war all seedsmen in this country have been handicapped by great difficulties. First, the seed supply from Europe was cut off; then, last Winter shipments of seeds coming in from distant points in this country were three and four months delayed on the road. For the past three years we have often [illegible] difficulties and to fill orders promptly.

It will help a great deal this year if all the seedsmen and all the papers will do what they can to urge the gardening public to buy seeds early. Whether the florist buys his seeds from Burpee, or from any other seedsmen, it will be to the advantage to order early and to secure his supply before some stocks are exhausted.

Now that it seems certain peace will be concluded I believe conditions will be sufficiently settled by next February and March to insure a banner year in the seed business. Prices of all foodstuffs will necessarily remain high, for we now must feed the starving people of Europe, and great quantities of food will be shipped from the country. Because of the continued high prices of food there will be a continued heavy demand for vegetable seeds. And now that the war is over, the demand for flower seeds should return to normal. So I predict a banner year for the seed business.

By W. & T. Smith Co., Nurserymen, Geneva, N. Y.:

Your request of Nov. 16 asking our opinion of what the future may have in store for the nursery trade now that the war is over, is somewhat difficult to answer.

If nothing unforseen happens we believe that by Spring life will be much more normal than it has been for the past two years, in that the American people will turn their thoughts more toward developing their homes, and, consequently, will need fruit and ornamental plants in large quantities. This will be helped along by the fact that labor will probably be obtainable so that planting can be carried on, while plans which have been held up for the past two years can be carried to completion.

We are decidedly optimistic as to the future, and on account of the difficulties and expense of getting plants of all kinds from Europe, the American grown shrubs and Roses ought to bring remunerative prices. The supply of really first grade ornamental is decidedly limited, much less than many people suppose and nurserymen have the assurance that they can obain prices which will give them a fair profit.

By G. C. Perkins, Secretary and Treasurer, Jackson & Perkins Company, Rose Growers and Nurserymen, Newark:

We don't know that our opinion will be of particular value as to the future outlook for the trade because we are constitutionally optimistic. We are always looking for business to be good and expecting it to be good, and it is rarely that we have been disappointed.

We cannot see any reason why prospects for the immediate future should not be particularly encouraging to nurserymen and florists all over the country. There never was as much money in circulation as there is at the present time. The greatest handicap has been the extreme shortage and high cost of labor. That is about the only factor of uncertainty that we see for the future. We think there is going to be a strong demand for the product of both florists and nurserymen, but unless there is very some relief from the present high cost of labor, we do not know that business will be as profitable as it was some years ago. However, with our boys coming home from [illegible] we think we can expect relief from the present difficult labor situation, and with that as a very reasonable prospect we cannot see anything to cause discouragement.

By W. R. Cobb, Lord & Burnham Co., Greenhouse Builders, New York City:

We have not had much time to give to the situation, but it seems to us that the celebration which took place all over the country on Nov. 11, by its very magnitude and [illegible] demonstrated what a tremendous weight has been lifted from our people's shoulders and to what extent their spirits had been depressed in the last year and a half.

We believe that the people will return to their normal pursuits with the same vigor as they displayed in the [illegible] of the war. That all business will soon be will assume their pre-war-time status cannot fail shortly [illegible]

By Henry F. Michell, President Henry F. Michell Co., Seeds-Bulbs, Philadelphia. :

I wish to say that the very good news of the signing of the armistice will be a great relief to the seedsmen and florists. We feel now that we can go ahead full steam up.

It will pay us to entirely forget the past and look for the brightest future only (which is bound to come in 1919). We must, however, have some patience and lots of cooperation if we want to obtain the nice results which will surely come to all of us in this splendid country of ours.

America will enjoy the respect and confidence of the whole world and confidence produces big business.

Florists must be lenient with their seed and bulb men for the slow and probable short shipments which have occurred this year, but we all have done our utmost by untiring efforts to make deliveries as good as possible. Optimism in the whole seed and horticultural trade must now prevail. Pessimists must forget their losses and troubles and start up by working overtime so as to catch up to the progressive grower and merchant.

My personal advice and policy is to be well prepared with a good large stock and assortment for this coming holiday and Spring trade which, I feel, will be unusually prosperous. The florists who will have a fine line of Christmas greens, cut flowers and pot plants will not regret having made this liberal provision. A new lease of life and prosperity is at our doors and we must be ready to take advantage of it.

By S. S. Pennock of S. S. Pennock Co., Wholesale Florists, Philadelphia:

The coming of Peace will mean to the flower business a change for the better, and splendid business for all those who are in shape to handle an increased trade, which is bound to come, particularly when the boys commence to return home. There will be no doubt about their being entertained, and flowers are one of the things that are necessary on every occasion, not only of joy but in sadness. Flowers reach the spot as nothing else does, and there is more sentiment expressed through flowers, than anything that we can send to our friends.

I don't think there will be any sudden spurt in trade conditions, but I do feel that it will gradually improve, and the next year or two should see good business in the flower trade.

By Norman Serphos, Seed Grower and Dealer, New York:

It is our belief that the seed trade will benefit greatly by the cessation of hostilities. The labor condition is bound to improve, thereby increasing the production of garden seed in this country, and we think that the export of Garden seed to Europe will increase quite rapidly, now that peace is in sight.

European crops having been poor for a number of years; the foreign growers will surely have to come to this country, for their requirements.

By S. A. Anderson, The Florist, Buffalo, N. Y.:

The good news of the practical end of hostilities after over four years of frightful slaughter has such large proportions that we cannot judge what is before us. We are going through a period that we little understand and are unable to grasp the full meaning of these history making days. For the florist I can see a large trade for Thanksgiving and Christmas, but a dullness in between. The crop of weddings that will be harvested in the Spring will be extremely large, followed in the Fall by debutante of the vintage of fifteen, sixteen, seventeen and eighteen. From this time on we must be careful in purchasing our supplies, as we will see a declining market, while labor will take a long time before it will be back to the days of Nineteen Fourteen and have passed the high water mark prices. There will be no excuse for people not to include flowers in their weekly purchases. We do not go from one extreme to another quickly so our business will slowly increase, but increase it will, and, with our national advertising not confined to our large cities, but spread over the entire country, prosperity will reign.

By Philip Breitmeyer, Florist, Detroit:

Now that the world is free and we may expect everlasting peace, it would be well for us to cast aside all doubt as to the future—especially those associated with the florists business and the trade in general.

The florist business has stood the test as well if not better than any other business. It has been proved to all humanity that flowers are essential and necessary and, to quote Tennyson's words:

"Any man that walks the mead
In bud or blade or bloom, may find
A meaning suited to his mind."

We can have no better proof of this than the experience of the past few months.

Now that peace reigns once more it is only natural for us to assume that business will be blest as it was before the war. Already there are signs of activity in wedding decorations, and other occasions for which flowers are used. We are bound to see a continued increase and a more popular that ever usage for flowers.

Of course, there will undoubtedly be a scarcity in production, but I have no doubt that we will be able to serve all the anticipated trade providing we are careful and economical in the use of what we have. Then, too, there will be an additional supply of flowers grown now that the coal ban has been lifted. Considering all these blessings, I anticipate that in the near future everything will be automatically equalized.

By J. B. Hall, General Manager A. H. Hews & Co., Inc., Manufacturers of Flower Pots, Cambridge, Mass.:

We positively see no hindrance to a steadily increasing trade and, probably during the next twelve months, we will arrive at an abnormally large market. We believe this booming trade referred to will certainly enjoy special demands. We would think it wise for the commercial florist trade to commence immediately to plan for a tremendous additional business. We learn of this feeling from many of our customers, besides its being our personal opinion.

We believe the above conditions are warranted because we feel satisfied that the "Declaration of Peace" will mean the same if not more than the armistice. The florist trade should cheer loudly, for they have suffered for a long time and they certainly can see a fair way ahead if ever a clear way was seen. The obtaining of immediate requirements to carry on the industry may be a handicap for a while, but even these conditions we feel sure will soon clear up. There positively should be no fear of a florist going into the business heavily. Yours for peace forever.

By Roman J. Irwin, Dealer in Plants, Cuttings, Bulbs, Seeds, New York:

There is no doubt in my mind that our business has a great future in store for it and that always some good comes out of the worst tribulations.

We are going to live in a better world, more humane and thoughful, which will bring all mankind closer to nature and the more beautiful things in life. Hence, plants, flowers, etc., are going to find a great many more homes and admirers than ever before. Now is the right time for every florist to contribute all he can to "The National Publicity Campaign." In my travels florists have told me they have increased their business on plants and flowers from 15 per cent. to 25 per cent. since this advertising started.

It is up to every florist to get busy and he can work up a good business. It all depends upon the method of conducting his business and the energy he puts into his labor.

By J. F. Anderson, Fern Specialist, Short Hills, N. J.:

It seems reasonable to presume that after over four years of storm and gloom the sun should shine bright for some time to come, and our trade will no doubt enjoy a most prosperous period for many years. There will, no doubt, be numerous spasmodic reactions of short durations until the machinery of the world gets in good running order, but the extreme gloomy outlook has passed and, with universal joy dominating, we can look for new life in all peaceful industrious of the world; as flowers and plants are expressions of joy and good cheer, we should not fail to share much of the prosperity in view.

Many war industries consuming great quantities of fuel will, no doubt, be closed, and prospects are that our trade will be allowed their full quota of coal at perhaps a more reasonable price.

There will be a poor chance for a bachelor soldier in this country—and he will have to surrender to the feminine admirer—and therefore we may expect an unprecedented number of weddings and entertainments during the next couple of years, which should greatly benefit the florist trade in general. We should, in my opinion, produce all we can, and be prepared for better times, which we all look forward to. So "pack up your troubles in your old kit bag, and smile, smile, smile."

By Philip J. Foley, Pres., The Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago:

We feel that it is a little early yet to predict the future for our trade. This can better be done in the course of a month or so. Were I to attempt to predict the future, I would predict one of the best Winters, Springs and early Summers the florists have ever seen. As our two million boys come home from the front, there will be receptions, parties, dances, and weddings galore, and consequent flower buying, and I anticipate seeing our florists enjoy prosperity far in excess of what has been their lot so far since the beginning of the war.

We do not look for any considerable slump in prices on anything. Labor has taken the stand, as evidenced by the statement of Mr. Gompers recently that it expects to continue the same rates of wages that it has been getting. If that is the case, and the farmer's wheat prices are protected for another year, it is difficult for me to see where there will be any cut in wages or prices of commodities.

The building business will naturally pick up; in fact, already we have had inquiries. The use of steel being permitted in any quantity now, there is no reason why some of the long witheld construction work should not go ahead. It certainly is going ahead in other lines of building.

By Arthur A. Niessen of the Leo Niessen Co., Wholesale Commission Dealers in Flowers, Plants and Supplies, Philadelphia:

The national problem—or, should we say the world problem—today, is to change from a war basis to one of peace. To accomplish that with the least possible disturbance to commerce is indeed a great problem, which will tax the brains and courage of any nation.

Some men of affairs have tried to analyze the situation by making comparison with after-war conditions in the past—the Civil War, and the Spanish-American War; but in my estimation these are not a fair basis for comparison. We have never before experienced a world war, and we ar led to believe that we are approaching an entirely new er of Government, and the final conclusion of all the man problems is too large for any human mind correctly t estimate, or to venture any predictions. Business and th people are pausing, awaiting something of great momen to happen. But it is likely that nothing will happe other than a slow readjustment of business affairs to sounder and better basis.

Our business will require less adjustment than mo other lines. Our values have not materially increase so that no price adjustments are necessary, only such a take place from time to time due to supply and deman This season the supply is likely to be somewhat less tha last year, but with the restriction removed as to the con sumption of coal the supply will be greater than som anticipated.

There is not likely to be much building for the reaso that material is still high and will continue so for at least year. The past two seasons have not been sufficient encouraging for the grower to expand. Most of the lack the necessary funds. Next season some of the tempo arily abandoned greenhouse plants and those used for th growing of crops other than cut flowers will again becom a factor. There is no likehood, however, for a larg increased production during the next two years. Th is certain.

The demand is sure to increase with the country an the world at peace. Spending money for non-essentia (a word which should forever be banished in connectio with any legitimate business) has been considered u patriotic during the war. It is to be hoped that the peop will fully realize that the war is over, that there is no restri tion whatsoever against enjoying their former mode living. This or any other country will not prosper we confine our expenditure entirely to the bare necessiti of life. Life would not be worth living; the America public will have their pleasures and luxuries. Amon them, flowers will take their place. Some of the rich well-to-do have curtailed their purchases during th time of the war, but they will again buy flowers, as man and more than ever. There is still a great demand for s sorts of charity and war relief work, but I am sure th public will take care of them and have enough left ov to buy flowers.

The labor situation for the florist is bound to improv Before long some of your old employees will come bac and they will be glad to be back in our business. Th employment that they have taken up during the wa did not appeal to most of them. They do not wan to work for you at the wages previous to the war; that certain. The standard of wages will have to be higher, an rightly they should be. Compared with other lines of bus ness our men in the growing establishments have alway been poorly paid. And you can afford to pay more and t expect more in return. The growers particularly hav been taught a valuable lesson of efficiency. Greenhous that carried a force of ten men are being operated toda with half that number and some of them not skille labor. Still the work is being done and crops produce nearly as large as former years. These growers wi never go back to their old methods. This may not b the case in all establishments but it does hold good wit the majority of them. Flowers will be produced at smaller wage cost than before the war. Growers hav been taught economy in coal, in the use of all supplies— lesson that will bring its own reward.

Another condition which has been a great handicap t our business during the war is the matter of transportatio It is reasonable to expect that before long there will b a decided improvement in that direction. It is indee difficult to estimate the loss to our business due to lack prompt transportation. It is not the shipment tha is lost or damaged. That loss in itself is trifling, com pared with the amount of business that is lost on accoun of these conditions. Any improvement in the express se vice would result in a great benefit to our business.

Summing up the entire situation briefly, the reac justment that will take place in our business can onl be the means of improved conditions in general. A rea sonably increased demand is to be expected. Prices shoul be well maintained, and somewhat higher; the labor situa tion much improved, and the cost of material in th production of our commodity lower. Transportatio could not possibly become worse. I can see nothing t fear as to what the immediate future will bring for ou profession; only brighter and better days.

By T. P. Langhans, Secretary, Pittsburgh Cut Flowe Co., Wholesale Growers of Cut Flowers, Pitts burgh:

Answering yours of Nov. 15, relative to the questio as to what effect the signing of the armistice will mea to the trade, we venture to express these views.

We look forward to a record breaking Thanksgivin and Christmas trade and an early return to pre-wa conditions.

Social amenities, so long strained and of late so littl practiced, are about to come into their own again. Wit this resumption of business the retailer must not forge the buyer who acquired the appreciation of flowers durin the war period.

Thanksgiving

Are You Well Prepared

We have every reason to look forward to a brisk demand for the coming Thanksgiving celebration. If you are located near a large city where it is possible to obtain flowers inside of a few hours you may have no trouble in filling almost any order on short notice. The out of town florist, however, doesn't find it always as convenient to get stock so must prepare ahead of time. With cut flowers bringing stiff prices, it will be well this year in particular to lay in a fair supply of pot plants if they can be had at all. Not only flowering plants but palms, ferns and other decorative plants are well to have on hand. A few attractively filled baskets should be made a feature. Have enough of everything on hand. With Christmas following so closely anyone with glass at all can carry almost anything not sold for Thanksgiving along through December. An unusual supply of cut flowers may not only be hard to obtain but is expensive to have left on hand in case unsold after Thanksgiving Day, while flowering plants shouldn't really depreciate in value if taken care of. Look over all your requirements in accessories; have enough on hand. There never has been a time when as a nation we have had greater cause for thanksgiving than this year, having brought about the end of the slaughter of useful lives. So it looks as if more flowers than ever will be used this year. We should be well prepared to meet the demand.

Roses

Overwintering the Outdoor Sorts

No matter whether hybrid perpetuals or teas, the more soil you can get about the lower part of the plants for Winter protection the better. It beats all other coverings. Roses such as climbers or tall growing bush sorts laid down, covered with a good layer of soil followed by a layer of straw manure or leaves will come out in excellent shape by Spring, while those kept erect and bundled up with straw and burlap will suffer during a severe Winter more or less. The wood seems to shrivel up. In the case of teas, if you are located where 10 deg. to 20 deg. below zero is nothing uncommon, it almost pays to take the plants up and heel them in a deep frame, especially if you haven't very many and don't want to run a chance of having them Winter killed. Don't ever start covering until the plants are in a dormant state. Usually such frost as we get up to December doesn't hurt the plants in the least; in fact, does them good. Plants subjected to light freezing pass the Winter better than those bundled up while the leaves were still green on the the wood. If your plants intended for forcing are still outdoors get them into a frame without further delay. Don't wait until things freeze up solid. When once in a frame see to it that the soil in the pots is moist; nothing hurts Roses more than dry roots whether growing or while in a dormant state.

Carnations

Cultural Notes

Shorter days and more artificial heat are the rule now. Cloudy, dark weather prevailing more or less for the next eight weeks at least means that we must pay particular attention to the Carnations in the benches. Nothing will hurt the plants more than a 100 deg. temperature. It not only weakens the stock, produces a soft growth, but subjects the plants to all sorts of diseases. Carnations are cold house plants. Some sorts in order to make them pay best can stand 52 deg. or even a little higher, but as a rule a night temperature of 50 deg. for the next two months is the safest. During mild sunny weather with plenty of ventilation it matters little whether the houses run up to 60, 65 or even higher; but be careful during a spell of cloudiness. Watch the thermometer closely and avoid excess moisture in the houses. Keep the surface of the soil in the benches cultivated lightly. Don't soak the tops of the plants every time you apply water. By properly supporting the individual plants let all the sunshine possible get in between them; give the soil a chance to breathe. Whether or not you happen to get a big December crop if the plants are in good shape and not neglected from now on they will pay for themselves later on. A lot of trouble with diseased stock may be avoided with just a little care on the part of the grower. You can't afford to take chances if the plants are in good shape now.

Early Carnation Cuttings

With healthy stock in the benches there is usually plenty of material on the plants from now on to be used for cuttings and there is no better time to root them than during December and January. So if you are short on certain sorts of which you wish to work up considerable stock get busy with the cutting benches. On the other hand if you have plenty of plants on hand and intend growing only for your own requirements there is no use of starting now and carrying the young plants along for several months longer than is necessary. A Carnation cutting rooted during January or early February and kept moving afterward will make an ideal plant for benching the following July, while a plant grown from cutting rooted during December and allowed to suffer in a small pot during the Winter will require weeks out of doors later on to recover. By the time you are ready for benching such a plant won't be as good as the later propagated stocks. For present propagation the short side shoots or growth along the base of the flowering stems will, when removed need no trimming or cutting whatsoever. All you have to do is to place them in the sand. By the middle of December everyone will have roots. Nor is bottom heat required. Three rooted cuttings placed in a pot and kept shifted and shifted during the Winter will develop into fine bushy plants—just the thing to sell to your patrons for Summer flowering.

Evergreens

Nothing is more decorative for Winter than evergreens. The florist who has a chance to display them in front of his establishment should do so. It isn't that they have to consist of the more expensive sorts. A fine showing may be made with Norway Spruce, Arborvitæ and White Pine. Norway Spruce, ranging from 15in. up to 3ft. are the ideal thing from now until New Years. You may purchase them with roots on from the nurseryman very reasonably. A few properly displayed in neat tubs, windowboxes or pots in front of your entrance, whether store or greenhouse, will help to create business. Most likely you will have plenty of chance to dispose of them all for Christmas. While hardly ever there is a chance for these plants to make it worth while planting outdoors afterward, if you can manage to obtain some larger specimens well burlapped and not kept in a dry, hot residence too long, such will stand it and can be pulled through all right. It won't hurt for you to have on display a few nice specimens to take orders from. Are you pushing the sale of windowboxes filled with evergreens? Because times are not just what ought to be is the best reason for pushing. Keep it up and set a good example in the way you dress up in front of your own place. Don't crawl in a hole and wait for things to get back to where they were before the war.

National Publicity Campaign

With the war practically ended, and a reduction in the demand upon the purses of the public for war charities in sight, the so-called patriotic economies which have for some time been in evidence in a majority of the homes of the Nation should gradually disappear, among them the rather general discontinuance of the use of flowers.

If, as all who have followed the work of our publicity campaign and have been impressed with the beneficial results obtained through it are glad to admit, the movement of flowers has been greatly accelerated through the publicity gained in times when opposition to their use was everywhere painfully apparent, what should we expect when the people are free to enjoy the possession and use of flowers and plants without being subject to criticism for a supposed extravagance?

That our products are necessary and desirable in the home is a claim which we have vigorously supported in our magazine advertising. It is the purpose of our committees to keep before the public continuously the suggestion that flowers and plants brighten and cheer homes which otherwise would be all too dreary and colorless. It will also be noticed that we are emphasizing the adaptability of our products for gift purposes, and as mediums to express sentiment under any and all conditions. Our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has, to use a common expression, caught on, evidence of this coming to us almost daily. Only yesterday we received from our Washington representative a cartoon sketch clipped from the Washington Star, depicting a cartoon hero nonplussed at the exhorbitant prices a fruit dealer demanded for a hospital gift, and his ultimate decision to use flowers instead. The newspaper mentioned was only one of a large syndicate of papers using this cartoon.

Florists who are not displaying our slogan are making a great mistake. A subscriber in Texas ordering from our promotion bureau two additional glass signs says, "We think they are fine and bring more business."

Who shall say that our Christmas advertisement appearing in national magazines of enormous circulation will not induce many who cannot make up their minds as to the nature of their anticipated Christmas offering to "Say it with Flowers?" Doubtless were it possible many recipients of presents more or less useless or unserviceable would willingly exchange them for a handsome basket of flowers. Hardly an occasion could be suggested when flowers might be declared unsuitable for gift purposes.

As it is necessary that the public be made to look upon our product in this light there is only one medium for the accomplishment of this—publicity properly conducted. The magazine advertising the committees have arranged since the beginning of the year has proved conclusively that the results we are after are sure of attainment. Not only is it conceded that the funds available have been well expended, but the committees are satisfied it would be to our advantage to double, or even treble our expenditures in the coming year, so great is the benefit sure to result.

It is, however, up to the trade to say whether the necessary fund will be forthcoming. We are still short of about $5000 to complete our plants for 1918, and are relying upon those who have not yet turned in a contribution to make up this sum. Is it possible that among 10,000 or more florists who have not subscribed, and who would not miss the small ratio to be expected of them, there is not sufficient interest in our movement to insure the speedy collection of the small sum required? The committees are waiting for an answer.

If any information further than that which has been supplied is needed, it is cheerfully available on application to the secretary.

Forcing Hydrangeas

We have a lot of well ripened Hydrangea Otaska. To get part of them in flower for Easter and the rest for Memorial Day at what date can they be started with a temperature of between 50 and 55 deg.?—A. V., Conn.

—Bring the Hydrangeas wanted in bloom for Easter into the greenhouse directly after New Year's, and those for Memorial Day about Feb. 15. J. H. S.

Seeds of Rosa Multiflora

Kindly tell me the best way to clean the seed of Rosa multiflora. When is the best time to sow the seed, Fall or Spring?—A. W. B.

If the hips or pods containing the seeds are very hard and dry it would be well to bury them in moist loam or sand for several weeks. Watch them and as soon as they are soft enough to be broken open rub them through a screen to take out the seeds. The seed may be sown at any time, as it may take several months for it to germinate and the young plants will get the benefit of the good growing Spring months. Sow the seed in flats in good loam to which a little sand and leaf mold has been added. Look out for moisture conditions, insect pests, mice or any other cause that would induce failure.

EBER HOLMES.

'Mum Petals Turn Brown

Can you tell me what is the trouble with the samples of 'Mums I am sending you under separate cover? The plants are perfectly healthy but the crown of the bloom turns brown, as you will note from the specimens enclosed. I bought these for the variety Roman Gold.—L. C., N. J.

—The Chrysanthemum flowers in question are ruined by the attacks of insects, a microscopical examination showing both thrips and red spiders among the petals, either of which insects will soon spoil the 'Mum flowers. The warm weather of this season would encourage these pests, but the original source of the trouble is insufficient syringing of the plants during the Summer, and perhaps the spraying with insecticides was not followed up regularly. There is little that can be done now for the cure of this trouble. W.

European Notes

(Report date of Nov. 1)

October finished up in a pleasanter hion than was expected, and we are e more able to resume threshing and nting operations. As regards the former are sadly disappointed in the crops Cabbage, more especially the smooth ved varieties. Savoy Cabbages, on the ner hand, and the more vigorous varties of Brussels Sprouts are yielding ceptionally well, and supplies of both e fairly abundant. It is quite the reerse with Kale and Cauliflower, both of hich are extremely short and will be ry dear.

This is especially true of the northern own and smaller varieties of Cauliwer such as Erfurt, Snowball, Walcren and Early Paris; the larger and er Mediterranean kinds have done ch better, and prices of these will be sier than last year. It is somewhat a surprise to us that the demand from ur side for such varieties as Early Alers, Giant Prinus and Ne Plus Ultra so limited. Well grown, they are ry hard to beat, either in quality and vor. The Early Italian Giant, better own by its British name of Veitch's utumn Giant, produces solid heads of reproachable color and quality and lly 3 ft. in circumference, under good ltivation, anywhere between Naples d Liverpool and would doubtless do en better with you.

Carrot is proving even better than our st sanguine expectations and there ll in all probability be a small surplus. s the seed is well developed this will very acceptable for the "filling up" ders which had to be turned down durg the past four years. It will also prove by keeping.

As was stated above, we are now able resume our planting operations, and hile it is admittedly very late for bianials we hope for the best. It will be ell for our friends to prepare themlves for another short supply of Cabge and other brassicas next season.

New York Seed Trade

Especially since the great war has ome to a close, bulbs have again become ne leading feature in seed store sales. he demand from commercial growers as ell as that from private estates, is more ctive, both being influenced, no doubt, y the hopes of more fuel, and the comercial growers being stimulated to buy y the belief that cut flowers this Winer will bring remunerative prices. There s now a shortage of both Dutch and rench bulbs of nearly all kinds and varieties. Some relief in the case of the utch bulbs is hoped for through the arival of a steamer, now expected daily, having on board a few thousand cases, at east, of Dutch bulbs.

Frank C. Woodruff of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, 82-84 Dey st., in speaking of the seed situation, says that from present appearances prices for seeds will be stable for the coming season, but in all probability easier the following year. He is receiving already urgent inquiries for seeds from abroad, but as yet no actual sales have been made for shipment.

Wm. M. Hunt & Co., 37 Warren st., report a good season in sales of Dutch and French bulbs.

Roman J. Irwin, 108 West 28th st., recently spent two days at the establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., with Wallace R. Pierson looking over the large number of 'Mums of many varieties now in bloom, which he says were well worth the trip to see. He reports that business is brisk and that there is a large demand for Dutch and French bulbs and cold storage Lilium giganteum, also for Winter flowering Sweet Pea seeds. He succeeded in delivering 200 cases of Lilium giganteum direct from Japan to his Canadian customers though he could not bring them into this country.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 41-43 Barclay st., reports a busy week on Dutch bulb orders requiring night work, but that it has now caught up with these orders. It is still meeting with a large demand for all forcing bulbs. With bulb stocks practically exhausted, if the long expected ship should arrive at an early date with Dutch bulbs, it would help the shortage greatly, but that if the arrival is delayed much longer, the value of the bulbs will be greatly diminished.

Benj. S. Brown, of Brown Bag Filling Machine Co., Fitchburg, Mass., has been staying a few days this week at the Hotel Biltmore, in connection with the work entailed in the transfer of the machines of this company, which were requisitioned last June by the Government. Mr. Brown reports that this release by the Government has now put the company back to normal conditions, under which it will be able to take care of its trade with the seedsmen.

Chicago Seed Trade

Local seedsmen who handle French and Holland bulbs, are confronted, not by the difficulty of getting orders, but of getting sufficient stock to fill orders already booked. It is probable that there was never such a small supply accompanied by so strong a demand, not only from the trade, but from the public. Under normal conditions many florists and dealers usually import their own stock, but owing to the difficulties of importation this season failed to do so depending on the seedsmen and jobbing houses. In this they were doomed to either complete or partial disappointment.

Local buyers, who usually depend for their annual supply of bulbs from their neighborhood florists and failed to do so were turning to the seedsmen as the last resort. This has greatly increased the retail demand. The supply of Dutch Hyacinths is better than that of any other item in the bulb trade. The greatest shortage is in Narcissus with the exception of Paperwhites, of which it was thought at one time there might be a surplus. Recent demand has, however, dispelled any fear of a surplus. They are holding firm at $23. While the price may seem staggering at first to buyers when the increased cost of transportation and war tax is added, dealers do not make more than an ordinary profit.

D. C. P. Roy, who started a seed store about two years ago in Lake Forest, Ill., filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States Court on Nov. 7. His liabilities are given as $5,359.33 and assets $2,755.61.

Retail trade at Vaughan's Seed store is strong owing to delayed shipments. The wholesale department is well cleaned up with the exception of Paperwhite Narcissus, Tulips and storage Lilies. Leonard H. Vaughan was in New York the past week where he attended the seed trade meeting.

Onion sets for prompt shipment are selling in Chicago at $2 per bu. for yellow; $2 to $2.20 for red and $2.50 to $2.75 for white. Quotations for January shipment are higher.

Western Seedsmen Meet

The Western Seedsmen's Association held a conference in the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., on Nov. 9, for the report of which we are indebted to the Mel. L. Webster Co. The following seedsmen attended and represented the firms indicated:

Harnden Seed Co., G. and W. W. Harnden and C. C. Andrews, Kansas City, Mo.; J. G. Peppard Seed Co., J. G. Peppard, Kansas City, Mo.; Mangelsdorf Seed Co., Fred W. Mangelsdorf, Atchison, Kans.; Northrup, King & Co., A. G. Bather and C. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; Sioux City Seed Co., H. A. Johns and G. W. Cummings, Sioux City, Iowa; Mel. L. Webster Co., Mel. L. and H. P. Webster, Independence, Iowa and Waco, Texas; The J. C. Robinson Seed Co., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Condon Bros., J. R. Condon, Rockford, Ill.; Henry Field Seed Co., W. W. Pitzer and A. M. Eldridge, Shenandoah, Iowa; Missouri Seed Co., Thomas and T. J. Tobin, Kansas City, Mo.

H. W. Buckbee, John T. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; W. H. Small Co., Chester C. Cox, Evansville, Ind.; Barteldes Seed Co., F. W. and Otto A. Barteldes, and Max F. Wilhelm, Lawrence, Kans.; Griswold Seed & Nursery Co., W. B. Griswold, Lincoln, Neb.; Nebraska Seed Co., Chas. W. Jackson and H. C. Windheim, Omaha, Neb.; Wood, Stubbs & Co., by W. P. Stubbs, Louisville, Ky.

Iowa Seed Co., M. Kurtzweil, Des Moines, Iowa.; N. J. Burt & Co., N. S. Burlington, Iowa.; Ross Bros. Seed Co., L. B. McCausland, Wichita, Kan.; Adam Seed Co., M. J. Whaley and E. C. Luck, Kansas City, Mo.; W. H. Small & Co., Guy Purcell, Evansville, Ind.; Rudy-Patrick Seed Co., Roy Edwards and Howard S. Patrick, Kansas City, Mo.; Milwaukee Seed Co., J. W. Kent, Milwaukee, Wis.

President H. A. Johns opened the meeting with an urgent appeal to all seedsmen to help the Government increase food production for 1919 and warned members to avoid any semblance of profiteering during the coming months. He said that no industry had been more loyal to the Government than the seed trade and he was proud to be one of them. Mr. Jackson, formerly of Vaughan's Seed Store, who was for many months a prisoner in Germany, was present and gave a very interesting account of his experience in prison. The consensus of opinion was that peace will create a greater demand for foodstuffs than war time and that with the consequent maintenance of war prices for food, we can look for more war gardens than ever before.

An afternoon session was held particularly for those interested in field seeds. Guy Purcell of N. W. Small & Co., Evansville, Ind., presided.

To Help French Horticulture

The American Committee for Devastated France has received authorization for its work by cable from the French Government. The headquarters of the committee are at No. 16 E. 39th st., New York City. In a statement concerning its activities the committee is quoted in part as follows:

For food production the committee will distribute seeds, plants, fruit trees, fertilizers, live stock, agricultural implements, etc. Farm laborers will be supplied in part by the army of America. Some of this service will take the form of a gift to the farmer, some the form of a loan to him. A limited number of model chicken farms will be supported and also agricultural experimental and demonstrating stations.

American Seed Trade Association

The executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association met at the Hotel Bristol, New York, Nov. 15, and selected Chicago for the next convention city, date to be announced later. There were present besides the president and secretary, Messrs. Earl, White, E. L. Page and L. H. Vaughan of the committee, and Messrs. S. F. Willard, Guelf, Lee and David Don on invitation. A tentative program was arranged and association finances discussed, which will lead to an amendment to the Bylaws being offered at the convention.

Buys Canary Island Onion Seed Crop

(Consul George K. Stiles, Teneriffe, Sept. 18.)

The second largest crop of Canary Island Onion seed ever shipped to the United States has just ended its movement toward American ports, large final shipments bringing the 1918 purchases by American buyers to a final value of $98,458. Of this amount $2548 worth was shipped to Porto Rico and the remaining $95,910 to the United States proper. This amount has been exceeded but once, when in 1917 $137,289 of of Onion seed was taken by American buyers.

Conditions have left an unusually large excess of seed on hand with the growers here, and ungraded seed was being offered on this market as low as 20c. per pound, without finding takers. As a result many growers are now figuring on a decidedly reduced planting for 1919. This past season showed exceptionally good results for the white or "crystal wax" variety of seed, while the yellow and red grades showed a yield which was hardly up to the average.

The threatened delays in shipments due to the uncertain conditions governing the movements of Spanish steamers, resulted in sailings sufficient to permit of the shipment of approximately 80 per cent. of the orders. The last shipment via Cuba, this being the preferred and more rapid route, was made on Aug. 4, 1918, since which time the Canary Island shipments to the United States, via Cuba or Porto Rico, have been completely interrupted.

Many inquiries have been received at this office from American Onion seed buyers as to the development in this trade during recent years. The following figures give the value of the shipments to the United States during the last five crop seasons: 1914, $43,293; 1915, $40,828; 1916, $84,387; 1917, $137,289, and 1918, $98,458.—From Commerce Reports.

Culture of Calla Elliottiana

Can you give me some information on raising Calla Elliottiana? I purchased a dozen bulbs from a reliable firm about a year ago and have tried different soils and temperatures but have never succeeded in getting a bloom. Plants seem to grow nicely until they have two or three leaves and then rot off at the ground. Was in Bristol, Pa., last year and saw some that a grower there had; they looked just like mine; he said he had had no success with them but thought the bulbs had been improperly cured.—E.A.A., N. J.

—Calla Elliottiana bulbs should be thoroughly dried and cured before potting up; if there is a soft spot in the bulb, it should be cleaned off and allowed to dry.

The bulbs are usually planted in 5in. or 6in. pots, given some water, placed under bench for two or three weeks, in a temperature of 55 deg. until the roots are formed; then bring to light and give 60 deg. to 65 deg., which can be increased after the bud is formed. With this treatment bulbs should produce flowers in 12 to 14 weeks. Unfortunately this bulb is subject to more or less rot and has to be handled quite carefully and kept in a dry, warm place. I. S. Hendrickson.

Restoring Speech and Appetite

In The Florist's Exchange of Nov. 9, page 762, we published a story by Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., related when he was a resent visitor at a meeting of the New York Florists' Club, in which he made a statement as to the stimulating effect of flowers on the mentality of a wounded soldier which was really startling. William C. Gloeckner of Albany, N. Y., sent this story from The Exchange to a paper of his city, the Times-Union, and they published it. E. C. Vick, Garden manager of the New York Sun, reprinted the story in that paper. Mr. Vincent's narrative is one of actual fact. It is just the kind of story that every newspaper would seize on with avidity and we recommend our readers to take this clipping out of the paper and send it to their home papers; it is not at all too late. It adduces one of the strongest of reasons why the florist's business should be looked upon as an educational factor in reconstruction work in addition to its many other benevolent sides.

Giant California Hybrid Amaryllis

With the shortage of many of the customary Easter Plants these Giant Flowered Amaryllis which are more easily grown in pots than Easter Lilies and are far more showy, should prove a valuable addition among flowering plants for late Winter, early Spring and Easter use.

We have been familiar with and have watched this particular strain for a number of years; we have not only seen it growing with the originators, but tried them out in pot-culture in our own houses. The flowers are of enormous size: flowers with full rounded broad petals 10 inches in diameter are not unusual, and 5 to 6 flowers to a stem, frequently two stems being pushed to the bulb. In color there are selfs and stripes, ranging from the purest white ground color with rose or red markings to rich orange-scarlet, cherry, crimson and maroon and all with a satin-like lustre, which in the deeper shades shines as though burnished.

Give these a trial, as we feel certain you will be pleased with the result.

Price: Extra Heavy Selected Bulbs, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100, $400.00 per 1000. 50 supplied at 100 rates, 250 at 1000 rates.

The above prices are intended for the Trade only.

Since the epidemic has subsided, some of the florists have experienced a drop in business, but others say they are still kept busy. At any rate, during the past month or so, all did a better business than ever before. Thus they have an unusually good start for the Winter season.

E. C. Eichling, sales manager of Kerr's, has returned to work. Mr. Walker has also recovered from his illness. The store has experienced a slight drop in business from what it was during the epidemic, but is doing well and is getting some fine flowers from the R. C. Kerr Co. Visitors at the store during the week were Clif Prunner of Poehlmann Bros., and Charles Gullette of Charles E. Gullette and Sons.

The Houston Hort. Soc. has had a hard time trying to meet lately, but expects a rousing meeting next Monday evening at Kerr's. Now that peace is in sight, the question of making Houston the Crape Myrtle city will be pushed so that when our men return in the Spring and Summer they will find the streets, avenues and parks gay with bright color to greet them.

Florists, nurserymen and landscape men in Houston felt the death of E. E. Stone, reported killed in battle, as a great shock. They feel that Mr. Stone's memory is deserving of great honor. He went forth for his country when he did not have to go, leaving a prosperous business and disregarding his exemption as to age.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses says that business still continues brisk with him. He has a number of fine 'Mums in bloom at present.

C. L. B.

Montgomery, Ala.

Business for year ending Oct. 1 showed an increase of nearly 50 per cent. over the year preceding. There was no perceptible let up during the entire year; you might say it was one continual drive. At no time was there an excess of flowers; indeed at times it was an impossibility to fill all orders, particularly wholesale ones. The shortage of labor compelled florists in outlying towns to curtail the growing end of their business so they were obliged to procure stock wherever and whenever they could.

October opened with a rush. Orders continued to come in with only a limited amount of stock on hand, so a pro rata supply was resorted to.

Roses were good and after the Aster season closed were the most plentiful and brought good prices. Recognizing the increased cost of production, an advance was made. Funeral designs from $3 up; sprays $2 up, and a decrease in the size of the designs; trimmings extra. Rosemont has a record of 900 funeral orders in 20 days, many of the higher class. This with a small force required hard work and long hours.

At the greenhouses with nearly all the force drafted compelled the employment of negro women. The lack of experienced male help was a serious handicap.

Monday, Nov. 11, was an anxious one to the Rosemont force, as it was arranged that upon the confirmation of the signing of the armistice such a demonstration should take place as never was known in this Southern country. Accordingly at 2 a.m. of the 12th news came that the moment had arrived. With five funerals all hands rushed the work out and the entire force took a bee line for the greenhouses and proceeded to grab everything in sight. By seven o'clock they landed at Taylor Field, the aviation grounds, with over 15,000 Roses and sprays of 'Mums.. All the machines were warmed up and within five minutes 56 airplanes left for the city, which they encircled, dropping flowers instead of bombs. This demonstration lasted one hour. Citizens obtained these flowers and will preserve them for mementoes.

The Mothers' League composed of women having one or more sons in France, and wives having husbands at the front, gathered at nine o'clock at the south end of the Capitol, with armfuls of flowers. These soon grew to a great mound at the foot of the flag pole, while volunteers from the fire department raised ladders and decorated the pole with designs and made up pieces intended to honor the boys over there. The scenes otherwise are indescribable. Everybody was trying to outdo everybody else. The jollification lasted from 2 a.m. until 12 o'clock midnight.

The Paterson boys certainly did themselves proud as all during the Summer they contributed every flower they could spare to the hospitals at the camps here, and wound up with this grand demonstration from the clouds. As a sentimental stunt it was a success, while it beats any other form of advertising.

Rosemont Gardens deserve unqualified praise for the liberality they have displayed in not only furnishing thousands of plants to Camp Sheridan, Ala., for beautifying the grounds surrounding the buildings of the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Officers' headquarters, base hospital and the aviation camps, but furnishing cut flowers as well to the hospital gratis.

Tuskegee, Ala.

The writer, on a flying visit to this place to inspect the stock of the Oak Grove greenhouses, found everything in apple pie order. Stock grown for wholesale was in fine condition and every one was busy filling orders. No shortage of help was seen as it being the home of Booker T. Washington Institute, plenty was available. They do a large business in young stock and have had a run on rooted cuttings, which are turned out by the thousands. A considerable addition to their grounds was made and some new greenhouses in the near future is contemplated.

W. C. Cook.

Louisville, Ky.

Business with the florists is back to something like normal, as likewise are health conditions.

Peace Celebration

Monday, Nov. 11, will go down in Louisville history as a red letter day. Practically everything in the city was closed during the afternoon, and almost all business stopped in the morning, and the celebration continued until after midnight. The flower shops generally were closed well before noon; the excited crowds on the streets were not interested in flowers, and it was next to impossible to hold clerks or even proprietors inside the stores.

According to reports circulated from Washington the men quartered at Camp Taylor, Louisville, will shortly be released and sent back to their homes. It also appears doubtful whether the camp will be continued at all, as it is on leased ground, and will probably be one of the first to be closed. Whether construction work on Camp Knox, Stithton, will be completed or not, is another interesting question. However, Louisville has strong hopes of retaining both these army posts in peace times, as it will mean a great deal to the retail merchants.

The Kentucky Society of Florists has not held a meeting for several weeks on account of health conditions, but will probably get back into harness in December.

August Baumer was re-elected sergeant-at-arms of the Louisville Optimists' Club at the annual meeting held on Nov. 13. Mr. Baumer has been one of the most active members of this organization since its formation.

The F. Walker Co. has been doing attractive advertising, featuring Fall planting.

While the demand for flowers is not as keen as it has been, the florists are still having a little trouble in securing necessary varieties.

Lecturing Under Difficulties

The Gardeners' Club held a well attended meeting on the evening of Nov. 11, the first since the influenza epidemic subsided. Robert Pyle of West Grove, Pa., gave his beautiful lecture on "Roses and Rose Gardens at Home and Abroad," which was listened to with much interest notwithstanding the hilarity on the streets. The town was in an uproar and bubbling over with jubilance on account of the armistice news.

It had been the intention of the club to have a full house to listen to Mr. Pyle so 500 complimentary tickets had been sent out. When the committee realized the condition there was some apprehension of the advisability of trying to have a meeting and then whether a lecture could be heard if the people did come. But a good number came and enjoyed the pictures which carried them from the Pacific Coast to the Bagatelle Gardens of Paris. Mr. Pyle gave interesting and valuable information on Rose growing.

S. S. Pennock of Philadelphia gave an optimistic talk. The Fuel Administration ruling modifying the coal restrictions order has helped to ease the minds of the florist but it has come too late to allow the working up of stock to fill the houses. We are thankful to report that throughout all the death caused by the epidemic the club did not lose a member.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Harry Schelter, formerly chauffeur for Geo. Angermueller of St. Louis, Mo., writes from France that all is well with him.

Harold A. Hyde, of Watsonville, Cal., according to word received by his father, H. A. Hyde, has received a commission as first lieutenant in the Army.

Arthur K. Rupp, whose picture we show, is the son of our old friend, John F. Rupp of Ruparka, Shiremanstown, Pa., one of the oldest subscribers for The Florists' Exchange. This son only recently landed "over there" after having been in training at Camp Lee, Va., so that, having been one of the last ones to cross, his chances for a march to the Rhine are very good.

Ralph Merritt Hitchcock, son of F. C. Hitchcock of New Rochelle, N. Y., is in the aviation service at Camp Morrison, Morrison, Va. He is but 19 years of age and has been earnestly trying to do his bit, having purchased bonds and Thrift Stamps and contributed to the Red Cross. He was disappointed in not being able to enlist before but, unfortunately, his father was seriously ill for three months and so it was required that he look after things at home.

Arthur K. Rupp, son of John F., Shiremanstown, Pa., "Over There" at bayonet drill

We are glad to learn that Arthu Henry Wors, son of C. W. Wors, S Louis, Mo., has so far recovered as t be able to get around on crutches. H is now at the London Military Hospita Joseph Wors, we regret to learn, is i the U. S. Naval Hospital at Bres France, where he is slowly convalescin from an accidental wound in his le foot, received while on guard duty. Cha Wors, Jr., a third son of Mr. Wors, at Camp Kearney, Cal., from where h will shortly receive his honorable di charge.

Wintering Seedling Perennials

I have some seedlings of hybrid Aqu legia and Digitalis which have only the first and second sets of true leaves. Th seed was sown the latter part of last Jun but because of dry weather it failed germinate readily. The seedlings are situated that I cannot build a coldfram over them and I feel that they would n stand transplanting to a frame. Wou they come through the Winter succes fully with a covering of Corn fodder? so, how deep should the covering be a when should I apply it? I also ha some Delhinium hybrids Gaillardias a Lupines in the field; what protecti should I give them?—H. D. Y., Pa.

—First cover the seedling perennials garden or field 2in. to 3in. deep wi straw or meadow hay, or the stra part of stable manure, and above it h closely two or three inches of Co stalks. If the Corn stalks have been c into short pieces by being put through fodder cutter. Corn stalks alone to t depth of 4in. to 6in. will do, but the should be no small ears of Corn left the fodder to attract mice. J. H. S.

New Rose Premier

A Cross Between Ophelia and Russell

It has the stiff, thornless stem and quick, free growth of Ophelia, with most beautiful dark green foliage, similar to American Beauty in arrangement and size of leafage.

The habit is perfect for a forcing rose; the breaks come quickly and are of fine length, every one producing a flower, even the shorter stems giving fine quality of bloom.

The flowers are of Russell type and hold a clear, pure shade of Rose-pink throughout the year; lighter in Summer; deep rose-pink in cooler weather. A dozen blooms make an imposing bunch.

Its freedom of bloom and quick succession of crops make this a most productive forcing variety.

Like Ophelia and Columbia, it is deliciously fragrant.

It is an easy propagator and also grafts readily.

Absolutely distinct and a splendid addition to American varieties.

COLUMBIA

INTRODUCED LAST SEASON AND HAS MADE GOOD

Color: True pink, about the shade of a perfect Shawyer, deepening, as it opens, to glowing pink.

Habit: This variety sends up quickly numerous stiff stems, which are of good length without pinching.

Size: It is one of the big Roses, and is as lasting as Russell and as full of petals. An exceptionally fine Summer Rose.

Plants for the Holidays

Prepare now for Christmas. There is going to be a big demand for plants this year. The war is over and there is joy in every home; your customers will want fine plants to decorate their festive boards and to make presents. There has been a scarcity of help the past year and many growers had to close some of their houses; a great many places closed up for good which, no doubt, will make good stock scarce. We have a very fine stock of plants and will give you good value for your money. We recommend the placing and shipping of orders early, as there is no telling what the weather or railroad conditions will be later on.

CYCLAMEN. We have a very fine lot of this choice Christmas plant in 5½-in. pots, in bud and bloom.

POINSETTIAS. 4-in. pots, $3.60 per doz.; 5½-in. pots, tall, 2 flowers to a plant, $6.00 and $9.00 per doz.

SOLANUM. Jerusalem Cherries. Bushy plants, full of berries, 6-in. pots, $7.20 and $9.00 per doz. 7-in. pots, very heavy, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

PRIMULA Obconica. 5-in. pots, $4.00 per doz.

BEGONIA Luminosa. 5-in. pots, $4.00 per doz.

FERNS. Our ferns are very fine this year, and we will give you good stock.

NEPH. Scottii and Teddy Jr. 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in. pots, $7.20 per doz.; 7-in. pots, $12.00 per doz.; 8-in. pots, $1.50 each; 12-in. tub fern, $3.00 each.

NEPH. Norwood. 6-in. pots, $7.20 per doz.

NEPH. Smithi. 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

PTERIS Wilsoni. 3 plants in 6-in. pan, very fine, $4.20 per doz. 4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.

HOLLY FERNS. 4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.

ASPLENIUM Nidus Avis (Bird's Nest Fern). 5-in. pots, fine stock, $9.00, $12.00, $15.00 per doz.

FICUS Elastica (Rubber Plant). 6-in. pots, $7.20 and $9.00 per doz.; 7-in. pots, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz., extra fine.

ASPARAGA Plumosa. 3-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

DISH FERNS. 2½-in. pots, the best varieties, $6.00 per 100.

HARDY IVIES. Fine plants, staked, 5-in. pots, $3.60 per doz., 6-in. pots, $6.00 doz.

To save express charges, please mention if pots are wanted.

Middle Atlantic States

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Next meeting Pittsburgh Florists' Club, Dec. 5, at its regular meeting place.

For some reason there seems to be a scarcity of good 'Mums, especially in pink and white. There are plenty of good Bonnaffon and yellow Chadwick, but we expect them to be over soon. By Thanksgiving there may not be any left for the trade as the warm weather has brought the crop on sooner than expected. Pompons in all colors in good supply find ready sale. The demand has been exceptionally heavy for the past three weeks. Roses in heavy supply find ready sale, especially the longer stemmed grades. Columbia, Ophelia, Killarney and Russell are about the best received. Carnations are increasing in supply every day but still hold up well in price. Lilies are scarce but we look for larger crops soon. American Beauty Roses have little demand and can be moved at only reduced prices. Violets are also hard to move as the street men are about the only ones who can sell them. Valley and orchids are in light supply and demand. Greens of all kinds are plentiful, especially ferns, Galax and Leucothoe. All the flower stores were closed Monday, Nov. 11, to help celebrate the signing of the armistice terms. Florists all look forward to a larger and better business now that the war is practically over and the growers are allowed full fuel supply.

'Mum Show

The 'Mum show at the Schenly Park conservatories was opened to the public on Sunday, Nov. 10. The show was delayed on account of health conditions, and many flower lovers were disappointed. A number of the blooms were taken out because they had flowered too soon, due to the warm weather. On the opening day there were about 8000 blooms in perfect condition and thousands of visitors viewed the exhibits.

The McCallum Co. is cutting especially fine Mrs. M. R. Morgan 'Mums.

'Mums at the Club Meeting

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Tuesday evening, Nov. 5, in the North Side Carnegie Hall. It was 'Mum night and we were greeted by one of the best exhibitions of these flowers ever shown at the club. The club decided to hold future meetings at its present meeting place; judging from remarks made by members a good attendance is promised during the coming season. F. B. Frauenfelder of 3300 Fleming ave. was proposed for membership by Wm. Moore and Wm. Bonsey, H. Etherington , C. L. Meyer, Noah Aldrige of Finleyville, L. Lighthauser, B. F. Engle, Rochester, Pa., Herbert Beckert, Millvale, and B. W. Smith, were proposed by E. J. McCallum.

The exhibits aroused much interest. A vase of a yellow seedling grown by Manus Curran of Sewickley, was generally pronounced the largest ever shown at the club. It is a cross between Turner and Odessa. One of the blooms measured 11in. across and about 34in. around. Mr. Curran said that he did not want the seedling passed on for points this year as he expected better results next year. He intends to name the bloom "Sewickley." He also had a collection of pompons, among them a pink and a white giving promise of becoming good commercial varieties. Wm. Thompson showed a good collection, including many standard varieties, also a fine lot of pompons. Jas. Murphy had an exhibit of well known sorts, and James Stewart also exhibited. Herman Roff's collection included, besides standard sorts, pompons and a bush of Garza almost 6ft. high. Schenly Park had an exhibit of the large flowering kinds as well as many varieties of pompons. The awards were as follows: First class certificate to Manos Curran for his new seedling; cultural certificate for collection of 'Mums to Wm. Thompson, Jas. Murphy, Jas. Stewart, Herman Roff and Schenly Park, with a vote of thanks to all exhibitors.

The next meeting will be held on Dec. 5. Christmas plants and flowers will be the subject.

Topics in Brief.

Pete Hofman of New Galilee, Pa., had one 200ft. house, his best paying, planted in Ivory, Razer and Chieftain 'Mums. He cut 28,000 Ivory, 1200 Razer and 1500 Chieftain during the past three weeks.

John Kiel of East Liverpool, Ohio, has one house of Turner 'Mums, the finest seen in this section. They were planted before the roof was on and have been without heat. He used the entire crop at his retail store and was able to get high prices for all sold. Many plants had three and four blooms of perfect flowers.

Miss Gertrude Becker, of the McCallum Co., has the deepest sympathy of the trade in the loss of her mother, who died suddenly, Nov. 15.

Wm. Faulk has been assisting his brother Walter during the rush of the past few weeks.

Jos. H. Seaman has accepted a position with his former employer, the Alpha Floral Co. of East Liberty. Many of the boys in the flower business who were compelled to get into "essential" industries, are now getting back to their former positions. N. McC.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Stock was not in a heavy demand last week and prices showed a tendency to lower slightly. White and pink 'Mums are rather scarce but the yellow Bonnaffons are in good supply. Shipments of Roses are not heavy and the demand is not brisk. Some Snapdragons were received last week.

The propaganda of the Government for early Christmas shopping is being spread by local merchants and will likely help early holiday trade at the Buffalo flower shops.

United War Work Drive

Buffalo florists, headed by W. J. Palmer, went "over the top" in the United War Work Workers campaign. In the drive to help "keep the soldier boys smiling" Mr. Palmer was ably assisted by Messrs. Anderson, Eiss, Sandiford, Wiese, Schoenhut and Sieners.

Now that everything points to an after the war reconstruction, conservative people of Buffalo—the wealthy classes—who became accustomed to practising the strictest economy, are patronizing the local flower shops. For example, on the day the armistice was officially proclaimed, many of this class bought flowers liberally as "peace offerings" and have been regular patrons ever since.

It is expected that this Winter will see a revival of the social functions cancelled during the past year and a half.

As a result of the armistice what will be the industrial and financial conditions in Buffalo? This question is being discussed by local florists. Some say that the war contracts, amounting to millions, held by Buffalo plants, will be gradually cancelled and that there will be no industrial upheaval following the immediate discharge of thousands of munition workers.

Even in face of the foregoing opinion the Curtiss aeroplane plant has already laid off several thousand employees on account of stopping war production. It is expected that many other local plants that have been handling war orders will reduce their payrolls considerably.

However, there are bright aspects to the post bellum question. For example, hundreds of local plants, which make articles not considered essential to winning the war were forced to curtail production. With the coming of peace these factories will be reaching out for men. Building and municipal improvements were also held up during the war. A boom that will come in these lines will keep plenty of "flower money" in circulation, it is said. Generally speaking, Buffalo florists say that no matter what their handicaps may be during the reconstruction period, these will never equal what they willingly bore in war time.

The comfort that flowers can give before and after the war has been frequently demonstrated at Lafayette sq., Buffalo, where there is a bronze tablet bearing the names of local men killed in France. One woman goes every day to the square to place flowers before the tablet. None of her relatives is in the list. She says the floral offerings are for the sake of her two sons who are in the Army. Another woman recently put a bouquet of Carnations at the base of the tablet. She explained that her boy's name was in the list of heroes and that she was happy "that he died as he did."

Save coal by burning it with wood, is the advice of the New York State College of Forestry, which is assisting the Buffalo fuel administration in its conservation plans. Householders as well as florists have been asked to try this method this Winter.

JOSEPH A. MCGUIRE.

Lancaster, Pa.

Walter Hammond reports that, although retail business is quiet, he is congratulating himself on the fact that he has made a little money in spite of the war conditions, and that he is still in business instead of giving up as so many others have done, most of whom, he thinks will be sorry after things get back to normal conditions.

The Help Problem

H. A. Schroyer, like a great many others, is having trouble getting the proper help at the greenhouses, but is looking forward to the day when this condition will be reversed. At the store business as usual about describes the situation.

Fred Ritchy reports having secured one man to help him out and is also looking forward to a changed condition of the labor market, when it will not be necessary to run an establishment with two men and himself.

The writer has been running his place during the past Summer with one man besides himself, and has been doing the work of two men, not hesitating to put in 18 to 20 hours a day, being none the worse for it.

United War Work Drive

Lancaster has again gone "over the top"—to use an expressive, but much overworked term—with the United War Work Drive. Mrs. Albert M. Herr had charge of a branch of the women's section and conducted two flower booths with flowers contributed by the county florists. Mrs. Herr personally conducted four nurses from the hospital with a stretcher through the business streets and collected enough to make a goodly number of soldier boys happy this Winter.

The Victory Parade was held on Tuesday with about 30,000 of Lancaster's 50,000 people in line. The only florist establishment represented as such was that of B. F. Barr & Co., who had their employees from the greenhouses, the store and the nursery in line; others in the trade took part as individuals.

Mr. and Mrs. Utley of Harrisburg spent a day visiting at B. F. Barr's. Mrs. Spera, now managing the Barr store was formerly of Harrisburg.

A representative from Robert Craig's was a trade visitor.

Providence, R. I.

The epidemic has abated and trade has returned to a normal basis. Demand is active but is met with a plentiful supply of stock. Still there is no surplus on the market. Carnations, which have had the biggest drop in price are selling at $2 to $3.50 per 100. Boxwood is bound to be short on this market with prices considerably over last year.

After demonstrating that the cooperation of the R. I. Hort. Soc., the committee on agriculture of the Providence Chamber of Commerce and the Providence Market Gardeners' Ass'n had served to produce the most interesting annual exhibit yet held, the two days' flower, fruit and vegetable show, held in the ballroom of the Narragansett Hotel, came to a close. While it lasted the rooms seemed en fete. Nearly every person was presented with a bouquet of rich Roses or gorgeous 'Mums, and some of the more practical left with bunches of beets or other vegetables in their hands. Those in charge of the exhibit pronounced the interest shown this year greater than ever, alluding especially to the exhibits of canned fruits and vegetables and the competitive canning demonstrations, both of them new features. The co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce and market gardeners, they said, have been productive of good for all concerned and they expressed the hope that it will continue in future years. J. C. L.

New Haven, Conn.

Among New Haven florists business continues good, although the rush is practically over. Still with fairly good Roses coming in at $4 to $10 per 100, and pompon 'Mums it is possible to get out good funeral pieces at profitable prices. Florists are looking forward to a good demand for cut flowers at Thanksgiving time and are placing orders accordingly. Some regret is felt, that the growers did not plant more stock. The unusually mild weather has saved considerable coal, so with the war about over it is regrettable that there are so many empty benches. It is not, however, too late to fill them with something that will be readily salable late in the Winter.

Dahlia growers have had a long and a prosperous season. Most of the roots are just now being taken up and stored.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., writes us that what seemed to portend a disastrous season for Dahlias has proved to be the best ever known.

At the regular meeting of the New Haven County Horticultural Society, Nov. 12, a letter from Prof. G. W. Frazer of Storrs College, Conn., was read asking our society to formulate a plan for the trial grounds at Storrs together with rules and regulations governing the testing of new varieties of Dahlias and other flowers. A committee consisting C. Louis Alling, Bertram G. Leeper, Alfred E. Doty and Wm. Rathgeber, sec'y, was appointed by President Cromie to plan out the methods and rules to be submitted to the American Dahlia Society for approval or improvement.

The committee would like to hear from growers everywhere concerning these trial grounds as they will be a National affair. We are open for suggestions either directly or through the columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE.

A discussion as to the causes of poor Dahlias, and especially on the white fly, was participated in by many members. (A report of this discussion appears in another column.) W. J. R.

Worcester, Mass.

The florists experienced a rather quiet business the past week. A decided drop was noticed in the transient business, especially, possibly due to the two big days of victory celebrating which affected all lines of business. Much patriotism was shown by the florists on the 11th, when they all gathered at Randall's shop at 10 o'clock for a parade all their own. The delivery cars and wagons were well decorated and headed by H. F. Lange's big Packard. They made a beautiful showing. H. F. Littlefield was represented with his new Dodge Bros. car.

The Red Cross Chrysanthemum show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society held on Nov. 7 and 8, netted $1000 after all premium money, etc., was deducted.

Wholesale prices dropped somewhat over the previous week. Good Carnations could be bought for $3, while the best sold for $4 per 100; Roses $3 to $10; Violets 75c. to $1; singles and pompon 'Mums 25c. to 50c. per bunch. The florists report a good call for bulbs this year and extensive planting of same is being done by large manufacturing concerns now for Spring gardens.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN—President, J. R. MAYHEW, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. EDWARD MOON, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. HILL, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, CURTIS NYE SMITH, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

THE RETAIL SALESMAN

At the time of the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at Chicago last June many interesting papers were read and discussed, several of which we published at the time. There was one, however, presented by E. H. Smith, which we could not give space to then and are now reproducing. While written for the nurseryman, it is just as applicable to the florist, the seedsman and the dealer in florists' supplies. It expresses clearly the value of the 100% efficiency salesman above all others possessing a less percentage, and puts it squarely up to the employer to see to it that he obtains men of this type.

The subject assigned me by your program committee covers a large field of activity. I do not feel equal to the task of fully presenting the arguments which bear upon it. However, I shall touch upon the points that are certainly worthy of careful consideration by those of us who hire salesmen.

Speaking from a personal standpoint, it is a matter of choice that ours is one of the firms whose policy it is to hire salesmen to represent us in preference to doing a catalog business. We send out salesmen not only to sell our line of stock, but also to sell service, by educating the people to beautify their home grounds and to teach them how to care for the stock after it is planted.

Realizing the importance of building up the standard of the nursery profession, we endeavor to select salesmen who are honorable. In selecting this kind of material we ignore the old adage that "A salesman is born, not made," because we think it is a relic of the dark ages. Neither do we select the finished product of our competitors, because we would not be courteous in so doing. We select our men from the store, the blacksmith shop, the pulpit, the farm—in fact, from all walks of life—and by giving them careful training and instilling into their minds an ideal worth while, we develop them into desirable salesmen.

Please catch this point, I did not say successful, but desirable salesmen. While it is true that a desirable salesman must be successful to a certain degree, a successful salesman may not be desirable when surveyed from an honorable standpoint. We all have heard of the fellow who goes out and gathers in big reports by selling the people anything but honest goods. He sells everything from a Grapevine Raspberry to an orchard that will be in full bearing two years from the time it is planted. These fellows who sell promises instead of nursery stock, have for their ideal the almighty dollar. Have these fellows entirely disappeared? I believe they are gradually fading away, and why? Because the nursery firms are doing away with the dollar ideal themselves.

House Judged by its Salesmen

How true the saying that "like begets like." The customer is correct when he judges the house by the salesman it sends out. The firms and their salesmen, who are replacing the oldtime rounders, have an ideal that is worth while. It is "service" to their fellowmen. They teach their customers to beautify their home grounds, thus enhancing the value of their property. The salesman with the proper ideal takes as much interest in his customer as he does in his employer; he teaches the customer how to plant and care for his stock in his year to year visits. The latter type of salesman is the desirable fellow. We should do our level best to make him 100 per cent. proficient.

Qualifications of a Good Salesman

In order to secure a basis from which to work, I shall discuss a 100 per cent. man, selecting ten very important qualifications of a desirable nursery salesman, giving each qualification ten points. The ten qualifications are: Sobriety, Health, Honesty, Confidence, Management, Neatness, System, Optimism, Industry and Perseverance.

Sobriety is the foundation stone of desirable salesmanship. It is generally conceded that one drink of liquor intoxicates a man to a certain degree. If the practice is continued it weakens every one of the other points of qualification. It destroys health, inclines to misrepresentation, kills confidence, weakens management, produces an untidy appearance, does away with system, creates pessimism, encourages laziness, and tends to discouragement.

Health: A sound physical condition generates an abundance of energy essential to put force and vigor into an argument that will win business. It gives the salesman a clear eye and a keen intellect.

Honesty: The salesman should be truthful and loyal to both the customer and the firm he represents. He should not misrepresent facts in order to secure business.

Confidence: A salesman not only needs confidence in himself, but he must have confidence in his firm. He must also be able to gain the confidence of his prospective customer.

Management: The salesman who drops the lines may rest assured that the customer will pick them up and do the driving. He should be master of himself on all occasions. It is his duty to manage his prospect.

Neatness: A neat personal appearance plays an important part in securing an audience with the prospect. Wearing a smile does not in itself denote a good appearance. With one glance the prospect sizes the salesman up. If he observes soiled clothes and a beard that needs mowing, the chances are about one to five that the salesman will be turned down. We do not insinuate that it is necessary to wear expensive clothing.

System: In framing a selling talk, system is necessary. A salesman must have a system in working his territory. Without system he is like a mariner without a compass.

Optimism effects a hopeful state of mind, making a salesman good-natured, ready to supply a joke—or take one—to call a bluff in a friendly manner, or show the customer the silver lining of every cloud.

Industry: The salesman who does not wait to be called in the morning; who does not fret if he doesn't get back to town before the six o'clock whistle blows, and gives all of his time to his employer, is industrious.

Perseverance is what keeps the salesman on the main line. The man who is persevering never takes a sidetrack. He is able to go from one appeal to another until the psychological moment is reached, and the pencil does its duty.

Nurseryman's Duty Analyzed

It is the duty of every nurseryman to do all he can to raise the efficiency of his salesmen. We all have some 40, some 60, some 80 and some 100 per cent. proficient men. Let us examine these fellows under a microscope and see what we find. Look at the 40 per cent. man. He is honest, industrious, sober and very neat in his appearance; but he does not feel well at all times, he is prone to see the dark side of every question that arises, and before long he is obliged to lay off and recuperate. He lacks perseverance, fails to manage his conversation, and is unable to land more than about one out of every five prospects. He manages to get enough business during the first part of the season when the territory has not been canvassed by other concerns, to hold on by a thread, but as soon as harvesting, or corn picking sets in, he lets go and the result is that we tell him to lay off until business picks up, and we will give him another trial.

A 60 per cent. man looks somewhat better. Let us size him up. He is sober, healthy, honest, confident, industrious, and has system, but he shaves once every week or two, wears a coat collar that should be sent to a soap factory, a vest that would look better worn on a Virginia tobacco plantation, and trousers that would disgrace a ragamuffin. The customer takes a survey of him, and if he finds they are both of the same type gives an order. Others turn him down, and at the same time make a solemn vow never to patronize a concern that puts out such men. This man is too much of a pessimist to see his own weakness, and if he appears to fall down, "the trouble is in the territory," of course. Yet we make a little money on his business, and we class him as part of the organization.

What about the 80 per cent. man? He is endowed with all the qualifications except industry and perseverance. He turns over in bed at six, gets up at seven, eats breakfast at eight, and starts for the country at nine. He takes two hours for dinner and starts back to town at five. Besides the other qualifications he has a wonderful personality which is the secret of his success in selling more goods than the 40 or 60 per cent. man. We know he has not worked the territory thoroughly, but we are afraid to say anything for fear he will hire out to one of our competitors; so he is classed as a fair salesman.

The Hundred Per Cent. Nursery Salesman

Now we turn to the 100 per cent. man, the fellow with red blood in his veins, a living dynamo. He is up at six, on the road at seven, has two good orders by nine, a row of corn husked by eleven, and a $50 order thrown in by the farmer for the courtesy. He solicits another property owner when dinner is announced, has another order signed at 12:45, is on the road at one, gets three orders out of four prospects that afternoon, has a date made at six with a prospect for dinner the following day and starts for town eight miles away. He arrives in town at 7:30, eats his supper and takes a stroll up Hillside where the wealthy reside; discovers a fine mansion without a shrub or flower in the spacious yard, calls and finds that the owner is Mr. Jones, president of the First National Bank. He visits with Mr. and Mrs. Jones a few minutes, and after presenting a logical argument why they should adorn that beautiful home with ornamental trees and shrubs, has the privilege of placing another $50 token of appreciation in his pocket. This type of salesman thinks trees, eats trees, hears trees, smells trees, dreams trees and lives trees.

The reason we do not have more 100 per cent. men is due to the fact that we lack efficiency ourselves. Why should we be contented with the 40 per cent. man who simply succeeds in holding the cost of his orders below the maximum, or the 50 per cent. fellow who builds his deliveries up to just one-half of what they ought to be? Let us survey our salesman from different angles, and call his attention to his weak points. If he is unwilling to be shown the qualifications he lacks, consign him to the brush pile and try another man.

Nurseryman's Obligation Begins With Salesman's Call

In the discussion that followed Mr. Newman said that the day has gone by when a nurseryman does not care how the man gets the business as long as the order comes in and he can deliver and collect 90 per cent. of the business, and that the nurseryman's obligation begins when the salesman calls upon a customer. "If we had more 100 per cent. men, who would make clean sales, sell the kind of stock that will do the party the most good and that he will appreciate, we would be going a long way on the publicity campaign, we would be winning friends and they will come back. The high type of man, such as Mr. Smith urges employing, is an honor to the nursery business. I believe too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the word service. We certainly have a big obligataion that we owe every customer. It is up to us as nurserymen to see that the men who represent us, who go out to sell those goods, sell the kind of goods that will make our customers our friends and will be a permanent publicity for us."

Paradise Apple Stocks

Paradise Apple Stocks is the title of a comprehensive article, pages 361 to 399, of the Journal of the Royal Hort. Soc., Sept., 1917. The text, illustrated by 41 excellent halftones, is based on the investigational work being conducted by R. G. Hatton, at the Royal College Fruit Experiment Station in East Malling, England. It should prove of special interest to nurserymen who propagate or handle dwarf apple trees.

Osage Oranges

Burnett Landreth of Bristol, Pa., under date of July 30, 1918, says: "Fifty years ago we supplied the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. with some railway ties of Osage Orange which resisted decay for forty years and held the spikes with a grip of death. Nothing is equal to this variety of tree for ties, but it has become far too costly."

E. Y. TEAS.

There is no better time than RIGHT NOW to take up the study of landscape gardening, and it is fortunate indeed that such a book as Cridland's is obtainable for, on account of its simple explanations of details and its devotion to the requisites of small properties, it is of far greater value to the average nurseryman and florist than the usual "heavy" books on the same subject. Cridland's is obtainable from THE EXCHANGE office for $1.90, delivery postpaid.

Late Delivery

ISSUE OF NOV. 30

Thanksgiving Day coming on Thursday, our usual mailing day, necessitates our issue of Nov. 30 being placed in the mails one day late. Correspondence and advertising, however, should reach this office on Tuesday, as usual.

Thanksgiving Day Show Cards

In our Retail Department will be found a number of suggestions for the wording of Show Cards to be hung in the windows or at other available points by the retail florist advertising Thanksgiving Day. It is a fair presumption that business for that day will be unusual, but as to how much better than usual it will be is up to the retail florist, depending almost entirely on the efforts made by him to induce people to a greater use of flowers than has been the custom in the past for this special occasion.

Preference List Abolished

On Tuesday last, Edwin B. Parker, Priorities Commissioner, announced that the entire preference list (better known to the public as the priority list) had been discarded by the War Industries Board. In other words, the government has stopped the classification of industries as essential or nonessential to the winning of the war, and will no longer direct the distribution of materials and facilities to industries engaged particularly in war work.

To aid reconstruction, however, preference in the allocation of materials will be granted to railroads, shipbuilding plants, waterways and other public utilities and to enterprises of greatest civilian importance.

There is nothing in the above statement to indicate the release of anthracite coal to the florist, it being generally understood that the brand consumed by manufacturers on the priority list was almost wholly bituminous.

When Johnny Comes Marching Home

Now that the great war has ended and the work of readjustment has begun we are all eagerly looking for our boys to come back as soon as possible, both because we want to welcome them to our hearts and homes as an army as well as individually and because "we need them in our business." We must, however, school ourselves to patience for it seems reasonable to suppose that even the best of plans will not bring them back and disband them more speedily than armies have been mustered out after other great wars. According to John R. Mott, director-general of the War Work Campaign, the Franco-Prussian armies required two years to disband; the Turco-Russian, 18 months; the Northern army in the American Civil War, 17; the Spanish-American, 16; the Russo-Japanese, 13; and the Boer war armies, 10.

Mr. Mott concludes from these facts and from conversations with many military and naval men of our own and other countries, that it will take at least twelve months from the time the home return begins until the last company is mustered out. Florists, nurserymen, and all the rest of us must therefore cut our garments according to our cloth, make the best of conditions as we find them, use our present equipment and labor forces to the points of highest efficiency, and welcome each returning member as so much reinforcement in our work of readjustment.

Full Steam Ahead

Judging from the effect upon the people at large, rich and poor, employer and employee, of the announcement of the signing of the armistice on Monday, Nov. 11, it was made evident that something stronger than general joy and hilarity underlaid the demonstrations. Carried to its natural conclusions, it meant peace and the restoration of our dislocated industries. With this idea in mind, we addressed letters to a number of our readers as follows:

"As one of the men to whom the trade looks for inspiration and leadership we would appreciate it much if you would sit down on receipt of this and give a few minutes of your time to telling our readers just what the armistice signed last Monday, Nov. 11, means to the trade—its future, from now on particularly."

The responses have been unprecedented, showing that the subject laid as close to the heart of the recipient of the letter as it did to the editor. These letters will be found on our feature pages. The general trend of the opinions expressed is that before long we shall all get back into our stride and that business will move with renewed energy and vitality. The letters published constitute some of the best news we have been able to furnish our readers through these weary years of war and waste, and so we commend them to their attention.

One contributing factor to the speedy resumption of business has not been touched upon by the many writers; this has to do with the free renewal of ocean navigation, which means much for prosperity after a four years' obstruction.

Thanksgiving Day, 1918

Was there ever such an occasion for whole-hearted thanksgiving on the part of our countrymen at large as offers itself next Thursday?

And has there ever presented itself a better opportunity to the florist at large to benefit thereby in a threefold sense: mentally, morally and financially. It will be a joy to serve those who can afford to buy and a pleasure to give a tithe for the benefit of the unfortunates—the shut-ins in hospitals, the recovering wounded and those worse off.

We sorrow for the relatives of those who have made the supreme sacrifice for their country—those to whom this year the day will not bring pleasure, although they bear the reflected honor of their dear ones—but we have, on the other hand, the best of reasons for our thanksgiving in that our losses in this greatest of all wars—losses which have cost other lands so heavily of their man power—have been so comparatively light, thus enabling our great armies to return almost intact.

The extent to which the florist will profit in material wealth from the celebration of this great day lays entirely in his own hands. Those who have had the courage to advertise, the foresight to provide, and the ability to execute, will reap the reward which comes to all well planned enterprises. Those who are content to take the day as others view it will fare as they have fared on other Thanksgiving Days, perhaps a little better but with no credit to themselves for perspicuity.

In the final analysis it is the retail florist who creates the market for cut flowers particularly. That just now he has a greater opportunity than ever before presented will be made evident by reading the many letters and papers in this issue bearing on the immediate future.

The Coal Situation

The United States Fuel Administration reports under recent date on the successful outcome of its zoning system, drawing attention to the fact that this had a large share in bringing the nation's supply of bituminous coal to its present proportions which, with patriotic economy, will be sufficient for the Winter's requirements.

Early estimates were that the movement of bituminous coal affected by the zone system would involve about 300,000,000 tons, or 60 per cent. of the total production. The latest figures, show that 368,858,000 net tons of this kind of coal have been produced and delivered since April 1, 60 per cent. of which is affected by the zone system.

To our knowledge there have been no further ameliorations in the coal situation as concerns florists than those given in our issue of Nov. 2. The discard announced Nov. 19 of the "Preference List" will undoubtedly free more bituminous coal for general manufacturing use but not the anthracite in sizes so much required by many growers.

Holland's Side of Plant Importation

N. van Poeteren, Deputy Chief of the Holland Phytopathological Service presents data concerning the inspection of plant exporting establishments and the control of plant enemies, shows that Holland exercises specially efficient control methods and presents points for the United States Horticultural Board to weigh to avoid making drastic rulings.

Prior to the institution of the phytopathologican service in Holland, especially the nurserymen took the greatest care of their grounds and much was done for controling plant parasites, because cultivation is done very intensively and consequently cultivating inferior plants does not pay.

Since 1899, when official inspection of nurseries was instituted, controlling insects and plant diseases especially was carried on according to a fixed plan. The application of controling measures was not confined to those who exported plants, but in the large centers of nurseries as well as in other parts of the country, controling was maintained on a large scale.

Fully aware of the necessity of giving the highest possible warrants as to the absence of insects and plant diseases in exported shipments, the phytopathological service was not content with the results obtained, but has ever since exerted itself to improve the work of inspection. Accordingly since 1910 certificates are not issued on the mere results of the inspection of the grounds, but from that time all plants intended for export are inspected before being packed and shipped.

Scrupulous Inspection Long Established

Consequently, we did this before the United States required inspection as a qualification for import, or before it was done in any other part of the world. The improvement of the work of inspection and the more rigid application of the controling measures have ever since been maintained. In a number of communities, several of which are situated in the most important nursery centers, regulations are even now being issued, according to which nurserymen as well as private persons are compelled to apply special controling measures to certain specimens of nursery stock. To the presence of insects and plant diseases, which eventually might be exported in the earth, the necessary attention is also paid. So the continual controling of the mole cricket, which occurs on certain specimens of soil in our country, led to a total extermination of this insect in many nurseries. The controling of Othiorhynchus sulcatus is general and has also given important results. The same may be said of other insects. In this way equal attention is paid to plant diseases and insects which occur on and to those under the surface of the earth. Continually inspection is made on (as far as possible), all nurseries in the country and the application of controling measures is encouraged with force. All this is not done because the diseases and insects cause so much damage to our nursery stock, for this damage is exceedingly small. On the contrary these exertions aim only at making the stock perfectly clean from even the slightest infestation with insects or plant diseases, because we are fully aware that only such stock may be considered fit for export.

The controling measures in the nurseries particularly are of importance against those insects which hibernate in the ground and the presence of which can be detected with difficulty on stock with earth.

American Views of Holland's Inspection

To be able to control the results of the work of inspection, a circular was sent in March, 1914, to the chiefs of the services of inspection in the various states of America to ask whether in the (then almost ended) season 1913-'14, stock had been rejected on account of infestation by insects or plant diseases. To this circular 30 answers were received. Of these, 22 were unconditionally favorable about the work done by the phytopathological service, whereas the others contained mostly but very slight remarks. From this I may conclude that our work is considered to be not only sufficient but even more than that, by a large number of inspection authorities in the United States.

Although the results of our work are up till now very satisfactory, still the phytopathological service aims at a higher standard. Every statement from America which may lead to an improvement, will be gratefully accepted. By a big staff an even more rigid inspection will be made in Summer of the nursery grounds and in Winter of the nursery stock intended for shipment, to warrant the best possible condition of everything. We come to the following conclusions:

Points for Federal Horticultural Board to Weigh

1. The sanitary conditions of the nursery stock in Holland have ever been particularly sound, because intensive cultivation has made this of vital importance.

2. The phytopathological service exerts itself to the utmost to control insects and plant diseases in the nurseries supported by laws and local regulations and by the general cooperation of the nurserymen.

3. This controling is maintained with great success. A rigid inspection of the nursery stock, ready for export completes this work.

4. To all insects and plant diesases equal attention is paid, and consequently there is no reason for the supposition, that the chance of importing these insects and diseases on plants with earth is practically greater than on plants without earth.

5. The opinion of American inspection authorities about the sanitary conditions of the nursery stock imported during the season 1913-'14 from Holland was most favorable and the few remarks which were made did not relate to insects and plant diseases which might specially have been imported in balled plants.

6. The phytopathological service of Holland still aims at a more rigid control of the nurseries and a still sharper control of the plants to be exported. All remarks that may lead to improvements, will be gladly considered.

We hope, that the Federal Horticultural Board, after perusal of the facts mentioned above, may find cause for resolving to take no measures, as far as Holland is concerned, to prohibit the importation of balled plants into America.

Night Message Cost Reduced

Washington advices of Nov. 19 indicate a cut in the cost of the Night Message service, the new rate being given as 20c. for 10 words and 1c. for each additional word for the shortest distance, and 50c. for 10 words and 2c. for each additional word for the longest distance; this change becoming effective Jan. 1., next.

There is a discrepancy here, however, between the Night Message and the Night Letter which remains to be cleared up, both forms being deliverable in the morning following.

American Sweet Pea Society

An executive committee meeting of the American Sweep Pea Society was held in New York City on Nov. 6. The statements of the treasurer and secretary showed the society's finances to be in good shape, a balance of $175.11 to date being on hand, with all bills and prize awards settled. The secretary's report showed that about half the membership dues for 1918 were paid, and it was hoped that with peace in sight a renewed interest would be manifested, thus placing the society in a position to do more efficient work in promoting an interest in and love for our favorite flower, through exhibitions and otherwise. Messrs. Don and Spirling were appointed a committee to report on the possibility of holding the 1919 exhibition and convention in New York.

The Ant and Aphis Problem

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

I think it would be very interesting and no doubt profitable to all gardeners if you could get some expert evidence in regard to the pernicious activity of ants, as such activity affects the growth not only of several varieties of soft wooded plants, but also of Apple, Cherry and other trees. Such information, together with suggestions as how most effectively to arrest the activity of these wise and industrious insects, might well be published, for the benefit of gardeners and others who have been sorely tried by the ant's destructive habits.

It certainly appears as if the apparently ever-increasing annoyance and loss caused by aphides is largely, if not almost entirely, due to the industrious ant family and in order to get rid of the aphides it is first necessary to get rid of the ants. Wherever we find an abundance of ants we soon find, as new growth develops an equal abundance of aphides and that the latter are colonized all through the growing season by the ants is certain.

What then, is the best remedy? No doubt, the first thing to do is to get rid of the ants, but how, that is the question? I have seen it stated that the most effectual way is to plow early in the Spring and disk repeatedly; to plow in the Fall and disk as before, to stir the soil frequently, all season. This advice looks promising, but I have tried this "stirring the soil" theory very thoroughly and find that so far as getting rid of the ants is concerned one might just as well save the trouble, for they persistently re-establish their works inside of a half day and never seem to be in the least discouraged; on the contrary, they appear rather to enjoy the exercise required.

I think the only satisfactory way to defeat them is in the direction of some sure means of dealing poison to them without arousing their suspicions, for they are very wise and very wary. Can any of your readers tell us anything of their experience in this line or suggest the best way to circumvent the operations of these busy and destructive little plagues?

Symposium on Poor Dahlias

Members of the New Haven Florists' Club attribute the trouble to white fly, over propagation, and too early setting out. Richard Vincent, Jr. tells his experience. Preventives suggested included Bordeaux mixture and cow manure. Remedies recommended are tobacco and lime dust, nicotine, and kerosene emulsion made with whale oil soap.

Bertram G. Leeper of New Haven, an extensive grower and a good authority on horticulture, quoted from "Solon Robinson's Works" that if the plants are mulched with cow manure the fly will leave the plant. He further said that it is not the fly itself that does the injury as it does not feed, in the adult form, on the plants. It bores into the stalk to make a place to deposit the eggs. When the eggs hatch the "larvæ" begin immediately to feed on the plant, sucking the juices and stunting the plant. The roughness on stunted plants, he says, is due to the shells or hulls of the larvæ, easily identified with a magnifying glass. They are found from near the top of the plant even down into the roots or bulbs. Split open the stalk and you will find these hulls which the insects cast off as they grow. Other roughness is caused by the larvæ eating their way out. Mr. Leeper recommends dry tobacco dust, one part, to four parts dry lime, blown on the under sides of the plants when moist in the early morning. The claim is that it prevents the eggs hatching and the plants immediately show improvement.

Frank C. Sheldon of the Connecticut Experiment Station considers the cause of poor Dahlias to be due to a root trouble and not to white fly.

Over-Propagation Blamed

C. Louis Alling, a well known grower, thinks the trouble is due to over propagation and setting out plants from cuttings too early. He says early planting has much to do with stunted growth. After mulching the plants with cow manure he says the trouble disappeared.

Alfred E. Doty, who believes in growing from cuttings, says his early plantings were much stunted but the later ones were free from it. He contends that we all plant Dahlias too early.

In a patch of Dahlias among which a crop of lettuce was grown the writer has no stunted plants whatever.

Kerosene Whale Oil Soap Emulsion

A letter from James Duthie of Oyster Bay, L. I., was as follows:

I have found kerosene emulsion effective. The formula is, five pounds whale oil soap and two quarts kerosene to 50 gallons of water. Dissolve the soap in some warm water. After being dissolved add the kerosene and churn it up. It mixes well that way. When creamy put it in the spray barrel and add the balance of the water. Spray Dahlias with a good pressure, and especially spray the under side of foliage thoroughly. This I have found effective for most of the sucking insect pests for which I call it a Cure-all. The following letter is from Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the American Dahlia Society:

In a lifelong experiment with Dahlias I have had problems put up to me by conditions varying in different years. But up to the present time have not found any that could not be solved.

The white fly causes many of our troubles. These insects are more likely to appear in a season of long drought. When rains occur frequently and the Dahlias are kept by that means in good growing condition the white fly has a poor chance to hurt the plant. But should a drought occur look out for trouble. We must aim to get a normal condition of growing by constant cultivation. Spraying must be resorted to once a week to keep down the pest. By doing that and using proper sprays we keep down any disease. Generally the varieties most affected are the weak ones. Extreme hot days and nights cause bunchy and small growths, which make perfect harbors for the pest. Strong growing varieties are not affected. Henry Patrick, King of the Autumn and other tall growers of these types are seldom affected by the white fly; but bushy growing varieties such as Hortulanus, Wittc and Countess of Lonsdale are likely to suffer as they offer more shelter.

A weekly spraying with Bordeaux and arsenate of lead will keep both disease and chewing insects away. Nicotine, whale oil soap and other contact remedies may be used to keep white fly, tarnished plant bugs and other sucking insects from destroying buds. For success in growing Dahlias, as in everything else, eternal vigilance is required.

A party asked the question in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, why the Aster or black beetle will eat the light colored flowers and not eat the dark ones. Some assert that he can see only the light colored ones. I have always been under the impression that there is rather a different flavor in the dark ones from the lighter colors, for when I have placed the bugs on the dark flowers and they would leave.

It will be seen that while there is a difference of opinion, we are getting together on this important subject, and much good is bound to come from the discussion. We hope to hear from many growers in all parts of the country before our next meeting, and are also in hopes that it will be taken up by some of the Agricultural Experiment Stations to find out exactly what causes the stunted plants and what is the remedy.

Small Boy's Composition on Wind.—Wind is what we breathe; sometimes men get so full of it that they become ridiculous. Wind is largely used to tell about the size of fish we catch, and likewise the number hooked. Sometimes wind is used as an asset in running cyclone insurance companies, and also is a function to pry a tightwad loose from his pile by slick promoters. Too much wind busts banks, blows down greenhouses, and ruins reputations at old ladies' sewing circles. Properly applied, it pumps water, gets the Dutchman's goat and raises money for the Fifth Liberty Loan.—J. G.

Obituary

A. W. Copeland

A. W. Copeland, of the firm of Copeland Bros., Vermilion, O., died of pneumonia at his home on Nov. 14, at the age of 31. He was in business in Vermilion for about six years and was a highly respected citizen of that place. J. McL.

Mrs. Ann Frances Milliot

In her 74th year Mrs. Ann Frances Milliot relict of Pierre Milliot died Nov. 14 at Yonkers where she had lived since 1856, and since 1857 had conducted a florist businesss established by her father August Lauchaune. She is survived by eight children, four sons, George of Monticello, N. Y.; William, Leon and Louis of Yonkers; four daughters, Margaret, Mary and Fanny Millot and Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson; and nine grandchildren.

Sergeant William Sibel

A telegram from the War Department was received stating that Sergeant William Sibel of Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, has died from influenza on board ship, Oct. 11, and was buried at sea with full military honors. He was in the motor corps bound for France following a course at the Carnegie Institute. He had been in the service about a year. William Sibel was well known in the retail shops of Philadelphia, being salesman for John Welsh Young. He was a splendid young chap in his 25th year, full of spirit and fun, with a pleasing disposition that made him well liked by all who knew him. His passing leaves many regrets.

James Young

James Young has passed beyond, aged 69. He was a son of Christopher Young, who opened the first greenhouse in St. Louis and conducted the first floral shop 53 years ago. Young first established his greenhouse on the Catlin tract. The funeral was held Saturday, Nov. 16. Charles Young has been associated in business with his father for many years at 1406 Olive st. The following gentlemen were pall bearers: J. J. Beneker, H. G. Berming, C. A. Kuehn, Willie Dee, Dr. Helwig, John Houlihan. One of the most beautiful features in the life of the deceased was the love and respect shown by his two sons Charles and Walter. The Florists' club sent a beautiful wreath.

Benjamin Connell

As recorded in our last week's issue, Benjamin Connell, a well known figure in the florist and nursery business of the Eastern United States, died on Nov. 9. The immediate cause of death is given as pneumonia, following a relapse from influenza, after a short illness of eight days.

Mr. Connell was born in Ireland on Dec. 7, 1845, and emigrated to this country when a boy of 13, making his home with his parents and a brother and sister at Jennersville, Pa., they having preceded him by a year. When quite young he took a position with the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., and became a proficient grower. He was identified with this concern for thirty years. He then established himself in business, which he conducted at West Grove, Pa., up to ten years ago when he moved to Merchantville, N. J.

An acquaintance of over 50 years among his associates left with them an impression of one who gave close attention to his work, who possessed a rare knowledge regarding both supply and demand, coupled with an ability to use that knowledge for the building of a very considerable business, chiefly as a dealer. His strict integrity and faithful attention to his duty as he saw it in family, civic and business life is a creditable record sealed by his death. He was well thought of and respected in the community in which he lived, as well as his former Chester County home.

He is survived by five sons and one daughter by his first marriage, besides his widow and a young daughter by the second marriage. Interment was made at St. Mary's Cemetery, West Grove, Pa.

Our picture is that of a front and rear view of new Carnation, No. 414, originating with Baur & Steinkamp of Indianapolis, who express in regard to it their belief that it is the best variety as yet produced and feel confident that after its dissemination it will at once be added to the list of standard sorts. In color it is similar to Gloriosa, but said to be still brighter, holding its color better. In size and freedom of bloom it is claimed to be right up with the best varieties on the market today, apparently having all the earmarks of a high grade commercial sort. Baurr & Steinkamp are growing some 5000 plants this season and expect to disseminate the variety next season.

By S. G. Harris, Rosedale Nurseries, Tarrytown, N.Y.

We believe a steadily increasing business will come our way now that peace is in sight; for planters' attention and money have been diverted for two years to winning the war. Many orders thus held up will be added to the normal number.

By Robert Pyle, Pres. The Conard & Jones Co., Rose growers, West Grove, Pa.:

For our industry the signing of the armistice means:

1. Nonessential ban lifted from the minds of those who have withheld dealing and who will now "loosen up."
2. Coal increasingly available.
3. Labor, a favorable turn in the tide.
4. A demand that is likely to tax our utmost resources.

The opportunities ahead for the average man and the average firm are better than before the war. We need as never before leaders who will show us how to cut out waste, render efficient service and develop our lines till at least 75 per cent. of our number are making a profit.

By Henry Penn, Chairman S. A. F. Publicity Committee, Boston, Mass.:

Well may the florists of the country rejoice now that the armistice has been signed. It will bring to the trade that which we have been looking forward to: the greatest time since war was declared and which will eventually cause great doings for all florists by way of planning and doing things as never before. Out of all this will come happiness, progress and a spirit of friendship over all the world that will make this sphere a better and happier one for those having lived in it through such a period by each one doing his part toward his fellow-man so that we may all share in the blessings to follow.

For the world to indulge in flowers for a grand finale toward the peace celebration is just the natural way, and for us to see that the wherewithal is supplied will be the cause of the greatest joy in our history.

Keep in readiness that spirit of exultation until the boys from "over there" come marching home, then will we appreciate the meaning of "War is over," and then imagine, if you will, the joy and celebrations to follow, with flowers playing at least a small part in the victory.

Heroes returning from victory should be crowned with flowers! flowers! and more flowers!

By Wm. Sefton, Pres., Hitchings & Co., Inc., Greenhouse builders, Elizabeth, N. J.:

The arrival of peace cannot otherwise than bring encouragement to all who are connected with the florist business. Probably no other business was hurt in the same degree by war conditions. It brought about, however, a realization of the necessity of better establishments for the production of flowers, better organization in their management, and better facilities for distribution purposes, closer cooperation amongst growers, commercial men and retailers.

The growers who suffered most were those who did not have up-to-date, efficient establishments. Many of the more modern, efficient plants have suffered very little. Our opinion is that the experience has brought to the attention of growers the necessity of overhauling their ranges and giving careful consideration to economy, both in labor and in the consumption of fuel. As a matter of fact we have already had several inquiries from growers, looking to the improvement of their establishments.

As we see it, while there are many complex problems to be faced in the reconstruction period, which probably will not exceed a year, there are many years of prosperity before us. The thing to do is for all interested to get together and work for the benefit of the entire industry. By this cooperation the florist business should grow at a greater pace than has ever been experienced. We look forward to a time of great prosperity.

By W. H. Coles, The Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O.:

It is with a good deal of misgiving that we make even an effort to prophesy the effect of the signing of the armistice. The conclusions which we have reached, however, are definite enough in our own minds, so that we are basing our business calculations on them.

It seems rather evident that the greatest need which will face the world for the next few years, must be met by the growing industry, and that never before have there been placed on it such demands as it will see in the immediate future. It would seem that this cannot but result in a prosperous condition of the entire business.

It seems to us also that one fact which has been brought out by the war is that preventable losses are eqivalent to a crime, when needs are as urgent as they have been and as they will be. The growing industry is coming more and more to realize that losses which come from inefficiency are preventable, so that the equipment and the methods which will produce the maxium results at the minimum expenditure of money and labor, will receive a consideration never before given them.

The third conclusion which we have reached, is that the prices not only of food stuffs, but of manufacturers' material and equipment used in their production will not decline to any extent for some little time, and the grower who waits until declining prices come before taking advantage of the most efficient means of producing crops will lose more through neglecting his opportunity to make a profit than he will gain by the ultimate saving in the cost of his equipment.

We feel that conditions will rapidly come to a stable basis but we believe that the after-war basis will not duplicate the pre-war basis and we are venturing the prophecy that the changes will be approximated along the lines that we have suggested above.

By Alonzo J. Bryan, Florist, Washington, N. J.:

We rejoice in the armistice beang signed and peace at hand. We believe the world has come out of this war richer than before and great prosperity is nigh. There may be a little reaction on some things for a short time until business settles down to normal, but we strongly believe the florist will reap his share of prosperity. Surely Memorial Day in the future will break all records as it has been brought nearer each one. The thousands of Liberty Bonds will bring returns at short intervals to rich and poor alike. Considering this with ordinary wages, should make excellent times and the florists who have the stock will rejoice as they reap the results of their labors from day to day.

Physical Reconstruction

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Dear Sir: U. S. Army General Hospital No. 16, at New Haven, Conn., is one of the hospitals designated by the Office of the Surgeon for Physical Reconstruction, by which is meant the educational and vocational improvement of soldiers during their period of convalescence. I am much interested in my work here, which is to keep a general charge over all reconstruction projects.

We have been doing some interesting and intensive work on a small scale in outdoor gardening. We have asked for funds to build a small greenhouse, but thus far the funds have not been granted. Unquestionably, horticulture and floriculture will have an important part in the vocational reconstruction of soldiers, and from my acquaintance with the men in these callings I know they will be very ready to cooperate in this work.

FRANK A. WAUGH,
Captain, Sanitary Corps, Chief of the Reconstruction Service.

[Without doubt our readers will prove themselves as ready to assist in this reconstruction work as they have been in all other activities of the great war. There should be many opportunites for the employment in greenhouses and nurseries of men partially disabled.—Ed.]

Group of prize winning Chrysanthemum plants exhibited by Capt. J. R. De Lamar, (Robt. Marshall, supt.) at the annual 'Mum show of the Hort. Society of New York, Nov. 7 and 10 at the building of the Museum of Nat. History, N. Y. City

The varieties used in the several pieces were as follows: 1. Mrs. R. H. Pearson, This plant was in a 14-in. tub; the plant was 8ft. in diameter. 2. Greystone. 3. Lady Lydia. 4. Mrs. R. H. Pearson, standard. 5. Mrs. R. H. Pearson, 12ft. in diameter. 6. Miss Elva Scoville. 7. Mrs. R. H. Pearson, columnar plant. 8. Lady Lydia. 9. Mrs. R. H. Pearson, three-tiered plant. 10. Wells' Late Pink. 11. Emma.

A Rose Tour

On Thursday, Nov. 14, the annual outing of the Inquisitive Club was held. This unique organization meets once a year at George Burton's, Wyndmoor, Pa. The party this year consisted of John, Geo. and Alfred Burton, Arthur A. Niessen, S. S. Pennock, John Andre, J. Wm. Colflesh, Jr., Edmund A. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, and Wm. McKissick and W. Lehr of Baltimore. The press was represented by George C. Watson. Robert Kift and W. H. Engler. After the usual preliminaries, the George Burton place was given "the once over" and after the multitudinous questions of Robert Kift were satisfied, it was fully agreed that the Roses were up to the standard for which this place is noted. While there are not as many Am. Beauty Roses grown here this year as formerly, the quality remains the same. Columbia shows up well and came in for close attention by the entire party. Hadley, Ophelia, Russell, Maryland and Thora all showed up to advantage. Two houses of Cypripedium insigne are commencing to produce their annual crop.

At Alfred Burton's the party was treated to a sight of some of the finest Russells to be found in this section of the country; the way this Rose is grown here is hard to beat. Am. Beauty is the only other variety grown, besides a house of Cattleyas. From here it is but a step over to the immense range of Myers & Santman, where Roses are produced by the acre. The principal feature for which this place is noted is Am. Beauty Roses and the appearance of the stock merits nothing but praise. Nearly all the other standard commercial teas are found here in top notch quality. To relieve the labor shortage the overhead sprinkler system was tried out this Summer. The results were excellent. It has not been deemed advisable to use the sprinkler during the Winter, however.

The party now bundled into three eight-cylinder cars. John Burton's Cadillac was there; S. S. Pennock was at the wheel of his Peerless and John Andre, befurred like an Eskimo, drove his Oldsmobile. George Campbell's at Flourtown, was the first stop on the schedule, the object being principally to see those famous Richmonds that he always has for Christmas. We were not disappointed; they are running true to form. From here we went to John Welch Young's, where we found the genial proprietor in white hat and gum boots "hard at it." Lady Alice Stanley, Ophelia and Maryland are the leading varieties and they looked as though they were giving good returns. A fourth house, run cool, was being brought in to use again, now that coal is to be had.

Much Accomplished with Little Help

John Savage at Gwynedd was next in line. There was a little delay here, due to the Oldsmobile making the chance acquaintance of a nail en route, with dire results. Despite the handicap of a broken jack a new tire was quickly bolted on. Pompons, Bouvardias and Snapdragon are Mr. Savage's specialty, all of which show a specialist's attention. From here we went to North Wales, where the Florex Gardens are located, and where one will see probably more Roses under one roof than at any other place in the country. William Geiger and Edwin Mayhew conducted the party over this enormous establishment and the results shown here, considering the small number of employees, is astonishing. It would not have been believed possible before the war. The Roses look exceptionally well, especially Prima Donna and September Morn, their two choice varieties. The Carnations and Snapdragon were likewise excellent. The dairy herd has now been increased to eighty head.

Fortified with excellent lunch at the Hatboro Inn we next drove up to Stephen Mortensen at Southampton, where a large block of Columbia Roses was greatly admired. Killarney, Ophelia, Hadley, Russell and Sunburst were all noted.

On to Roelofs

The race to Roelofs was won by the Olds by a good 15 minutes. Here we found Bob Jamison, recovered from the flu, again superintending this model establishment of the Jos. Heacock Co. The stock throughout is in superb condition, especially the house of Hadleys, which variety is grown here as nowhere else in the country. A block of Richmonds also were beyond criticism. Mr. Jamison is delighted with Columbia and predicts a wonderful future for it; he has a splendid block of 6000 plants of it. Ophelia, the Killarneys and Ward were all seen here at their best.

It is a long run from Roelofs to Hillside, and the Olds once more set a pace that soon left the others behind. Arriving at Adolph Farenwald's we found that gentleman in the boiler room wrestling with the coal pile. It was now almost dark and with the aid of the light of a watery moon there was pointed to us a range said to contain nothing but Shawyer, another with Russell; in back of that were the American Beauty. Unfortunately we were unable to call on Edward Towill and Victor Groschen, as night had fallen. Therefore back to Wyndmoor we motored where our hosts, the Burtons, took us in hand and at Alfred Burton's treated us to a most delightful dinner.

What did the Inquisitive Club learn? That nearly every florist's establishment can be run with less help than was thought possible two years ago. That the new Rose Columbia is a "comer,"

Mr. Jordon, of Jordon Bros., Peterborough, is visiting in Toronto.

The Wm. Rennie Co., Ltd., seedsmen, of Toronto, has taken out a permit for the erection of a two-story building on the east side of Richmond st., Chatham. Its Jarvis st. buildings in Toronto, extending from Adelaide st. to Lombard st., are being completely overhauled.

There is a scarcity of seed at present. That and the high price are two of the features of the seed situation. Cauliflower and Cabbage are especially scarce. The Summer here is too hot and too short for seed growing, so Ontario is dependent on outside sources for seed. The scarcity and high price of seed has resulted in the passing of the 5c. packet.

Bulbs have been late in coming and are of small size. One dealer remarking on the size said: "They said they were sending us the small bulbs to save freight!"

A Toronto florist believes in adding to the perfume of the flowers by the use of a good perfume and atomizer. A couple of "sprays" in the morning keeps the store fully "perfumed" for the remainder of the day.

and will supplant a number of other varieties; that all the growers visited feel optimistic over the future and will run their ranges at full capacity now that the coal restrictions are lessened. Also that you can't twist a dog's tail without making him howl, as one member of the party learned to his sorrow. Many thanks Messrs. Burton, in behalf of all the Inquisitors. W. H. E.

Toronto, Ont. Canada

Business is fair this week. Compared with last year it is very good though smaller than the business done during October. Violets, Carnations and Chrysanthemums are more plentiful. The 'Mums are smaller than the show ones of last week and the price is appreciably smaller, being from 8c. to 40c. each. Violets (singles only) are $1.50 per 100. Carnations which are now arriving in quantity are retailing at $2, $3 and $4.

Miss Cotterill, who owns the Fernery on College st., and is still suffering from the effects of the influenza, is offering her business for sale.

The Point Grey Nurseries, of Royal, B. C., have been incorporated with a capital of $10,000. They have purchased the Royal Nurseries and will carry on the business of nurserymen, horticulturists, florists and gardeners.

O. L. Smith, florist of Smiths Falls, who is in the Western Hospital here, has had a leg removed, it being affected with gangrene.

The Dominion Seed Laboratory, at Winnipeg, Man., has been opened by the Canadian Government for the convenience of seedsmen, grain dealers and farmers. Seed of all kinds will be tested for purity and vitality. Twenty-five samples will be tested free for any one firm or individual each year. Tests of samples in excess of this number will be charged for at the rate of 25c. each.

A. W. Neal, in commenting on the florists' business methods, stated that too many florists in Canada and the United States give long term credits. He sometimes accommodates people up to 30 days, but does not want business from anyone who cannot meet such accounts promptly. There are too many losses from long term credits. Flowers are in the nature of luxuries so those who cannot pay cash should do without them.

Miller & Sons' greenhouses at Toronto have an area of over 5½ acres ablaze with beauty at present time, due to 100,000 Roses, 90,000 Carnations, 60,000 Chrysanthemums and 500,000 bulbs, to say nothing of Sweet Peas and Swansonia in place of Lily of the Valley not now obtainable from Holland. Freesias will be in the height of bloom at Christmas, and rosy Antirrhinum against the lace of Asparagus and ferns. The queen of the collection is the new Rose Columbia, an exquisite pink with a delicacy of scent very appealing. The flowers are a beautiful shape, up-borne on strong stems above the rather dark green foliage. It also has the merit of long life after being cut, much longer than some of the varieties shown in such great, beautiful profusion from the rich deep pink of the Mrs. Russell down through all the gradations of color to the waxen petals of the Bride. During the war, Mr. Miller employed many women at the greenhouses. Many of the men enlisted, but there are still a large number of experienced men supervising the growing. Miller & Sons ship flowers to far distant points in Canada. Great care is taken in packing these so the flowers arrive at destination as if freshly cut.

San Francisco, Cal.

Pacific Coast Hort. Society meets Dec. 7.

Victor Ferrari, of Ferrari Bros., returned to San Francisco last week to attend the funeral of his father, the late Emile E. Ferrari.

H. A. Hyde, of Watsonville, received word from France recently that his son, Harold A. Hyde, had received his commission as first lieutenant.

The reopening of theaters, schools and other public meeting places was authorized by the Board of Health to take effect on Nov. 16, and retail trade responded immediately. The long spell of funeral work taxed the capacity of the retail stores to the utmost, and the prices of some kinds of cut stock, especially 'Mums, went soaring.

The local supply of Calla bulbs has been about cleaned up for the season. There is a bigger stock of Freesias left over than is usual at this time of the year. Overproduction seems to be the cause.

William A. Dard, one of Anaheim's seedsmen, was a recent visitor, as was also W. R. Moliere, of the Fancher Creek Nurseries.

The November meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was cancelled on account of the recent epidemic, but the December meeting will be held on Dec. 7. J. R. W.

Portland, Ore.

With all the shops the word is "busy." The epidemic, although subsided considerably, is still keeping florists on the jump from morning till night. The local market is fairly well supplied with stock since 'Mums are in full swing, so the Carnation shortage is not felt. In fact, the last few days of sunshine have made Carnations fairly plentiful. The weather having taken a change to cloudy, the abundance lasted only a few days. Red is the sticker as few flowers of this color can be worked off at funerals and otherwise are not in demand. Roses, good and fairly plentiful, realize fair prices. 'Mums bring $2 to $10 per doz. Among the yellows shown, Marigold looms up well. Pompons, owing to the ban on parties and all social events, do not clean up as in former years, but the light colored ones find other good uses so that none go to waste. Among the smaller flowers we have the Bouvardias, Violets, Cecil Brunners. The first shipments of California Violets are arriving. Local Violets are fine but hardly equal to the demand.

Trade Gossip

F. H. Forshaw says the only trouble with the business at Pendleton is that flowers are hardly obtainable.

A. Rahn, who made Portland business a visit recently, was married at Vancouver, Wash., November 9. Returning he reports excellent business conditions at Spokane.

Geo. Rosia passed through the city from California on his return to Seattle.

The Nippon Floral Co. is cutting some excellent 'Mums, probably the best the firm has ever produced.

The Martin & Forbes Co. is cutting some select Roses and a goodly number at that. Columbia is doing well with this firm.

Henry Pfeifer is back on the job again. He says that he was too tough for the "flu."

Joseph Noble, one of the city's landscape gardeners, passed away after a brief illness.

Clarke's find it necessary to call on the office force to assist with the funeral work.

Lubliner's are showing an excellent stock of 'Mums and have their usual large stock of cut flowers.

Chappell's find business excellent. They are working long after the doors have been closed by the board of health order.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Are You Preparing for This Opening?

Four Million men returning to daily avocation, fifty per cent. will Marry Shortly—Publicity the One and Only Way to Secure this Business—How to keep Business Moving Throughout the Year—The Agency Business, Can be Worked Light or Heavy—How to Start an Agency Business—What Comprises Publicity—Florists, time has never offered you an Opportunity like This!

It will be very well up to the activities of the retail florists of the country as to how successful trade will be this coming Thanksgiving Day. As has been pointed out, never in our history has the opportunity for good business on that day been equal to that which presents itself for this coming event. But florists cannot afford to stop at the result of one day's business. They must continue on and on indefinitely, primarily directing their efforts toward a better trade for the next day coming than the day just over, and keeping an eye as well on the profits and extra sales to be made from the trade's Red Letter Days.

So it is that, coming across Allan N. Humason, a gentleman whose name must be almost a household word among the retail florists of the Middle West and territory surrounding, we asked him to write a story of his idea of what was to follow on the return home of our soldiers. Mr. Humason was drafted into the U. S. Army in September 1917, and since that time has seen about as much of the service as it is possible for one man to see. Rising rapidly from a private in the ranks he ends his war record in the Army Field Service of the U. S., a post of considerable responsibility. In the position he occupied, Mr. Humason has seen personally hundreds of thousands of our men as they embarked on the ships which took them abroad, and through conversation with thousands of these, from privates up, added to his own keen judgment, he has been able to form some very fair ideas of the future open to our florists through the return of these men. He believes prospects for the retailer are of the very best, but as will be noticed, in conjunction with all progressive men, he lays the onus of getting this business on the printed word. His advice is to advertise! advertise!! We commend to all his article which follows:

THE florist trade is presented with an opportunity at this moment the like of which has never heretofore been known. The work of the army is practically finished. Recent advices are that 1,790,000 troops in cantonments throughout this country and 47,000 naval reserves will be demobilized and discharged from the service within a remarkably short time. Business men are constantly on the alert for that psychological corner and that psychological moment, or the combination of both, to embark on a business venture, ofttimes obligating themselves to huge expense, in order to attain this end. Today, through a combination of circumstances the equal of which has never appeared an opportunity is offered whereby a good florist in almost any ordinary location can make his enterprise pay big returns and at the same time lay the foundation for a sound and substantial business in the future. How can this be done?

Four million men returning to daily avocation, fifty per cent. will marry shortly

There are approximataely 4,000,000 men in the military service of our country at present and probably 250,000 naval men. These men will all be discharged from the service shortly. Latest advices are that within a fortnight the army will commence demobilization of 30,000 troops daily and that 47,000 naval men will be discharged almost immediately. Stop a minute and think what this means! Who are these men and from where do they come? They range in age from 18 to 32 years. Financially, they are well taken care of. They are coming back to see wives, sweethearts, mothers and correspondents in every nook and corner of these United States. From my personal observation, I believe that fifty per cent. of them will marry shortly after their discharge, and I do not believe there is one of them who will not seek some method of showing his appreciation of the many favors to him while in the service. Sit back and dwell on this for a minute! Think what it all means to you! Over 4,000,000 male adults, equal almost to one-third the entire population of the entire country of France, coming back home to see their people and friends, many of whom they never expected to see again, and every man desirous of giving vent to his appreciation of the many little kindnesses done for him.

There is no business that should be better prepared to handle this home coming than that of the florist. Nature has given flowers to the world for just such purposes as this. Are you prepared for this business, or are you going to allow some other line to step in and take that which is legitimately yours?

Publicity the One and Only Way to Secure this Business

Now, the buying of flowers is going to be far from the minds of these returning men when they arrive in the dear old U. S. A., there are so many things they must think of first. Accordingly, your thought must be conveyed to them, and, inasmuch as they are not coming in to see you, it is absolutely necessary that you go out to "see" them. Publicity is the one and only way in which to do this. Remember when you buy publicity you employ a corps of salesmen who will work for you industriously or not, depending entirely upon the medium or mediums you use without any personality whatsoever other than that which you put into your ads, and saying only that which you want them to say.

Publicity, properly handled, is the florist himself calling on the trade, and should show the quality of his art, his methods and his personality. In fact it is nothing more nor less than the florist himself making individual calls on prospective buyers, offering seasonable merchandise at a time when the prospective buyer should be in need of it and citing reasons why they should buy. Now, if these "salesmen" appear today and do not appear again for three or six months, their "trip" will not pay, nor will the second "trip". These "salesmen" must call on the trade regularly and systematically, in order to get results and the "trade" must look forward to their coming. The "trade" must be advised what the market affords.

Accordingly, if you have never advertised before, start now. Your first ads. should be written with the Christmas business in mind, offering something seasonable, but bearing more and more on the Christmas business as each ad. appears, until within ten days or two weeks of Christmas, when you can come out strong for Victory and Peace Wreaths, Victory Corsages, Victory Baskets and Victory Bunches, keeping an eye all the time to the coming wedding and reception business which should result from the return of the boys.

A Thanksgiving dinner table decoration within the reach of all

How to Keep Business Moving throughout the year

Business should not be dull after the first of the year, and the cumulative results of your holiday advertising, together with the continuation of your advertising campaign, should carry you profitably through to Valentine's Day, 1919, and Valentine's Day, next year, should be a day long to be remembered from the florist's point of view. Likewise Easter and Mother's Day should be wonderful days, and if you will please realize that the cumulative results of your advertising grow the longer your campaign continues the thought of discontinuing your advertising will never occur to you. Right now, you must realize that in all probability there will be a shortage of almost all Valentine flowers, and this is just as true of Easter and Mother's Day, and it behooves you to start thinking immediately as to how to combat this drawback, but it is my opinion that if you will put your thinking cap on tight you will experience no trouble in finding a way out of the difficulty. Tact and good salesmanship will sell almost anything to flower buyers on those days.

The Agency Business, Can be Worked Light or Heavy

The Fall season is always a good time to inaugurate a campaign for the out-of-town business, whether with the trade direct or through agents. It has always been my opinion that the agency way of handling this business is the more satisfactory of the two, and it might not be amiss to go into a bit of detail here as to the manner in which these agents can be secured. The method outlined has been successfully tried by many large florists, and any florist who has in him that trait known as salesmanship instinct, will have no trouble bringing it to a successful conclusion.

How to Start an Agency Business

Agencies can be made to advantage in every village or town over 200 population, especially when surrounded by good farming territory. Ordinarily, local merchants, such as druggists, grocers, restaurants, general stores, or like establishments which come in daily contact with the people in a small town, make the best agents.

As an illustration, let us say that Jones the Florist is located in Fuller, Illinois. Fuller, Illinois, is a city of 50,000 population and has five railroads, the C. C. C. & St. L., I. C., C. R. I. & P., C. B. & Q. and the Penn. R. R. Thirty miles north of Fuller, on the C. C. C. & St. L., is the city of Reese, population 20,000, with a good florist whose opportunity to get stock is as good as Jones'. Jones will list the towns of 200 people or over between Fuller and Reese, disregarding the towns north of Reese for the reason that the train service from Reese is better than from Fuller. Next Jones will follow the line of the Penn. R. R. east. He finds that the first florist of a prominence equal to his is eighty miles distant, and that for sixty miles eastward the train service favors Fuller, that is to say trains run eastward oftener than westward, and that they run at a convenient time of the day; so he will list the towns of 200 people for sixty miles eastward. Next the Illinois Central System will be followed south. Jones ascertains that on this line he can ship for a hundred miles before the competition gets too strong for him, and he lists the towns along this route for that distance. The train service on the C. R. I. & P. also favors Fuller, but only for about fifty miles, and the Rock Island towns will be listed for this distance. Now, the C. B. & Q. runs into Fuller by means of a branch line which connects with the main line about thirty miles distant. There are several good towns on the main line of this railroad in which Jones would like to establish agents, but the train service only favors Fuller as far as the branch line, the train service from Bryan, which is on the main line, being so good as to make it inadvisable

Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 28

President Woodrow Wilson has issued an official proclamation for Thanksgiving Day which our subscribers have undoubtedly all read most carefully. However, it would do no harm to repeat the essence of the proclamation; here it is:

"It has long been our custom to turn in the Autumn of the year in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us as a nation. This year we have special and moving cause to be grateful and to rejoice. God has in His good pleasure given us peace. It has not come as a mere cessation of arms, a mere relief from the strain and tragedy of war. It has come as a great triumph of right.

"Complete victory has brought us, not peace alone, but the confident promise of a new day as well, in which justice shall replace force and jealous intrigue among the nations.

"Our gallant armies have participated in a triumph which is not marred or stained by any purpose of selfish aggression. In a righteous cause they have won immortal glory and have nobly served their nation in serving mankind.

"God has indeed been gracious. We have cause for such rejoicing as revives and strengthens in us all the best traditions of our national history. A new day shines about us, in which our hearts take new courage and look forward with new hope to new and greater duties.

"While we render thanks for these things, let us not forget to seek the Divine guidance in the performance of those duties, and Divine mercy and forgiveness for all errors of act or purpose, and pray that in all we do we shall strengthen the ties of friendship and mutual respect upon which we must assist to build the new structure of peace and good will among the nations."

WOODROW WILSON.

So far as we are aware, Thanksgiving Day has never in the past called for a strong demand for flowers in comparison with Easter, Christmas or Mother's Day. This year a marked change can be brought about, even if only undertaken at this last minute. The trade generally, without doubt, will have taken its cue from recent events and in all probability will have done more Thanksgiving advertising than in preceding years; also, the movements of our soldiers will have impressed the people at large with the importance of the day.

Two issues ago, before the armistice was declared, we ventured to publish four forms of suggested advertising having to do with Thanksgiving celebration. In this issue we are printing some suggestions for cards to be hung in retail shops and windows. Many retailers have their own artists who can delineate a good looking card in short order, but, if not, a card writer will probably be found right around the corner. Window cards undoubtedly attract and help business, and if these cards are supplemented by a window display of material suitable for Thanksgiving Day, with the prices attached, wherever possible, we have no manner of doubt that the combination will be found of value in producing more business for the day.

THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE staff has written out a few ideas for use on show cards, and if any of these prove of assistance to the trade, we will feel ourselves amply repaid.

FLORISTS EVERYWHERE
MEMBERS OF THE F. T. D. AND OTHERS

Whenever you receive an order for flowers from another florist—make every effort to fill it, and promptly at that.

Service must be the keynote—not only to your own customer, but in filling all F. T. D. orders sent you by a brother florist.

If you cannot fill the order at the time requested, write or call up the people to whom the order is to be delivered and tell them that you have a message to deliver to them from their friends, but that at the moment you are all out of flowers, but will satisfactorily fill the order at earliest. Immediately notify the florist who sent you the order of what you have done.

to attempt to ship regularly from Fuller. Accordingly, Jones will only use the branch line.

A list of these towns will then be submitted to any large directory or address house, with a request to be furnished with a list of names and financial ratings of two first class merchants in each town, preferably druggists, restaurants, grocers, general stores in the order named. This list can be obtained at a very reasonable price. Now that Jones has the names of his prospective agents, all that remains is to tell them his story. These will be told an agent is wanted in their town; that there is a demand for flowers in his territory, and that an agent on the ground floor can double or triple this demand with but very little effort; that none of his floor space is required to take care of this new business, and further that a commission of 20 per cent. will be paid on all business secured. The prospective agent must also be told what his initial investment will be, if any. Jones may see fit to give his agents a design book free of charge, or again he may wish to charge the price he is obliged to pay. This must be made known to the prospective agent in the first communication to him. The best manner to convey this information to a list of prospects is by means of a comeback postcard (a double postcard with the return card attached). A card of this nature can be read much more quickly than a letter, and the return card can be detached and dropped in a mail box with the minimum of effort. The return card should contain all information desired with the exception of the prospective agent's name, and his bank reference and space should be left for this purpose on the card. These come-back cards should be sent to at least two of the leading merchants in a town, and should replies be received from both, it is up to Florist Jones to choose the one he thinks best qualified. Jones will then furnish these new agents with design books, at the same time outlining to the agents the manner in which the business can be handled to the best advantage. It is up to Jones now to "educate" his agents and to keep them posted as to prices, etc.

What Comprises Publicity

Publicity for agents can be handled in various ways: newspaper, direct-by-mail and moving picture slides. Local conditions have a great bearing on which of these should be used. Usually towns like Fuller have daily newspapers, the circulation of which embraces the surrounding territory to a depth of fifty miles or more, and in that case it would be best to carry quite a large advertising campaign in this newspaper to cover both the city trade and the out-of-town business, with but very little advertising of other kinds. There are other good methods, however. Formerly, it was the policy of the largest florists in the Middle West to obtain from his agents a list of their flower buyers to whom he would send direct-by-mail literature imprinted with the agent's name. Of course, this was done only for the larger agents, and did not involve so much trouble and expense as would at first be imagined because this florist was a large user of direct literature, and the same copy was used on all of it, simply cutting out his signature cut and inserting that of his agents. This method enabled the florist to get a very low price per thousand on his literature and the expense involved in changing his signature cut was very small. The agents of course paid the postage. It will be readily seen that this method of handling allowed the florist to become acquainted with the names of his agents' customers and protected him in the event his agent changed floral connections.

Florists, time has never offered you an opportunity like this!

Once again, I ask, are you prepared? Florists, time has never offered you an opportunity like this. Think of the marriages, parties, receptions and what not that are to take place! Of course, when you want Violets and other stock the most you will be short, but in a crisis a good salesman can sell a buyer almost anything—develop that salesmanship trait, develop your advertising. Advertising is as essential to your business as flowers and plants. Here is an opportunity to inaugurate an advertising campaign with everything that tends to make for success in your favor. Any Fall season is a good time to inaugurate an advertising campaign and to make an organized effort for the out-of-town business, but the opportunity offered this Fall exceeds anything that has ever been offered you. The flower business is going to soar, the entire country is happy, every citizen is "well heeled" financially, and the demand for flowers should be unprecedented. All florists should share in this prosperity, but the florist who goes out after the business is the one who will lead the field in his territory.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association

In our last issue, referring to the future of the F. T. D., we mentioned "System" and "Service" as the two elements necessary to its widest success, System to control its operations, Service to render it impregnable to any form of opposition which might develop in the future. System and Service are equally necessary to the organization as an entity as to each individual member—they travel together.

When a minister thunders forth his invective from the pulpit upon the sins of the world and the sinners therein, the congregation is apt to absolve itself as not being of the class inveighed against—it's the other fellows. Whether the congregation of retail florists can free itself as readily is for them to determine. If they have developed System and Service to its furthest extent in the running of their shops then they are clear, but if they have left certain steps uncovered, they should hasten to get into line with the elect so as to be in position to reap the rewards which come to those who have effected these two great desiderata.

System in the operation of a business is not by any means new in the world's activities, but big business has been possible only through its development.

The word "system" contains but six letters. Studying Webster's definition one finds that this little two syllable word has a wonderful reach. One of its best meanings along the lines we are discussing is "a natural combination or organization of part to part." Another fitting definition is "a plan, scheme or method by which ideas or things may be interrelated; regular method or order; orderliness, as to have system in one's business."

The first meaning is perhaps the best adapted to our purpose—the orderliness whereby a combination or organization of part to part is brought about so simply that the ease with which one department fits into another can readily be designated as natural.

Men who wish to develop system in their business—those who in their youth have not had the opportunity for technical training and the development of the orderly faculties—should study the best books obtainable and take a course in a correspondence school.

A knowledge of systematic principles will apply equally to any line of business, and it will most assuredly facilitate the work of the florist who undertakes to rid his establishment of happy-go-lucky methods. System will be found in actual hard cash disbursement one of the cheapest of all business requisites; the cash outlay to

—OR—

THEIR FLORAL CODE AND DICTIONARY

By GEORGE H. O'NEILL

Lovers of flowers and their lore will find a treasure house in this interesting and comprehensive little manual. A dictionary of flowers covers more than thirty pages, giving the common names, in alphabetical order, of hundreds of flowers; each followed by the meaning of the flower and its botanical name. In the section "Messages of Flowers," the idea of the message to be conveyed by a flower is condensed into a single word, and the list of these words is arranged alphabetically. Opposite each word is placed the name of the proper flower and beneath appears the expanded message. A "Floral Calendar" gives the name of the flower appropriate for each month of the year, with its meaning, its botanical name, and a bit of verse about it. The mythology of flowers, with many interesting facts about them in modern life, fills nearly twenty pages, taking in alphabetical order thirty or more of the best known blooms. An explanation of the arranging of bouquets to make them carry messages fills another section, and advice about caring for cut flowers and a score of poems and quotations from famous poets about flowers complete the pages of this handy little manual of flower language. Of invaluable assistance to florists as a ready reference guide and as an instructive manual to amateur gardeners and lovers of flowers.

Can be sold by retailers, a 25c copy for the customer's own use and a $1.00 copy for the lady who is to receive the flowers.

install it in the florist business is trivial. Putting it into practical working process, though, requires time and patience; it is in these essentials so many fail. Most failures can be laid to non-observance of system.

So long as people continue to be born into the world, each with his own individuality (and perhaps a good many altogether without any individuality), there will never be perfection, because each man is prone to look at the problem in his own way. It is only when one has had the experience, or has made a study of the subject, that the essence of the subject is understood to have value, and the incentive comes to plan, arrange and endeavor to order one's daily business on a systematic basis. What system is necessary in the daily life of a retail florist?

More Illumination Permitted

Permission to florists and other business men to illuminate their store windows on "lightless nights" while they are open for business was recently given by the U. S. Fuel Administration. Better deliveries of coal, it is declared, make it possible to relax the regulations this far, but all other sections of the lightless night order must be adhered to.

The new order permits the illumination of store windows in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Michigan and Ohio, on all nights of the week while the stores are open, but they must not remain lighted after the stores are closed on the nights designated as lightless: Monday and Tuesday in Michigan and Ohio, and Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the other States named. The illumination of advertising signs or the exterior of buildings is still entirely prohibited on lightless nights.

It is pointed out that while the original regulations can be somewhat relaxed because of better deliveries of coal, the situation in New England and the other Eastern States north of Virginia is still serious, and it is intimated that no further relaxing of the regulations can be expected this Winter. In all States other than those specified, the regulations governing illumination are left to the State fuel administrator. E. A. D.

Letting Competitors Know

Albert M. Herr of Lancaster, Pa., makes a strong plea for cost accounting—Shows the relation that should but often does not exist between cost of production and sales prices—Declares his intention of keeping records of Geranium propagation for his own benefit and that of the S. A. F.—Urges other growers to carry out similar investigations

"Letting Competitors Know" is the title of an article in September System, that should be read by every florist in the United States. It opens with a detailed cost accounting method which a successful manufacturer adopted and explained to all his competitors. One of these, a narrow minded fellow, expressed surprise at the manufacturer's willingness to do this. The answer was "giving our competitors this knowledge will save us money, for they will learn to know their costs and we will be relieved from meeting competition which blindly cuts prices and is headed for bankruptcy."

The "Cost and Overhead" was suggested at St. Louis, and President Totty followed up with an appeal in the trade papers for volunteers to investigate cost production. This cannot come too quickly for the welfare of the trade and each individual connected therewith, no matter if his glass area is 1000ft. or 1,000,000ft.

Present day conditions demand not only a full knowledge of our business from a dollar and cents point of view, but it also demands cooperation. Until we learn to practise cooperation to its fullest extent (burying deeply all those petty differences and selfish ideas found among many of our trade), we cannot lay claim that ours is a business, much less an essential one. We are simply a conglomeration of effort returning a very meagre dividend on the money invested. On the other hand we appeal to all that is good and true in man and woman, so why should we not put our business before the world where it belongs and do that much more good?

Next to production publicity is the most important part of any business. I am a publicity crank, an ex-president of our Ad. Club, its present secretary, and a subscriber to the florists' publicity fund as long as it does publicity work. But what good is publicity unless we know the cost of production? Without this knowledge we are likely to make the price too high to encourage consumption or too low to warrant production.

AS a wide-awake retailer reading this department of THE EXCHANGE, you have noticed the cards of those who are using this means of securing orders from out-of-town retailers.

Some retail store men have this knowledge, but many have not. If this were not the case there would not be the wide variation in the selling prices one meets nor the cutthroat competition that has belittled our trade in the eyes of the buying public. A uniform system could easily be installed in the store and it is to be hoped that the present agitation will bring this about.

With the grower of mixed stock cost keeping is a much harder proposition. We are looking for someone to give us a good method. The specialty grower can, with little expense, arrive at a reasonably close estimate of production costs, and if he will be broad minded enough to pass it along, the grower of the same line, who has made no effort to get these facts and figures, will often sit up and take notice.

Costs will, of course, vary with conditions, climatic and otherwise, even labor varying considerably; in establishing a selling price for any commodity these must all be taken into account and, if this is done, the selling of stock for less than the cost of production will be eliminated and the trade benefit to that extent; for no business can be built up with a competition of prices below actual values.

Again, if the grower can by his figures show the wholesaler and the retailer the true cost of production, it will help establish a price that will in turn enable these men to pay him a living profit. In other industries, those who were formerly trying to "get each other" are now taking counsel together and working shoulder to shoulder in an effort to make their industry do its part in the present day great struggle.

It is up to the florists to follow this lead and cooperate shoulder to shoulder to make our business stand out as the essential part of the war that it really is. This it will not do as long as we continue our petty little differences and jealousies. There can be big days coming for the florist but not unless we meet them with a broad minded feeling of copartnership.

In response to President Totty's call for volunteers I, for one, am going to start a record of costs on the production of Geranium cuttings for a period of one year, as costs vary much at different seasons. These will be given to the S. A. F. to use as it sees fit. I hope my competitors, both in this and other cities, will do the same. We may make some mistakes but the aggregate ought to establish some sort of uniformity of price, the only method whereby good quality stock can be produced in quantities to meet the demand.

What are you going to do? Remember the term "slacker" does not apply to Army and Navy alone. We older and stay-at-home fellows seek to have this country and its business in the best possible shape for the boys when they come back to take up civilian life again.

Let us have plenty of discussion along these lines in th trade papers.

Starting an Agency Business

Many among the more prosperous of our retail florists are conducting a lucrative business through the employment of agents in towns and villages contiguous to their respective cities. In our leading article in this week's Retail Department much light is thrown on the methods of starting such a business. One of the requirements of success is the employment of a good book of designs, one copy of which can be furnished at slight expense to every agent. There is nothing better adapted for the purpose than the Album of Floral Designs compiled by THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE expressly for this use. We will mail you a sample copy of this unparalleled book for 50 cents, but would be well pleased to have you write us for further information, as we could then go into the subject more closely.—Advt.

Ladies S. A. F.

Through the death of Mrs. Geo. Kuhl and Mrs. Anders Rasmussen, the Ladies S. A. F. has lost two of its most valued members. They were among the first to join and by their pleasing personality, helped to make the Society a success. Our Album of Floral Designs (Solicitor's Design Book)

This highly superior book to any hitherto issued has proved a business getter of the first water—and no mistake. Thirty-six pages and highly ornamental cover; size 9x12 inches.

Eight Pages Are Printed in Wonderfully Attractive Color-Combinations

Four of these pages are in full natural color effect. The remaining four pages are rendered in black and white and green color effect. The entire eight pages are faithful, life-like reproductions, true to color, and consist of such subjects as are in every day demand. Over $500 was paid the engraver for the making of these eight color plates alone. The black and white illustrations, embracing a full collection of designs in every day use, are artistically rendered and simply superb. In all, the book includes 138 designs, every one a selected gem; also 25 emblems of leading American societies.

This Book the Greatest Money Maker Ever Offered

Nothing approaching the scope of this book has ever before been presented to the trade; moreover, it is so arranged that the customer will understand it to have been produced especially by you for your trade. It carries no advertising.

To push your business you will need 25, 50, 100, yes, perhaps 1000 copies. Send 50c. for sample book. If you are not fully satisfied with the value of the book, money back promptly.

Your name and address printed on front cover on orders of twelve copies or over. Price, delivery paid: 12 copies, $4.75; 25 copies, $8.75; 50 copies, $16.50; 100 copies, $30.00. Orders filled without delay.

Owing to increased cost of every item our next edition will have to be sold at a higher price. So better order now.

Midseason and late Chrysanthemums have been forced into the market ahead of schedule on account of the warm weather. Major Bonnaffon and Dr. Engelhard are over for the season, though usually counted on for Thanksgiving trade. Exceptionally good Eaton in yellow and white were offered last week; fine Turner, Chadwick, Golden Wedding, and Tekonsha continue to come in large quantities. The outlook is that the growers will not be able to hold many back for Thanksgiving. Those on the market for that day will be large sizes and prices will be stiff.

The influenza ban has been lifted by the local health board after having the lid on for five weeks. The fewer deaths have reduced funeral work, although a good demand for large funeral designs closed the week. Flowers and plants for various purposes are in demand, though hospital trade has fallen off. Never have there been fewer weddings at this season of the year. Prospects for good Thanksgiving Day trade are bright, especially owing to the peace news. Except for cut 'Mums, there will be a good supply of flowers, particularly Roses. The Carnation supply is rather short at present. It is thought growers are saving blooms for Thanksgiving. Hoosier Beauty, Shawyer and Ophelia are in good supply; Russell and Columbia are not so plentiful. Sunburst is the most plentiful yellow. The Lily supply is still short, but in view of the present large supply of 'Mums, this shortage is not keenly felt. Pompons are selling at good figures and there is a steady call for 'Mum plants. Sweet Peas are coming in fine shape. A good supply is expected for Thanksgiving. Violets, Pansies, Snapdragons, Lily of the Valley, and Stevia are other offerings.

Comments of the Trade

P. J. McCarthy, representing M. Rice and Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and the representative of the R. E. Gebhardt Co., manufacturers of artificial flowers, Chicago, Ill., were visitors to the trade last week.

During the campaign for the United War Campaign, Nov. 11 to 18, the lighting restrictions throughout the city were raised, so many of the downtown florist stores had patriotic window decorations, both for this event, and for the armistice signing celebration. A. J. Lanternier and Co. had a handsome display of 'Mums in good arrangement in their window, with the dove of peace, and Old Glory occupying prominent positions. The Freese Floral Co. was closed all day Nov. 11. A handsome flag of Immortelles attracted much attention to their window, which was well filled with practical arrangements of pompon and double 'Mums, Roses and Sweet Peas in baskets.

The New Haven Floral Co. has an extra large crop of 'Mums, including all the larger varieties. Its large crop of Roses, particularly Ophelia and Shawyer, is commanding considerable attention.

The heaviest demand for 'Mums ever experienced is the report of the Flick Floral Co., whose store force was obliged to work all day Sunday, on account of a large funeral.

Handsome specimens of Tekonsha, Eaton and Chadwick were noted in the flower shop of Ed. Wenninghoff, who reports good counter trade and funeral work, and an excellent out of town trade.

Miss Margaret Vesey, daughter of Judge W. J. Vesey, has issued a splendid report of the work done at the Hostess House at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky. She is assisted in the work by her sister, Miss Catherine Vesey, who has also been nursing there during the influenza epidemic.

The recent lifting by the Government of the building restrictions is understood to apply to greenhouses. So there is expected to be a boom in this line next Spring.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey report an excellent out of town business, and a good local demand for funeral pieces. They are looking forward to a brisk Thanksgiving Day trade, and are well prepared to care for all demands made upon them.

D. B.

St. Louis, Mo.

The Market

Schools and theaters are open again and an occasional bouquet of flowers for the theater or for the hospital can be counted on. Chrysanthemums have the stage. Pompons in all varieties are used up in funeral work. An abundance still continues. Roses in good supply are selling at good prices. They are quoted from $4 to $10; Russells from 5c. to 25c.; Carnations from 4c. to 6c., red 1½c. to 3c.; 'Mums 6c. to 25c.; Smilax very scarce, at $2.50 to $3 per doz. strings. Asparagus Sprengeri and other greens are in demand. A little Stevia is on the market at 35c. per bunch.

Retailers all speak of business as rushing in funeral work, but in other branches slow. The wholesalers are pushing and advertising holiday supplies.

News of the Soldiers

Reports from the London Miltary Hospital convey the news that Arthur Henry Wors, son of C. W. Wors, is now able to get about on crutches. Joseph Wors is in the U. S. Naval Hospital at Brest, France, slowly convalescing. He was wounded accidentally in the left foot, while on guard duty. Charles Wors, Jr., is in the U. S. Army camp at Kearney, Cal.; he will shortly get his honorable discharge.

Topics of the Times

The club meeting to have been held Nov. 14 was postponed to the 21st because of the influenza ban.

Wm. C. Smith, Wholesale Floral Co., has had a good week.

Leo Von Graeffen, formerly chauffeur for Windler Wholesale Floral Co., will open up an automobile repair shop in the wholesale district, catering to the needs of wholesale and retail florists. His headquarters at present are at Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

H. G. Berning's counters are filled with a fine assortment of all varieties in flowers. Henry has a habit together with his help of selling out.

Windler's wholesale house is one of the busiest on the line. Some of the largest local growers consign their stock to this firm.

C. A. Kuehn has little trouble these times in getting rid of the fine stock seen daily on his counters.

George H. Angermueller, who makes a specialty in florists' supplies, is busy with advance orders, especially Christmas novelties.

T. H. Weber's store is always beautifully decorated and the arrangements of his cut flower department are artistic.

Julius Schaeffer, manager of the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney's floral department, has had lots of experience having been designer for some of the best firms in the city. He reports good business and expects better now the war is over.

Advices from Harry Schelter, formerly chauffeur for Geo. H. Angermueller, from France, stated that all was well.

Grimm & Gorly did an immense trade at their side branch in East St. Louis. The armistice was celebrated Wednesday evening, Nov. 13, by a parade. 'Mums were sold in profusion. This firm in St. Louis does an immense shipping business, also a large local one. Vincent Gorly and his brother Frank are hustlers and everything in the store is up to date.

James Young, one of the pioneers, died last week. See obituary colume.

C. W. W.

Cleveland, O.

A leading topic of conversation in trade circles is the remarkable mildness of the weather, which is extremely favorable for business in general, although growers are a little uneasy on account of the early maturing of Thanksgiving stock. The saving of fuel, however, might be considered ample compensation, especially as everything sent to the market now is moved at good prices.

Although receipts of stock are liberal, at an early hour in the day the market is practictlly cleaned up. This is largely due to the growing practice of more and more retailers calling early in their trucks and taking increased purchases home with them. While this makes it harder for the wholesaler, compelling him to employ more help to take care of a morning rush, which soon subsides, it is undoubtedly the cheapest and most satisfactory of distributing large quantities of flowers.

The Thanksgiving 'Mums, ever welcome because of their vigor and robustness, are now with us, and are greeted by a brisk demand. Chadwick, Dean and Golden Wedding are prominent varieties, and appear more popular than ever. Receipts of choice late pompons are also liberal.

The week ending Nov. 16 closed a market completely destitute of stock. Business for the week was heavy. Many orders arriving late could be only partly filled, in some instances they had to be refused. Under such trying conditions, wholesalers find it practically impossible to give the preferred treatment to which long and faithful association justly entitle scores of patrons. Nor was there ever a time when prompt payments were of more advantage to purchasers.

Thanksgiving Day Prospects

Everywhere a bumper Thanksgiving Day business is predicted, and local florists are making preparations for it. As the usual Thanksgiving greenhouse stock is known to be inadequate for a greatly increased trade, the question of price and the larger employment of accessories are being carefully considered. There is much to be thankful for and money is plentiful; it remains for the florist to make the best of the opportunity and reap his share.

The regular monthly meeting of the Wholesale Florists' Credit Ass'n. was held on Nov. 20, at which current business was transacted.

Ringler & Son, Wellington, O., staged a highly successful flower show on Nov. 9. The salesroom and display house were filled with a fine collection of large flowered and pompon 'Mums, Roses, Carnations and seasonable plants. "Our object," said Mr. Ringler, "was to get the people to come to our place of business so we could show them what we had to sell. We put the place in tip-top order, and advertised the event liberally. Our efforts were rewarded by a large number of enthusiastic visitors, and we not only sold the greater part of our entire display, but feel certain that we received several hundred dollars' worth of advertising among flower-loving people."

William F. Raebel of Canton, O., who temporarily suspended business a year ago to assist Uncle Sam in winning the war, has reopened his old stand in the Auditorium Market.

Silvieus & Silvieus of Ashtabula, O., who recently consolidated the Faust and Lockwood business with their own, report a heavy volume of trade.

F. C. W. Brown and R. F. Emsley of the J. M. Gasser Co. spent Nov. 18 calling upon the Mentor and Painesville (O.) florists.

W. E. Copeland has the sympathy of fellow members of the florists' club because of the death of his brother, A. W. Copeland, of Vermilion, O., who died of pneumonia on Nov. 14. The obituary notice will be found elswhere in this issue.

R. E. Blackshaw of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., called on the trade here on Nov. 15 and 16. He reported a prosperous trip.

The new zone system plan of charging for deliveries was put into effect by the wholesalers on Nov. 18.—J. McL.

Denver, Col.

The demand for stock of all kinds is still greater than the supply on this market. Roses of all varieties are hard to obtain and the receipts are cleaned up daily. Carnations are improving; the flowers are getting larger and the stems longer, but the supply is short. 'Mums are scarce, owing to the fact that the past few weeks the growers have been cutting the flowers before they are half developed, and from the present outlook 'Mums will continue scarce for Thanksgiving Day trade.

There are a few good Sweet Peas, Snapdragons, double Violets and Calendulas to be had. Greens are scarce, and a number of the retailers have had ferns, Galax and Leucothoe shipped in from other cities.

General Jubilation

Denver went wild with joy when word was received that the armistice had been signed, and everything for which America had fought had been won. The celebration here continued without any let up for 24 hours. Business of all kinds was suspended for the day and everyone took part in the general expression of joy.

About Town

Emil Glauber always grows a fine lot of 'Mums for Thanksgiving Day, and this year his stock looks better than ever. White Eatons and Golden Wedding are his favorite varieties. On Nov. 15 he cut a White Eaton which measured 8½in. It was some 'Mum.

H. F. Hamlin has been busy in his Dahlia gardens, digging and storing his bulbs. He has about 200 of the best varieties and reports having had an excellent season. He is now supplying the stores with a few good 'Mums, which he has just started to cut.

A. E. Mauffs has been shipping quantities of cut flowers and designs to his out of town customers. Mr. Mauffs said he has about 200 Azaleas on the place; that will help some for Christmas.

Fred Hall has his houses in fine shape for the holiday rush. He has ten houses of Carnations, with plenty of buds, one house of Sweet Peas and 'Mums and five houses of American Beauty Roses, which look as if the crops would be on at the right time. He also has a house of Smilax and Adiantum; also a number of Callas coming along.

Miss Bessie Bowen and Miss Anna Limke, of the Bargain Flower Shop, who have been ill, are back at the store. Mr. Benson was much handicapped for help during their absence.

Sam Winegar is back with the Park Floral Co., after being away for the past three months.

The Colorado Seed Co. has been busy with out of town shipping orders. Mr. Root says that he has been shipping as far east as St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, N. Y.

D. S. Grimes & Son have cleaned up well this season on pompon 'Mums and are now cutting the last three benches of the Helen Frick variety. This firm will have no 'Mums for Thanksgiving Day trade, but the Carnation crop looks promising. The plants are strong and healthy and a mass of buds. Mrs. Scott of the firm is a real good booster for Colorado, having been in the flower business for a number of years and traveled extensively. She says that the flowers grown in this State are as good, if not better, than she has seen anywhere else.

O. W. Richmond, of the Boldt-Lundy force, is back at his post after a brief illness.

The flower department of the Barteledes Seed Co. has put a good looking delivery car into service. It was doing its bit on Monday in the Victory celebration, and was a good ad. for the firm. In connection with the flower department the firm will handle goldfish and accessories, birds and bird cages.

The Espelin-Warren Floral Co., of Fort Collins, Colo., is boosting the slogan "Say It with Flowers" by sending to its customers blotters bearing the slogan.

C. F. E.

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are cleaning up well. The supply has been fair and able to care for all immediate wants. 'Mums are in a good supply at this writing and meet with a good market. Thanksgiving Day prospects, however, are not as bright as they might be, insofar as this flower is concerned. The supply will be fairly large, but not as large as it has been in the past for this holiday. Carnations are in a fair supply and move well. Easter Lilies are somewhat scarce. Callas may be had. The few Sweet Peas that come into the market sell freely. Single Violets are offered; these, too, find a good market.

The Christmas Fund Committee has collected over $500 for Christmas remembrances for the boys in the florist's trade of this city and vicinity who are in the Service. The committee will mail the orders for "over there" this week and to the boys in this country later and make a full report of their work.

The City greenhouses in Eden Park had a 'Mum show last week at the greenhouses. Many thousand saw the beautiful display.

J. B. Joetz Sons, Saginaw W. S., Mich., have been sending excellent Sunshine 'Mums to C. E. Critchell. They are proving a novelty as well as good sellers.

Wm. Mayhall has received his honorable discharge from the Artillery Officers' Training School.

Visitors were Miss Fannie White, Lexington, Ky., G. W. Frisch, Dayton, O.; Robert Shock, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and W. C. Johnson, Memphis, Tenn.—TEDDY.

The Market.

Nov. 19.—There are seasonably large arrivals of cut flowers and greens in the wholesale market this week. The demand is much smaller than that of two weeks ago, but nevertheless normally large. Prices are moderate, but fairly firm.

American Beauty Roses are in larger supply and the demand is not as insistent, but prices remain at this writing about the same as last week, namely 50c each for the best specials, with occasional sales at 60c for extra special blooms. Hybrid tea Roses are in increased supply with a moderate demand and easier prices, that is about $1 per 100 for No. 3 grade blooms, $1.50 to $3.00 for No. 2 grade and $5 to $10 for specials in general, with some sales of specials of choice varieties at 15c. to 20c.

Carnations are in moderate supply and moving rather slowly at $1 to $3 per 100 in general.

Cattleya orchids are in smaller supply and that rather than a larger demand, has increased the price to 40c. to 75c each for blooms of the preferred varieties, but Percivaliana is selling at from 20c. to 30c.

White and pink Lilies are both moving slowly, the former at $8 to $10 per 100 and the latter at $1.50 to $5. Gardenias are meeting with little demand. Lily of the Valley is moving sluggishly at $2 to $6 per 100.

Chrysanthemums are in large supply, increased by recent warm weather, and are moving well at prices ranging from $1 to $3 and ocasionally $4 for the large flowered varieties and 10c. to 50c. for bunch varieties.

Violets are arriving in almost unsalable condition. the petals falling off the double varieties like rain. Both the doubles and the singles show the detrimental effect of warm weather.

There is little else in the market now except some Calendulas, Antirrhinum and a few Sweet Peas. The market is well supplied with greens, which are meeting with fair demand at quoted prices.

Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 28, is the next holiday for which usually there is a large sale of flowers. For this Thanksgiving Day it is confidently expected that the demand for cut flowers will be larger than is customary. The supply, on the other hand, will probably be smaller than usual throughout the country. This will have a decided tendency to bring to the New York wholesale flower stores, in addition to an increased city demand, larger requests from out of town florists, both those near the city and those located in the more distant larger cities. However, the normal arrivals of flowers daily and for holidays in New York City are nearly always large, larger in fact than in any other city in the country at least, and usually sufficient to satisfy the demands of all buyers. It looks now as if prices this Thanksgiving would be modertely high, but not so unreasonably high as to discourage buying and leave stock to be carried over into the days of small demand which usually follow a holiday.

There was noted this week at A. L. Young & Co.'s, 54 W. 28th st., a vase of flowers, called by J. A. Reinicke, University of California, Berkeley, Cal., Chinkerechee, a name which we are unable to find in any book. These flowers are those of a bulbous plant which grows wild in South Africa. They were brought in bud in a tin can from South Africa and were three months on their way. There was no water, we are told, in the can. They had on Tuesday of this week, been in Mr. Young's store about 10 days, and the buds had unfolded into flowers, and improved in beauty every day since their arrival. The blooms are white and resemble in form of flower and in flower cluster those of some species of Allium. We are told that the buds can be cut in Summer and are stored away to bring into flower in Winter. We would be glad to know their botanical name.

Henry Rohs died at his home, 312 Beta Place, Glendale, on Thursday, Nov. 7. Mr. Rohs was born in Brooklyn 34 years ago and was a well known florist, being manager for Trepel on Fulton st. The funeral was held on Nov. 11 and the interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. He is survived by a widow, two children and a sister.

William King Murray, 79 years old, died on Thursday, Nov. 14, at his home, 238 Amity st., Flushing, L. I., N. Y., of heart trouble. For nearly 50 years Mr. King was associated with his uncle, the late Joseph Harris King, in the nursery business, on Broadway, Flushing. He is survived by two daughters and three sons.

Plenty of Stock

Nov. 19.—In consequence of the two holidays of last week there has been a heavy supply of all kinds of flowers; in fact, it has not been possible to clean up the supply. This week business is picking up again and things look a little brighter.

There is a moderate supply of Am. Beauty Roses with a rather light demand. The best of the special grade blooms sell for 40c, with other grades correspondingly lower. Hybrid teas are fairly abundant and of good quality. The demand is medium. Prices range from 2c. to 16c.

There is a good supply of Carnations and the quality is all that could be wished for at this season. Prices are from 2c. to 3c., with a few extra fancy blooms at 4c. each.

There is a good supply of orchids, especially of Cattleyas and Cypripediums; the former is selling at $5 and $6 per doz.; the latter at $3 per doz.

Lilies are not plentiful and have a moderate call at 10c. to 15c. Lily of the Valley is scarce. There is a good supply of Calendula, Snapdragon and some Cosmos. Good Bouvardias in small lots find a good demand. Violets are more plentiful, but are going slowly at 40c to 50c per 100. There are a few Sweet Peas, which sell for $1 per 100. There is a good supply of short stemmed Pansies. 'Mums dominate the market and the supply is larger now than at any previous time; they are selling for $2 to $3 per doz. although a few fancy blooms bring higher figures. There is sufficient Asparagus and Adiantum. Plants, such as Cyclamen, Bigonias, Oranges, 'Mums, Crotons, ferns and Dracænas are selling well.

Trade Notes.

On Monday, Nov. 11, the stockholders of the Boston Flower Exchange held their annual meeting and election of officers at the market. The following officers were elected: W. C. Stickel, president, and Andrew Christensen secretary-treasurer. Directors: S. J. Goddard, Herman Bartsch, Charles Holbrook, Lester W. Mann, A. A. Pembroke, Chester Paine and A. S. Parker.

Samuel J. Goddard of Framingham is marketing exceptional blooms of Carnation Laddie. It brings a better price than any other Carnation. Among other stock that he is cutting are attractive blooms of a new scarlet seedling.

The National Association of Gardeners will hold a local conference at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Nov. 22. There will be several prominent speakers and matters relating to the gardening profession will be thoroughly discussed.

Edwin J. Welch, eldest son of Patrick Welch, was operated upon for appendicitis at the Scobey Hospital, Beacon st., Boston, on Sunday, Nov. 17. He is getting along nicely.

Mass. Hort. Society

The election of officers and annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held at noon on Saturday, Nov. 16. The following were elected: President, W. C. Endicott; vice-president, Nathaniel T. Kidder. Directors, R. M. Saltonstall, John K. M. L. Farquhar, George E. Barnard and A. F. Estabrook.

On Monday, Nov. 18, the B. A. Snyder Wholesale Co. opened its new headquarters at 21 to 25 Otis st. The writer on visiting the establishment on the opening day found it equipped with every modern convenience. It is most accessible to the markets. On the first floor there are 3600 sq. ft. of floor space, and in the basement 4600 sq. ft., thus giving ample room. The firm will manufacture its own wire frames and keep a full line of all florists' supplies. On the first floor there are two large ice chests, one 17ft. x 18ft., and the other 14ft. x 18ft. The office has every up-to-date equipment. The lighting is of the most modern kind and everything about the place is attractive and inviting. On the opening evening the company entertained 150 of 'ts customers and friends at the Elks' Club

Thos. Roland's Orange plants are in brisk demand. He is also supplying Cyclamen, Begonias and Erica melanthera from his Nahant greenhouses. At his Revere establishment he is cutting Roses.

F. J. Reynolds, the popular manager for Welch Bros. Co., Devonshire st., has the sympathy of his numerous friends in his heavy bereavement. His wife died on Nov. 11 from an attack of pneumonia, at her home in Dorchester, Mass. She leaves two little girls.

The wholesale houses are preparing for a big Thanksgiving Day business, and as things look now they will not be disappointed. If ever there was a time when we ought to be thankful it is thi- Thanksgiving Day. Flowers will be abundant. During the past week business at the wholesale was rather quiet. There were two holidays last week and that interferred with business.

Never before were the retail stores so brightly arrayed. 'Mum flowers are of much better quality than usual and make a gorgeous show. 'Mum plants are a feature in the displays. The retail stores report business as good although not as heavy as it was a few weeks ago.

The seed stores are exceptionally busy filling bulb orders. The bulbs came so late that people are hustling to get them into the ground before hard frost comes. Darwin Tulips are in fine demand, and Narcissi have sold well. R. C.

The Market

Nov. 19.—Directly after the armistice signing celebrations of last week the market settled down to its normal condition. There is no perceptible indication of an immediate boom, but everybody feels happy under the new and more prosperous prospective conditions. There is plenty of stock and buying is brisk, the shipping trade unusually so. Prices for all stock are satisfactory. Some items are selling for better prices than they have ever done before at this season.

The supply of Roses is about equal to the demand. There is no surplus. All stock moves freely from day to day. Medium and short stock is in better demand than higher priced fancy stock. Prices range from $3 per 100 to $10, $12 and $15 per 100 with Columbia and Mrs. Russell bringing considerably more.

Carnations are not coming in as plentifully as expected, consequently the supply is limited and prices are unusually high for this time of year. They have been selling the past week at from $4 to $6 per 100.

Chrysanthemums continue the leading feature of the market. It is evident the peak of the season has passed and the supply for the next few weeks will be decidedly smaller. Some growers expect to be all through cutting by Thanksgiving. All the late ones—Chadwick, Bonnaffon, Enguehard—are to be had on the market, indicating the season has reached the turning point. The supply of pompons is large. These and the poorer grades of the large flowering varieties are in oversupply. The demand for fancy stock was never better, having maintained good prices from the outset of the season. At present such stock sells as high as $5 to $6 per doz. Pompons are selling at 25c to 50c. a bunch.

Easter Lilies are bringing record breaking prices. Some fancy stock is selling as high as $20 per 100. There are enough orchids at list prices and the supply of Valley is sufficient for all demand, moving at a steady price of $6 per 100.

Violets are in good supply and are moving better since the celebration—both the Hudson River doubles and the home grown singles. These each bring 40c. to 75c. per 100. Callas are arriving in large quantities and Lilium rubrum continues in fair supply. Stevia has begun to arrive. The first Paperwhite Narcissus of the season have made their appearance. Galax, new crop, is selling for $1.50 per 1000. Boxwood is in fair supply and meeting with ready sale at from 25c. to 35c. per bunch. The supply of greens is sufficient for all demands. Fancy ferns continue high and indications are that they will continue so all through the season. Thanksgiving Day prices go into effect Monday,. All are slightly in advance of present figures. It is thought that the demand this year will surpass that of all previous occasions as the people have much cause for rejoicing and flowers will evidently be used more extensively than ever. Dealers have mailed special prices for the week and look for a good clean up.

General News

J. Austin Shaw of New York was in the city Saturday and Sunday on his way to California. While here he had several calls from various members of the trade at his room in the Brevoort Hotel.

C. Frauenfelder has received his full consignment of French and Holland bulbs and all hands are busy potting them up. Mr. Frauenfelder states that the transportation, including war tax, is about 80 per cent. of the original cost of the bulbs.

R. J. Parker, who has been connected with the trade as salesman, is at present in the Government service.

Anton Then, Jr,. has joined the traveling sales force of the A. L. Randall Co.

R. J. Mohr, who has been connected with the Randall Company for some time back, has severed his connection with the firm and will start in business for himself.

Harry C. Rowe had the family order for the funeral, on Monday, of Mrs. Augusta Lehmann, one of the proprietors of The Fair, a large department house in this city.

Frank Oechslin has received two carloads of Azaleas from California and has them potted up, enough to fill one of his large houses. When compared with the stock that came from Belgium before the war the plants are lacking in foliage. Mr. Oechslin says another trouble with the California grown stock is that the plants do not bloom all at once; some of the shoots blooming sooner than others so they never produce the full flowered effect the imported stock used to do.

At the inquest of Edward Neiman of Morton Grove, Coroner Hoffman of Cook County stated that he would recommend to the proper authorities that hereafter all nicofume liquid used by florists in their greenhouses as an insecticide be prominently labeled poison.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had a splendid sale of Chrysanthemum plants this season. Flowering plants for Christmas such as Cyclamens, Begonias, Poinsettias, Primroses, etc., are selling well. It is probable that all flowering stock will be sold some weeks before the holiday trade commences.

Allie Zech, chairman of the War Relief Fund for the florists and allied trades of Chicago, is making a strong campaign for funds. The fact that the war is practically over makes it more difficult to get contributions than if the fighting was still going on.

Joe Rehl, of the Flower Shop, and M. B. Lassen, both prominent florists of Racine, Wis., were in the city last week buying stock. They report business on a boom in Wisconsin.

An Apple Show under the auspices of the Illinois Horticultural Society opens at the Sherman Hotel Nov. 19.

H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has returned from a business trip to Florida, where he has been looking after his business interests in Orange growing.

Geo. Mattison, manager of the Sonster greenhouses at Elgin, was in the city recently. The annual Chrysanthemum exhibition at the Sonster greenhouses opened on Nov. 10. It has become a feature very season that Elgin citizens look forward to with much pleasure.

The annual Chrysanthemum show opened at the Garfield Park conservatories on Nov. 10 will continue until Dec. 1. The display consists of about 5000 plants comprising about 350 varieties. A special exhibit of new tuberous rooted Begonias is another feature elsewhere in the greenhouses.

Philadelphia

The Market

Nov. 19.—The market is ruling quiet, the principal call being for Mums. The latter are selling well. There are not as many in this market this year as generally. Most of the late sorts are now in, including Chadwicks and Eatons. Carnations are holding their own and it is stated that they are bringing better figures for this time of the year than for many years past. There is a considerable supply of Roses, which, however, are not clearing freely. American Beauty is also somewhat in oversupply. Orchids are moving slowly with a light supply. Easter Lilies are meeting with a light response. Stevia in the green and variegated sorts is to be had. Mignonette is increasing in supply. Sweet Peas remain quiet. Pompons are showing a little more activity.

Notes

Robert Jamison is of the opinion that the new Rose Premier is one of the best introductions of recent years and an excellent team mate to Columbia.

Recent visitors include W. McKissick and W. Lehr of Baltimore, and Jesse E. Curry of Portland, Ore.

Manifest expressions of sorrow were heard in the wholesale district on the news of the death of Sergeant William Sibel. His obituary will be found elsewhere.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., has opened its store again, following a three weeks' closing down while getting out bulb orders. J. Otto Thilow states the firm has little of anything left except some Paperwhites.

Alfred M. Campbell has a new Vim truck that is bringing daily a heavy cut of Carnations and 'Mums from the Strafford Flower Farm.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons look forward to a good Winter season with the resumption of social activities and the many probable festivities and celebrations which will take place.

With Christmas only about a month off most of the retailers are working on the holiday goods. Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., believes that this Christmas will be a record breaker for the florists.

Leo Niessen reports the arrival of the first Stevia, both green and variegated.

Victor Groschen has his entire place planted with Russell Roses, no other variety being grown this year.

P. M. Read is out of the pottery business, being located with Remington Arms Co., at Eddystone.

Wm. J. Baker is showing some excellent Mignonette for so early in the season.

In anticipation of running some of his houses cool this Winter Stephen Mortensen planted part of his range with Calendulas.

The Florex Gardens at North Wales will run their entire range this Winter, having enough coal now on hand to carry them through until March.

It is reported that Emil Lieker will not operate his greenhouses this Winter.

Indiana Florists' Ass'n Meeting

The November meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana was held at Richmond with about 50 members in attendance. Among those present were W. W. and Lincoln Coles of Kokomo, Anders Rasmussen of New Albany, A. Rieman of Connorsville, Mr. Frank of Portland, Mr. Hensley of Knightstown and Mr. Henley of Hartford City. The several establishments of the Hill Co. and Joseph Hill were visited upon arrival and the many interesting kinds of Chrysanthemums, Roses and Carnations given detailed consideration. Rose Premier, the new introduction, is in wonderful condition. Many people from surrounding States have visited these establishments lately. The Fred Lemon Co. has one of the best lots of Columbia on record and its cut is extremely heavy at present. The establishment of the F. R. Gauze Co. is in first class condition with a miscellaneous line of commercial varieties.

The business meeting of the association immediately followed the noon meal. E. G. Hill outlined the florists' brilliant prospects in the near future. W. W. Coles, Anders Rasmussen and others also spoke. It was voted to have a formal presentation of the service flag donated by John Evans, when all the boys arrive home and to have a special meeting and social gathering for this purpose. A bowling contest concluded the day.

Julius Dilhoff, now with Wertheimer Bros., and Mr. Adler of Philadelphia, were recent visitors.

As the epidemic is seemingly worse new business restraints are again to be effective Nov. 19. It is difficult to tell what effect this will have on the Thanksgiving Day flower trade, but it is hoped that changes will be made within another week. I. B.

Pansies, Carnations, Heliotropes

Would you please let me know through THE EXCHANGE how to grow Pansies with long stems? I have a thousand plants and the stems are not over 1in. long. I have a house empty; is it too late to plant it with Carnations for early Spring flowers for profit?—D. F. K., N. Y.

—To grow Pansies under glass with long stems, first, the soil should be very rich so that the plants will be very robust. Second, they should not be grown in a high temperature; 40 deg. to 50 deg. at night is plenty high enough. Third, they should be kept free from aphis. And fourth, keeping them some distance below the glass will tend to make longer stems.

It is not too late to set good Carnation plants in the benches now for Spring flowers, but we would advise you not to use poor, weak plants, as you would probably not find it profitable.

You can grow Heliotropes from seed, but most commercial growers propagate from cuttings. J. H. S.

Oilproof Cement

Cement which will not be affected by oil is made by mixing glycerine and litharge to the consistency of a thick paste. This will be found very handy in repairing cracked oil reservoirs or in making an oil-tight joint between two metal plates. The cement should be applied as soon as it is mixed, since it hardens very quickly.—Cemetery Beautiful.

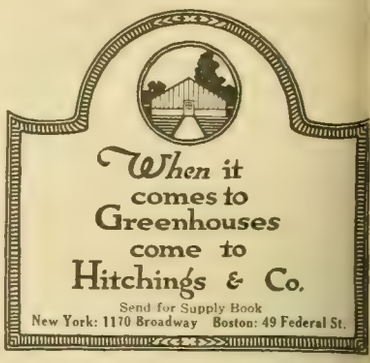
BRATTLEBORO, VT.—Carl S. Hopkins plans to move his flower shop, some time in November, to the Crosby Block, occupying the former store of Leonard & Rose.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—Marshall Fowler, of East Main st., who does extensive truck gardening is building a new greenhouse in the rear of his home.

LAWRENCE, KAN.—The Barteldes Seed Co. contributed 52 sacks of Peach pits for the making of charcoal for gas masks, during the recent drive in Kansas for material for that purpose. These pits had been purchased by the company for seed and their value, if computed at their original cost, would doubtless represent a considerable sum.



Water For The Greenhouse
—a regular, dependable supply of it, all year 'round and always under good pressure, can be obtained most economically by installing a Caldwell Tubular Tower. Simple, strong, safe. You can erect it yourself.

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES
Z-I-N-C-O
WHAT IT IS
Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O
Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft.

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O
It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

A Couple of Comments On Ease of Installation
E. H. Sunbury of Wamesit, Massachusetts, writes the following:
"The Skinner System of Irrigation is the simplest and easiest to install as well as the most practical I have ever heard of."
This is what Mr. R. Schaffler of Wheaton, Illinois, writes:
"The Skinner System can be put up by any handy man."

Heid Kerosene Heater
The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.
By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.
WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?
With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.
You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

A TIME SAVER and HANDY REFERENCE
OUR STOCK AND MATERIAL INDEX, PAGE 807

Now for Greenhouse Business

FOR the past year we have been running our Factories on 90% war work. To turn from Greenhouse buildings to munitions, steel shelters and other articles entirely foreign to our usual product was no small task, but we did it, and the products were entirely satisfactory to the Government. We still have considerable work to do to finish up our Government contracts, but we can handle any Greenhouse work from now on. We have a good size stock of Greenhouse materials on hand and can ship promptly.

We believe the demand for flowers next year will be greater than ever. Florists will need more growing space to meet this increased demand. Get in on the ground floor and have the space to produce the flowers to meet the increased consumption. If you decide to build next year, begin to plan for it this year. It's your sure way of having your houses in time for early planting.

Save Coal on Greenhouse Boilers

May we send you on a month's trial, prepaid, a Coggeshall Air Tube Cleaner to clean your boiler tubes? It creates its own air pressure with the use of low pressure steam.

Specially Adapted for Greenhouse Boilers

It cleans your boiler perfectly in four minutes, while running. It does away with the hand method. It saves its cost before the trial is ended. It can be returned, express collect, if you do not find it to your interest to purchase the cleaner. It lasts a lifetime. There are thousands in use. The price is $12.00.

We complete in this issue the publication of the letters received bearing on the prospects for the immediate future of the trade. Since these letters were written there has been a letting down of the bars to industry which had been set up through war conditions and this regained freedom should give greater emphasis to the points made by our correspondents

John S. Carter, President Nicotine Mfg. Co., St. Louis, Mo.:

In my opinion the first effect of the armistice of Nov. 11 ll enable the grower and the manufacturer supplying : needs to stabilize their businesses. The rising costs of ›or and products entering into the production of fruits d flowers have made it almost impossible to keep over- ad expenses and costs accurately.

I believe that upon return to normal conditions the grower :d the manufacturer will be able to determine reasonable ling prices for their products, the result being a reason- le and uniform profit. Many manufacturers have ick to pre-war prices without really knowing that their :: profits did not justify it.

F. T. Giblin, Giblin & Co., Heating Apparatus, Utica, N. Y:

My profession is heating. It is also my hobby. Thirty- ree years engaged in it has proved now how little about ating is generally known by users. This applies to rists, I think, more generally than to others.

Shakespeare says, "He jests at scars who never felt a und." Previous to last year the florist was a fatalist. : knew he had to have heat and was careless about the paratus to obtain it; the fuel and management to secure He looked upon the heating as a necessary evil to be rne patiently like the influenza.

The sharp prodding he got last Winter probably gave n the "wound"; brought to his attention the fact that ating is "some subject." He did not consider it so fore but it is to be hoped that he will now consider it ›re carefully and cut off one of the great wastes in his siness.

Every florist is a factory manager. He should use the ne investigation, forethought and careful methods ich characterize the sucessful manufacturer. What does profit him if he gets a high price for his flowers and throws) price, and some more away in heating. Cut your sts and increase your profit. Every florist should, in his n interest and in the interest of the country look closely er his own heating apparatus; see wherein it is lacking, sult those able to advise him and put his heating on scientific basis, which is nothing more nor less than a nmon sense basis.

There is another aspect the florist should consider and velop if he has a keen eye for the future. Standing in trench shooting at the other fellow and running the x of being shot makes a soldier think less of the un- portant things and more of the real things of life and the beyond. This country is going to pay less regard to man who accumulates dollars and more to the man o develops all the good there is in his own and in others' tracters.

Two million boys have faced dirt, privation, hardship, in, wounds, and death. What they have faced and over- ne has made men of them. It has brought out their od qualities and has broadened their viewpoint of life. ey will come back here and insist that the rest of us k at life matters in a sane way. They have looked o the Life Beyond and have seen fine things, and will missionaries in preaching them.

The employer will see in his employee one who is his other and may need his assistance and encouragement, d to whom he is obligated to be just and generous. e employee will see in his employer a fellow workman whom he is obligated to loyalty and good service.

The seller will see in the buyer a person in need to hom the best service and information should honestly given. The buyer will appreciate in the seller the rdships of the seller's life and the need of forbearance.

The politician will recognize how little and mean he s been in the past thinking of himself and his party ly, and will discard such methods and work for the good his country.

Parents will recognize their obligations to their children the way to support and guidance and children will ciprocate in the way of obedience and respect.

The florist is a man who furnishes expression by means flowers to all these feelings. He teaches the value of e beautiful by the fragrance and beauty of flowers. e can enlarge greatly the use of them when love, friend- ip and kindliness more generally exist. He can educate ople in the language of flowers and get them to talk in is language.

A florist keen to the advertising value of this subject n say, "Give flowers to your friends while they live, not ter they are dead. Let them hold flowers in their living and not in their dead hands. Make the interchange of flowers general and ordinary rather than extraordinary."

Heretofore, flowers have been thought of only in connection with funerals or weddings; make them a language in every transaction in life. Talk up this feature. Write it up. Advertise it and it will surely stimulate business. Get together and exchange ideas. Talk about methods and collect the facts in connection with your own business experience. Give them to your fellow florist to use in his general conduct of business.

Florists are in the business by direct divine command through Adam and Eve. They are the messengers between the material and the spiritual. Now that the war is ended and people are inclined to regard each other more highly, the florists' opportunities to expand their business will greatly increase and it will be their own fault if they fail to develop these opportunities to the utmost.

By E. G. Hill of E. G. Hill Co., Wholesale Florists, Richmond, Ind.:

Victorious peace ushers in a new era for the people of the United States in which the florists of the country will find new conditions and new problems, which with all the other trades, they must study carefully, and work out for the best good of the greatest number. Readjustment in every line of business is foreshadowed without doubt; the question before the florist is how our trade shall meet the new order. Employees under glass and in the store must be well paid when good service is given; it would be unjust to anticipate anything else. This will require greater efficiency all along the line, and a better grade of stock must be produced. To accomplish this we must improve conditions in our glass structures; cleanliness and hygiene in the greenhouse is imperative; too much stress cannot be laid upon this point, for most diseases and many insect pests can be laid directly at the door of dirt, with a consequent loss in net returns that the average florist-grower is loath to acknowledge. Shortage of help the past 18 months has brought home to every grower the loss sustained by not being able to do the right thing at the right time (or sooner) along the line of attention to details of cleanliness as well as in the handling of his stock.

Furthermore, every florist should be a student, in the line of technical literature, surely in the use of the trade papers. As the children in our schools are taught, he must learn to concentrate his attention on what he is doing, and to form the habit of close observation; this will make him a valuable helper to the employer who will be glad to share with the worker the profit thus secured to the business. Careless, inefficient help is another serious cause of loss to the employer, and a plague to the section man and manager.

The florist trade at large must keep an intelligent and wide outlook on changing conditions and demands of the market. The flower buying public insists on novelty and variety in home adornment, decorations, and especially in its gifts of flowers; "something different" is wanted, and, holding on to obsolete varieties, will certainly show in the turn-over at the end of the fiscal year.

Better grown stock, better packing, closer grading, by intelligent and better paid help are essential, and we feel sure that the whole trade realizes the necessity of better prices and of prompt payment for standard stock. Aiming at these and similar improvements we are very optimistic as to the future of our trade, one of the most beneficent in the whole range of occupations, notwithstanding its recent descent to the plane of non-essentials, from which it has so quickly risen to its rightful position among the fine arts of horticulture.

By Arthur T. Boddington, Pres., Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., Seedsmen, New York City:

The armistice and treaty of peace shortly to follow, mean, for the horticultural trades, boundless opportunity for service—the service of spreading knowledge of gardening to a specially receptive public.

Many families have only in the last two years had their first taste of fresh, crisp, home-grown vegetables. They have "got the habit" and with it an interest in growing flowers as well as vegetables.

America's attention, turning from absorption in war activities, will soon be focussed on reconstruction in its broadest sense. At the close of our Civil War thousands of men discharged from the armies instantly turned to horticultural and agricultural pursuits, with the greatest benefit to themselves and the Nation. From the bitterness and intensity of the war spirit the natural reaction must come and it will take the form of interest in the beautiful and spiritual, in gardens and flowers, in music, art and literature.

Whatever effect the war may have had on European horticulture, the brief period of diminished activity in America will result in a rebound that will carry the interest far beyond any point ever reached before.

America's financial position has changed from a debtor to a creditor nation. The Southern States face the prospect of a bonanza in the high and unrestricted price of cotton, and there is every reason to believe that American financial, manufacturing, mining, and agricultural abilities will be equal to the task of European reconstruction, and war-delayed new construction in America, which will inevitably keep us all busy for years to come. The reduction in the cost of labor and commodities will, I believe, be very gradual; both are likely to remain high for some time.

Commercial florists have every opportunity to secure proper prices for their products, sufficient to compensate them for the reduction in glass area under cultivation, due to coal restriction and the increased cost of labor, coal, materials and taxes. In this connection every florist in this country, more especially the retailing grower, will do well to ponder carefully Otto Amling's address to the Chicago Florists' Club, published in the Nov.16 issue of THE EXCHANGE, and similar articles which have appeared of late.

On the large private estates ornamental horticulture and the refinements of gardening under glass will shortly show increased activity, not on the pre-war scale at first, perhaps; that is not to be expected until the period of adjustment is past, until the allied armies in Europe are demobilized and repatriated and until the differences between labor and capital are more nearly settled than they are at present.

There is an unheard of scarcity of flowers and flowering plants. The public will be flower hungry all Winter; a climax will be reached at Easter. Wise is the florist who prepares for this demand by starting crops as early in March as possible in the greenhouses that are closed.

In the future I see only gradually increasing prosperity for the horticultural trades, a prosperity which will continue indefinitely.

To march with the times we must exert ourselves to continue all trade propaganda, support horticultural societies and clubs, flower shows, cooperative advertising and the horticultural press, and last, but not least, put forth our own individual efforts and example.

By Herman P. Knoble of Knoble Bros., Retail Florists, Cleveland, O.:

The signing of the armistice on Monday, Nov. 11, meant much to mankind. The florists' business as a whole should benefit materially. Let us examine the records: two million men in France, one million in camps in this country, all potential users of flowers; they consitute the younger set, those who spend money freely. When these come back to their normal existences and are again in civil occupations, they will want the things they have not had in the past eighteen months. Some of these the florists can supply. The United States, as a whole, will have more to do in supplying the world with its needs than any other nation.

The ships that were built as transports will be converted to consign raw material and finished products to all parts of the globe. This will produce abundance of business, and with business will come demands for labor at good wages. Good wages will develop demands for things we call "higher life," or those that are not absolutely essential to existence. The florist will get his share, especially in this period of reconstruction, when needs for happy environments will make for peace of mind and happiness. So florists, prepare for a big business. Those of us who will analyze the facts carefully and prepare are bound to be satisfied with the results.

Business has been good, and with this added stimulus, the increase will be enormous. This war should teach us all the brotherhood of mankind, and with it will come a general recognition of those fine qualities of life, satisfied only when properly expressed in contentment, aided with flowers.

By Albert Pochelon, the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich.

The effect of the signing of the armistice, or rather the effect of the ending of the four years' war on our trade is not an easy proposition to speculate on, but why worry about the future when the present has so much work for us all to take care of?

Our trade is peculiar: we follow humanity from the cradle to the grave; from the most joyous events to the most sorrowful days in human life, and we do not sell merely flowers, but on many occasions furnish comforting thoughts which cannot be replaced by anything else,either by the rich or the poorest.

Therefore no matter which way the wind blows we must ever be ready to serve the public. Personally, I am not at any time a pessimist and I don't know of many florists, when it comes right down to the point, who are pessimistically inclined. Of course we heard last Summer the question of what was to be done with all the 'Mums that would be grown; that everybody would grow 'Mums and that after the 'Mum season all the houses would shut down 50 per cent of their glass. Yet the 'Mum season is almost over and the grower and retailer never received better returns, in spite of the widely heralded overproduction. Even though it is deeply to be regretted that most of these 'Mums were used for funeral work, yet think of the comfort they brought to the bereaved ones.

Humanity needs flowers today as much as anything else; we can find no better proof of the truth of this than by comparing the flower-buying public of today with that of five or ten years ago. Not so many years ago flowers in the Winter time were obtainable only by the so-called wealthy or aristocratic people of this country, but times have changed in this land of democracy, for flowers are loved and cherished by the workingman as much as by the rich. The wage earners have never before been so able to earn enough money to buy flowers since times have changed.

The cross itself is made up of small-leaved red Alternanthera; the filling around the cross, of Santolina. The edging is of large-leaved Alternanthera (var. brilliantissima). Nierembergia is employed for the outside of the frame and Kochia for the background

While the retail florist business for the past few years may have suffered, on account of there being fewer social functions, etc., we have been able to keep up, and when those who have worked with us in our shops come back they will not and should not find disorganized business; they should be received with open arms and should step right back into their old places. There will be plenty of work for them, because the American people will have to have their celebrations, and thousands and thousands of parties—soldiers and sailors welcome parties, let us call them—will be given and how could they be welcomed without flowers; flowers in their rooms, about the house, and especially on the table?

Remember that this war has taught many a man or woman the greatest lesson of his or her life and that is that piling up a lot of money is not the best thing in the world after all, especially when in doing so you begrudge yourself the little enjoyments like flowers, music, etc.

With the keenest interest have I watched the flower-buying people in my own shop for the past few years. We have done the best cash business when we had absolutely no social functions and we have had the greatest volume of business within the last few years; it has been only in the past two years that total annual sales decreased instead of showing a normal increase from year to year and these two years are the only ones in my whole business career of 25 years in which this has happened.

Revolution seems to be a word that is used a good deal today, yet I can hardly find a trade that has had as many revolutions as the florist trade. Think back awhile and you can recall the time when a florist who did not grow his own stock was not considered a florist at all. No one ever thought that some day some florists would grow only Carnations for cut flowers, another only Roses and so on. That still another would grow only plants and never intend for a minute to sell them to the public, for he could find enough customers for his goods among the retailers and would have no time to try to peddle them to the public.

For such a man finds that it pays him far better to devote all his time to the growing end. Moreover, he can produce better stock. You will find on investigation that every grower who has devoted his efforts to a specialty, the thing that he could do best, and has stuck to it, has kept on improving.

Numerous changes, large and small, have taken place in the retail as well as in wholesale and other branches of the florist trade, and other changes will continue to come up in the future. Revolutionists are today found among florists opposed to the National Publicity Cqmpaign which, nevertheless. has been the greatest and most beneficial undertaking that could ever have been inaugurated for our profession. In five years from now the amount that will be spent by the florists for publicity will make the present campaign look like a joke. Any retail florist who is 50 per cent florist and 50 per cent business man who, for a minute denies that the slogan "Say it with Flowers" and the national advertising of this slogan has helped him to ring up sales on his cash register is either too greedy or too selfish to acknowledge it.

So many new channels for our profession have been opened to the progressive florist in recent years that no matter what the future may bring there will always be new opportunities.

Of course it would not do for me not to ring in the F. T. D. At the Cleveland meeting I tried hard to get our members to loosen up and get down to figures. A few did so, and more will do so next year and perhaps their returns will be more complete, in consequence of which they will have a greater surprise in store for themselves than they imagine. This field has grown to some respects far beyond the expectations of even the most optimistic man. Not for any personal benefit but for the benefit of every member individually would I like to have him know how much annual business, both outgoing and incoming, he is really doing and how much his monthly bills are from the telegraph companies. Just think of it, today one of our prominent F. T. D. men of Boston sent us his October account, or receipted bill, showing telegram charges sent from his store alone amounting to $113.50. Now if all the F. T. D. members would help by making a compilation of their bills from the telegraph companies and show the difference between today's figures and those of five years ago, I think we could bring almost enough pressure on these companies to use our slogan. "Say it with Flowers" on every one of their telegraph blanks. And remember, at that, they would not have to spend an extra cent for printing their blanks.

There are hundreds of men in our trade today who, although perhaps not widely known, are willing, without selfish aims, to do something for the betterment and building up of our trade. All they need is encouragement and appreciation from their fellow tradesmen. Most men of such type soon overcome false criticism made by pessimists and faultfinders.

In view of the facts before enumerated how can the future for our trade be anything but the brightest, providing that we do our best in serving the public and enabling them to "Say it with Flowers," educate the public in how to "Say it with Flowers," when, where and why to "Say it with Flowers," and do our work and arrange our flowers so that they will "say it to the public." Last of all remember that relations between florists also needs publicity and a whole lot of education in many different ways, yet one way seems the key to best relationship between one florist and another; that is to "Say it with Flowers; at the end of 30 days say it with a check." If this slogan is too long you may cut it short but don't cut the 30 day term any shorter, especially now during the period of construction.

By S. S. Skidelsky, Plant and Bulb Dealer, Philadelphia:

During the darkest days in the history of our business, at a time when many a grower found himself faced with problems that were well-nigh staggering (shortage of coal, shortage of labor and the high cost of everything from a toothpick to a gallon of gasolene and a bag of boneme a few enthusiastic and energetic men in the trade conceived the idea of launching a publicity campaign assuring that in times of sorrow as well as occasions of joy the American people are not averse to

"Say it With Flowers"

I confess I was one of the doubting Thomas', opposed to such an innovation at such a time and under such adverse conditions. I must admit now—by way of a further confession, that I was entirely in the wrong. The publicity campaign is bearing splendid fruit and the trade as a whole has already learned to recognise the full value of national collective advertising.

And while our business was put in the non-essential class, with embargoes placed upon the importation of Lily bulbs, shrubs, plants, etc., and our growers hampered on all sides,—there were but comparatively few in the trade who fell by the wayside. The majority, the great majority, let me emphasize, survived. Not a few have prospered; the rank and file are meeting their business obligations in a way that does them credit.

This is noteworthy in view of the fact that during the duration of the war our so-called "best people" or society folks put a ban on "pink teas," balls and all sorts of social events, wherein flowers and decorative plants play a prominent part.

A brief, retrospective view may not be amiss, if we are to take a glance at the immediate future. And the future, judged by the hardships we endured while the world was engaged in a life and death struggle, certainly holds out most alluring promise. To put it briefly: if we survived—and in numerous instances even prospered—on allotments of coal, with little or no help, is it not reasonable to expect that with our bunkers full of coal, all embargoes lifted and our boys from "over there" back on their old jobs—is it not reasonable, I ask, that with the restoration of normal conditions a normal and prosperous business be restored as well.

The day the armistice was signed, the day Democracy triumphed over Autocracy, will date the beginning of a new era in this great country of ours.

There will be economic and industrial readjustments; high prices must prevail for a time; for a long time, perhaps. The grower must realize conditions and adjust his business accordingly. Prosperity will come his way, provided he does not close his door against it. The time of the $1.00 Geranium is no more; nor should a $2.00 bouquet be as big as the one of four years ago. Coal, labor and greenhouse material will necessitate doubling his prices—or he cannot possibly survive.

By Adolph Kruhm, Secretary of Beckert Seed Store, Pittsburgh, Pa.:

As optimists, we view the situation confronting the seed trade. We can see little but bountiful prosperity ahead. Our reasons for this belief are three fold: First, the attitude of the general public toward gardening is changing considerably. Second, there will arrive directly, from France, some two million boys who, for the first time in their lives, had an opportunity to study intensive gardening at first hand. Third, because of seed crop conditions in Europe, Europe will have little surplus to offer for export for several years to come. In view of the fact that America will become the seed storehouse of the world so to say, this offers great possibilities to develop export relations with South America.

As to point number one, we are satisfied that of the million war gardeners, a million will remain in the ranks of food producers. Many who heretofore looked upon the contemptible little piece of ground called the back yard as either a liability or a dumping place for tin cans and rubbish now look upon it with new respect in the light of a possible source of food supply. Hundreds of thousands have, for the first time in their lives, tasted real quality vegetables gathered right at their back doors. We feel that this experience will stimulate further activity, so credit must be given at this place to the wonderful work done by the National War Garden Commission in helping to bring about this desirable condition.

Point number two, the boys in France offer even greater speculative possibilities. Those boys have felt keenly the need of fresh wholesome vegetables. They have seen where the French High Command thought enough of the needs of the men on the firing line to have vast vegetable gardens right back of the fighting area. With thorough, commonsense American logic and reasoning they will argue that, if fresh vegetables are good for the man behind the gun they are equally good for the man behind the hoe. We look to the boys now returning to make this country appreciate more the beneficial effects of fresh vegetables and gardening.

As to point three, day before yesterday Mr. McAdoo requested from Mr. Hurley steamers for coast wise trade with Latin America. South America is the unexploited

Cyclamens

Care of the Growing Stock

From now on and for some weeks to ne you are not likely to notice Cyclamen edlings making much headway, but at- tion must be paid to them if results e wanted. If still in flats the plants e all right if they have sufficient room development. Rather than crowd them nsplant into 2in. pots. I prefer se to 2½in., because they don't need latter for the present and better re- lts can be had by shifting the stock ain later on. A Carnation house tem- rature will do nicely for them—rather ittle cool and short, stocky plants than warm and a soft growth. To allow little pots to become dust dry means stunted growth. The soil should al- ys be kept moist. In order to avoid er watering sufficient drainage must be vided. Cyclamens like plenty of wa- , the leaves as well as the roots, but r drainage will soon finish the best plants. There is nothing more im- tant in growing Cyclamen than to keep plants going at all times. Stock e stunted is hard to get back into pe again; in fact, it rarely pays to her with. Careful watering is as essary as the soil one makes use of, not more so. An overdose of water sn't hurt as long as it can get out of pot quickly.

Lilium Candidum

For Easter Flowering

With Easter coming so late it will be l worth while for the retail grower try at least a few Lilium Candidum if sound bulbs with signs of growth top can be planted at once, at least air percentage of such should come flower by the end of April. While as ot plant this Lily doesn't make as active a specimen as Lilium longi- um the flower heads are showy. In absence of our regular Easter Lilies re should be no trouble in disposing all you can get into the market at a d price. Lilium Candidum will not d much forcing. If you have to re- t to pushing the plants do it in the few weeks after the pots are a mass roots and the buds well under way. the present place the freshly rooted stock in a cool house to give the roots a chance to get busy, after Christmas. A house just a little below 50 deg. will do. As the plants start into growth, due to being well rooted, a little more heat may be applied. But if you don't get them into flower for Easter there will be no trouble in disposing to advantage of every flower later on. After all it may be a good thing to be short on Lilies for next Easter. Your patrons will appreci- ate them so much more the following year when there shouldn't be any trouble in getting our usual supply from Japan. In a few more years from now let us hope to make use of home grown ones as well.

Table Ferns

Keep Your Bench Filled Up.

From October until Christmas is the time the small ferns for dishes and pans are sold, but don't empty the benches without refilling. The retail grower needs small ferns more or less up to Spring, so if there happens to be a batch of just a few hundred left on hand if such are shifted into 4's they will make most use- ful plants for early Fall requirements. The specialist has at this time small ferns in flats ready for 2½in. Fill up the empty fern bench with these and let them come along; they will come in handy next February and later. What about your stock for Christmas? If you have to buy do so now.

Freesias

If you have bench room at all don't carry the plants along in 4in. pots and most likely have them suffer before they are ready to set bud. A better way by far is to plant them out—even such as have been grown on in pots up to the present time. One can never do Freesias as well when the roots are crowded into a small pot. Plants in the benches pro- duce better foliage, longer and better stems and finer flowers. Such as you wish to flower in pots for Christmas will be benefited by a light dose of liquid cow manure once a week for you will find the pots a mass of roots, and you wonder where the soil went to. Still time for planting more bulbs if you can get them. If you wish to they may be started in 4in. pots; six bulbs to the pot is quite enough. You need a cool house for them. The more time you allow for those late planted ones the better the results.

Pot Grown Perennials

You are surely enough of an optimist to look forward to a great Spring plant business in 1919. More stock than ever will be sold for the beautifying of home grounds. Every florist handling bedding stock should prepare a good sized batch of potted perennials and such others as we are likely to class under perennials belonging to the hardy border plants. Such stock as we sell as pot grown dur- ing the Spring and Summer months con- sists of field grown plants lifted now, heeled in a coldframe and potted up dur- ing the Winter. After that the plants may go back into a frame. By this method one may deliver and plant Phlox, Pyrethrum, Coreopsis, Gaillardia, Larkspur, Columbine, in fact almost any- thing, all Summer long; not that late planted stock will be as showy the first season as such as has had a chance to become established outdoors during the early Spring months; but with pot plants your planting season is prolonged for several months. This means doing more business. Maybe you have on your own grounds good things worth while lifting now and potting up after Christmas or you intend purchasing some; no better time than the present. Hardy plants, both biennials and perennials, are the money makers for a good many florists, especially those located in the country towns. But many hundreds of thousands more could be sold and money made if more attention were being paid to this branch of our business.

Asparagus Sprengeri

If you want to cut Asparagus Sprengeri more or less all Winter and the plants are on benches you must feed the plants; otherwise they will give out usu- ally at a time when you are most in need of green. Liquid cow manure answers as well as anything. If you can't obtain such easily, soak up sheep manure and use it. It is nothing unusual to see a bench of Asparagus at a florist's estab- lishment during Midwinter when every- thing green has been pulled or cut off clean down to the soil. The plants will remain in that state until near Spring. This is a poor practice. The plants suffer too much by such treatment. It is too severe. Let a few fronds remain al- ways, no matter how badly you need them. The next crop of green will be ready sooner for it. If you want some extra heavy hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri, toward the end of De- cember is a good time to plant, about five 4in. pot plants to a 12in. wire basket. With just a little care some wonderful specimen baskets may be had by the fol- lowing Spring; that is if you don't keep on cutting them back during the Winter. On the other hand, if you have call for the green and it will pay you to draw on the baskets, there isn't much harm done after all.

Primula Malacoides

A cool house and plenty of root room will suit these Primulas best. Confine them in small pots and a temperature at 50 deg. or over and they will soon go back. Plants coming into flower during De- cember will keep on blooming practically all Winter; but keep them cool in large pots and with perfect drainage. For Spring flowering 2½in. plants shifted into 4in. now will be best, or if you have room in the Violet house. Why not plant a few of them out? They will pay you as well as anything you can grow.

English Primroses

Some of the large flowering English Primroses make desirable stock for in- doors. If you want variety by all means plant a few, at least as a crop to follow the Chrysanthemums. Plant them out on a bench and be sure not to expose them to a high temperature for the next three months. When in bloom you should have no trouble in selling the flowers in a cut state. If you lift the plants and pot them up with ordinary care they won't mind the lifting in the least. As an Easter plant you couldn't ask for any- thing finer. For that purpose the plants may be overwintered in a coldframe and brought in by the end of February. With Easter so late it will be more a matter of holding them back under glass rather than forcing them.

Dept. of Plant Registration

Public notice is hereby given that A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., submits for registration the new Geranium here described:

Geranium General Pershing, single; color, vivid salmon, shading to light salmon pink toward petal edge; foliage bronzy green; medium size; compact in growth and extremely free and continu- ous in flowering, hence an improvement on existing varieties in this color for bedding or decorative purposes.

Any person objecting to this registra- tion, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Cinerarias for Easter

When should Cinerarias be started for Easter blooming? What is the difference between dwarf and half-dwarf?—W. S. G., N. C.

—If by the word "started" the in- quirer means the sowing of the seeds, so as to have blooming plants at Easter, we would say the seed should have been sown last August or September. For a suc- cession of blooming plants seeds are gen- erally sown in a coldframe facing north from May to September, and the young plants picked out into thumb pots, be- ing shifted into larger pots as often as the pots become full of roots. The dif- ference between "dwarf" and "half- dwarf" Cinerarias is just that which the terms indicate, namely, that the "half- dwarf" variety is half way in size be- tween the dwarf and the tall type.

Red Spider and Mildew on 'Mums

What causes red spider and mildew on 'Mum plants when in bloom? Also why do Bonnaffon 'Mums turn yellow at the edge of the petals before the flower is fully developed? Does hot water heating cause the trouble just mentioned?—H. C. H., Pa.

—Red spider is usually present where the atmosphere in the greenhouse is too dry; mildew when the foliage is subject to a too moist and cool atmosphere at the same time. Frequent syringing with cold water applied with force will help keep away the red spider, and a proper amount of heat and free air will tend to prevent mildew, which, however, if present may be remedied by dusting the foliage with flowers of sulphur.

If by the word yellow, the inquirer means the yellowish or brownish shade a flower puts on when it begins to wither, we would say this may be attributable to the insect and disease mentioned above.

The hot water heating is not respon- sible for either the presence of red spider or mildew. J. H. S.

Garden Ass'n Postpones Meeting

The Woman's National Farm and Gar- den Ass'n, which was originally to have held its annual meeting in conjunction with the Mid-West Horticultural Exhi- bition, at Des Moines, will probably post- pone its conference till Spring. The date of the Mid-west exhibition was post- poned from Nov. 6 to 8 to Dec. 10 to 13, and the Woman's National Farm and Garden Ass'n decided not to hold its conference in December.

More Dutch Bulbs Arrive

The long expected steamship Skipton Castle of the Cunard Line arrived in New York Harbor on Thursday of last week, and docked on Monday of this week. This steamer brought 3100 cases of Dutch bulbs. It is reported that the most of these come direct to seedsmen in New York and other cities from the Holland growers, to fill orders sent late. The opinion is expressed by a man who represents in this city a noted firm of Holland bulb growers, that even if the steamer bringing these bulbs left Holland, as reported, as long ago as Oct. 23, the bulbs will be found in good condition, and even if growth has started slightly, the bulbs will not be damaged by this as long as they remain in the cases, but if they have started growth they should be planted directly after the case is opened.

An interesting letter to Charles C. Littlefield, head of the flower seed department of Peter Henderson & Co., 35-37 Cortlandt st., from Walter J. Feeney, formerly Mr. Littlefield's assistant, but recently wounded in France and now in the hospital in England will be found in our "Florist Soldiers" column this week.

Geo. F. Struck announces that he has resigned his position with the Heatherdome Seed and Nursery Co., to take effect Nov. 30, and that he will not be connected with the florist trade in the future.

William Grantham, a gardener well known in this section of the country, and for a time employed in the seed store of Weeber & Don, 114 Chambers st., died in France, Oct. 17. Mr. Grantham was an Englishman, or Scotchman, we are not sure which, and in Aug., 1917, he enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He was gassed while fighting last Summer and later in another battle had his legs shot off and died in the hospital after undergoing an operation. He was single and we believe had no kinsmen in this country.

There is noted this week an unusually large and interesting display of Winter vegetables in the windows of the store of J. M. Thorburn & Co., 53 Barclay st., from the trial gardens of this firm at Moroton, Conn. Among these were some vegetables not often seen, such as Chinese Cabbage and Green Glazed Cabbage.

Chicago Seed Trade

Next Seed Trade Convention

The selection of Chicago as the meeting place for the 1919 convention of the American Seed Trade Ass'n is a matter of much interest to the trade. This will be the thirty-seventh annual meeting and will be held in June next, the exact dates to be announced later.

I. Rosnosky, a well known representative of the seed trade, has severed his connection with Vaughan's Seed Store after a year's engagement. Mr. Rosnosky has joined the sales forces of the W. W. Barnard Co., having started his work with that company on Nov. 25. He has made many friends in the trade since he came to this city from Philadelphia, about a year ago.

Bulb dealers continue to have much trouble in getting sufficient stock to fill orders. It is reported that there is a large shipment on the way but the fact that the West was visited by its first snow storm on Nov. 22, followed by a complete freezing of the ground, which will for a time at least stop outdoor planting, leaves no particular outlet for stock coming in so late in the season.

The Everett R. Peacock Co., 4013 Milwaukee ave., is having its retail store entirely remodeled. New shelving and bins are being installed and the store when completed, will be one of the finest in that section of the city.

Lieut. Gordon Boyd, stepson of Charles Dickinson of the well known Chicago seedsmen, Arthur Dickinson Co., was killed in action in France on Oct. 5.

The W. W. Barnard Co. reports a good retail demand for all bulbs, as the result of a strong advertising campaign in the local papers. C. O. Wilcox, traveling representative of the company, attended the meeting of Southern Seedsmen's Ass'n at New Orleans, La., Nov. 11 and 12 inst.

Henry Michels, Golden Glow Corn specialist, proprietor of the Golden Glow seed farm at Malone, has moved to Fond du lac, Wis., where he will conduct a seed business at 34 East Third st. For the past ten years he has been handling garden and farm seed. He will have greatly improved facilities in his new quarters. However, he will retain ownership and complete control of his farm.

U. S. Vegetable Seeds to Europe

It is hard to tell just how the opening up of European countries to trade will affect the seed business. In the first place there are very few seeds we use in this country extensively which are used in Europe. They do not use our Beans and would not have them. The same is true of our Cucumbers.

Of course they can use Carrots, Beets, Cabbage, Peas, Onions and Radishes, but of these Carrots and Onions are about the only ones on the list of which we can expect a surplus this year.

From what we have heard recently there is quite a quantity of Carrot seed in France which was to have been shipped into Russia, but which was left in that country. We do not look for any large surplus in any line with the possible exception of Beet and Carrot, and perhaps Spinach, of which there seems to have been a lot raised last year in the United States.

The last few weeks there have been offered in this country by several European concerns and by brokers European grown seeds at exceptionally low prices, but we feel that the seed trade should be very careful in taking on any of these lots as we fear that they might be of poor germination. We believe that some of this stock is all right of course, but we believe also that a great deal of it may consist of clean-up lots which have been lying around for an indefinite period.

Our opinion is that you are right about flower seeds; that there will be a bigger demand for them next season. People have gotten rather flower hungry, if we may use the term, having devoted a large amount of space to vegetables and neglected flowers. For the same reason we are of the opinion that the florists will enjoy an exceptionally good trade this Winter. However, these are merely our personal opinions.

Mrs. D. C. Hartman, of Hartman's Flower Shop, is in a local hospital suffering from a fractured collar bone and several bruised ribs, sustained in a recent collision of a jitney bus and an army truck.

Members of the local florists' trade are "up in the air" over a recently published interview by Rabbi Martin Zielonka, of this city, to the effect that the practice of sending floral offerings to funerals should be stopped and the money used for local charities. H. W. B.

Louisville, Ky.

Business conditions continue excellent. Louisville florists at present are getting about all the business they can conveniently handle without being crowded and actually rushed. Some slight improvement is shown in the labor situation as a result of peace and slackening up in some industries which have been rushed with war work.

On November 14 it was announced that florists of Kentucky would be allowed to burn soft coal screenings, and stock whatever percentage of such material they desired, without regard to the 50 per cent. provision on steam coal. This announcement is expected to prove a great help. Many growers are already laying in stocks to be on the safe side.

Joseph Molck, florist of New Albany, Ind., has a broken leg and a broken collar bone, suffered in a collision between his wagon and an auto a few days ago. He has several medals won in the Franco-Prussian war.

The Kentucky Society of Florists expects to hold a meeting about the first Wednesday in December. Secretary August Baumer stated that this will be the first meeting of three months.

William Walker and Herman Kleinstarink, Sr., both broke into the grandfather class a few days ago when a baby daughter was born in the family of Herman Kleinstarink, Jr., who is doing Government work at Youngstown, Ohio. Mrs. Kleinstarink before her marriage was Miss Bertha Walker, and was connected with the William Walker store on Fourth st. Herman Kleinstarink was with his father in the growing and retailing business, and was formerly president of the Kentucky Society of Florists.

Missees Genevieve and Eunice Walker, daughters of Herbert Walker, head of the F. Walker Co., have recently gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., where they will attend Pratt Institute, taking special art courses.

Mrs. Herbert Walker, who was reported ill a short time ago, has entirely recovered, and is about again.

The Jacob Schulz Co. has almost one entire side of its store greenhouse given over to crocks of various kinds, filled with bulbs, which are beginning to sprout.

Milton A. Reimers, of E. G. Reimers & Son Co., was recently accepted and reported as a candidate at the Central Officers' Training School, Camp Taylor, but expects to be released within a few days as he had hardly started training when peace was declared.

M. Adler, the well known New York pin merchant, was recently in Louisville, where he called on the trade.

The Dennison Mfg. Co., handlers of fancy boxes, stickers, cards, specialties, etc., has closed its Louisville office. In the future it will handle Louisville through Cincinnati. R. B. Lawrence has been transferred from Louisville to Chicago.

An attractive window display was recently arranged at the store of C. B. Thompson & Co., a small figure of the Goddess of Liberty being the central idea.

Mr. Knisley, representing the paper box house of Aull Brothers Co., Dayton, Ohio, was a recent visitor in Louisville.

Joseph Able, secretary of the C. B. Thompson & Co., is back on the job again after being laid up for some weeks with influenza.

The finest crop of Chrysanthemums seen on the Louisville market in years is now being sold. Pink, white, yellow and mixed varieties are plentiful this season, and colors and sizes are unusually attractive.

Mrs. Mary Tracy Hackel, 85 years of age, widow of the late John Hackel, a prominent florist of Louisville, died last week at her home, 1625 Madison ave., of the infirmities incident to old age. Mrs. Hackel came to this country from Germany when 23 years of age, and has been a resident of Louisville for 60 years. She is survived by four daughters and three sons, Louis, Albert and Edward Hackel, Misses Victoria and Lulu Hackel, Mrs. Joseph Steinmetz and Mrs. James Sargeant. O. V. N. S.

Washington, D. C.

The feature of the market, in advance of Thanksgiving Day, was the general shortage of 'Mums; this condition was due to the fact that the hot weather of some weeks ago brought out the flowers fully two weeks ahead of time. They brought, before the holiday, from $25 to $40 per 100, according to size and condition, the favorites on the market including Major Bonnaffon, Chadwick Supreme, white and pink Chadwick and Golden Wedding. The season is nearly over for bunch 'Mums. There was such an open Fall that enormous quantities of outdoor stock was offered. This had the effect of keeping down the prices that ordinarily prevail at this time of the year.

There is a shortage of stock generally and in many instances that which comes into the wholesale houses is apportioned among the trade. The retailers are called up on the telephone and told what they may have and it is usually the case that all that is offered is immediately taken. Prices are very reasonable, considering the season of the year and general business conditions. Sweet Peas are offered at $1 and $2 per 100. Double Violets are selling at $1 per 100, although declared to be worth more.

It is a little early yet for Snapdragon, and the quantity which is now being offered locally is small; it is bringing from $4 to $6. The demand is good for Cattleya orchids and they bring $9 per doz. Carnations continue scarce and there are not enough to be had to fill all orders. Easter Lilies are sold at $15 per 100, but are in little demand because of the competition offered by 'Mums.

Buying More Freely

"There is a noticeable increase in business since the signing of the armistice," said George C. Shaffer, when asked the cause of an unusual flurry in which he was getting a share of increased trade. "Many people feel that they are released from their resolutions not to buy anything unnecessary during the war, and now they are making almost lavish purchases. It is surprising how many people cut down their flower buying as a war measure, although flowers were not classed by the Government. The end of the war is also bringing about a return of society events; dinners, dances and receptions. I look for a big Winter in Washington, as far as the florist business is concerned. This will be held back only by possible shortages of stock brought about by cutting down the fuel supplies allowed the growers."

Other florists take about the same view of the future as Mr. Shaffer. William F. Gude, speaking for Gude Bros. Co., has declared that the year 1918, regardless of all the restrictions operating against the florists in the National Capital, will prove to have been the most successful in the history of the trade here. Mr. Gude said that his firm had to turn away business, often involving large orders, because it was impossible to get clerks enough and there were not hours enough in the day to handle all of the trade that was accepted. "During the influenza epidemic," said Mr. Gude, " we could not possibly keep up with the rush. We got all the workers we could, even employing high school boys and paying them men's wages, and worked long hours, but many times we had to refuse orders for designs because we had reached our limit of production for that day."

The flower stores have all returned to their old hours of opening and closing, the ten o'clock opening order having been revoked by the District Commissioners.

Fire apparatus from several departments were called to the Botanic Gardens on Friday, Nov. 22, to put out a blaze in the engine room. The fire was a troublesome one and the department had to fight hard to prevent its spreading to other property nearby. The damage to the building and its contents is estimated to be about $1000. E. Club Meeting

The Lancaster County Florists' Association meeting started with a visiting trip somewhat hampered in numbers on account of the labor situation, but a round dozen of us went in three machines. The first stop was made at the establishment of H. D. Rohrer, where we found the usual good batch of Carnations nearly all Supreme and Matchless, a house of Sweet Peas, one of Calendula and Myosotis, and a number of houses filled with Chrysanthemums principally Bonnaffon, and one with Seidewitz and Dolly Dimple both in top quality. In addition to his cut flower business he is a heavy grower of Primula, which, as one of the party remarked, he had by the million. We also saw one bench of Cyclamen, well set with buds and flowers, and a bed of Callas that had been moved over from the establishment of Lemon Landis before the fuel situation had been settled, Mr. Landis having his houses planted to Winter vegetables.

In the B. F. Barr greenhouses we found the usual display of stock grown to supply his large retail trade at the store, pot plants of all sorts and in every stage of growth, Carnations, Roses and Chrysanthemums all of high quality, especially the 'Mums, of which he will have an unusual supply for Thanksgiving Day. The new boiler house is a model of efficiency and almost fireproof. In the nursery end of this place a tremendous business is being worked up both locally and for shipping.

At Rudolph Nagle's we found the Chrysanthemums about all cut with Mignonette, Yellow Daisy, Myosotis, Calendula and Snapdragon started for the Winter supply of cut flowers as well as several houses of Sweet Peas, among which is an extra fine white sport of Yarrawa that he expects to work up into a regular stock; here we also found several houses of Lettuce in various stages of growth.

Enos Kohr was out of the Chrysanthemums. The houses will be run without heat for the Winter. His immense Carnation houses were planted to three varieties, Matchless, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alice, a perfect sea of buds. The cut was enormous all through October. If anyone in this section will make money out of Carnations this season it is our friend Enos. The help problem is partly solved by the employment of women for tying, cutting and disbudding Carnations.

The evening meeting was held in the storeroom of B. F. Barr, our regular place having been commandeered by the War Work Committee.

The paper for discussion, written by Mr. Polworth, on the Commission House of the Future, was discussed by the various members, the consensus of opinion being that the grower and the commission man should be in hearty cooperation with each other all the time, and plantings should be discussed and decided a year ahead whenever practical.

M. J. Brinton gave what he called a rambling talk, but which is always full of good advice. He thinks that the past year has taught us all to get more out of our places with less expense and that many hitherto undiscovered leaks may be eliminated and work for better efficiency in the business. He also emphasized the fact that good business policy is not to invest our money in new glass as fast as it is made but to have some in reserve for just such occasions as we have experienced the past year.

He recommended that the club get in touch with W. G. McAdoo and write a petition asking for better express service for cut flowers and plants, said petition to be signed by every member of the club. This was unanimously agreed to. It is hoped every club in the United States will follow suit.

The club invested from its treasury $300 in Liberty bonds which made a pretty near 100 per cent. investment.

A victory social session will be held in the Brenneman Building, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 10, with Messrs. A. F. Strickler, Lemon Landis and H. K. Rohrer as managers. There will be bowling, billiards, pool, cards and eats.

Notes on the Trade

The retail shops are all making fine displays of Chrysanthemums and doing a fair business with an outlook for an exceptional Thanksgiving week.

Plants are being made a feature in all stores and good stock is in evidence. In this connection H. A. Schroyer ordered from Philadelphia a shipment that has been on the road a week and has not shown up yet, so there is much room for improvement in the express situation.

With the laying off of almost 2000 workers on war material in this section the help situation will be somewhat relieved. It certainly has been a serious one, especially close to Lancaster, as even girls or women were not available on account of the numerous mills that employ female labor almost altogether.

The change in the fuel situation will have little effect on the florists' plans as it came too late to make profitable adjustments. Toward Spring most of the idle houses will be again started into action, some with vegetables, some with vegetable plants and some with bedding stock.

In this section we are hoping that the postal troubles will soon be over, as being accustomed to have THE EXCHANGE for reading on Sunday but not getting it before Monday and sometimes Tuesday or Wednesday when we are too busy to give it proper attention, takes the edge off the pleasure its Saturday arrival always brings.

Steve Kost, formerly with the Kasting Co., of Buffalo, but now with the Quality Brands Co., of Cleveland, manufacturing plastic products for the sealing up of boiler settings, roof coverings and glazing compounds, motored into Lancaster the past week and did a nice business in these lines. He is also the inventor of a soil pulverizer and is well known to the trade. ALBERT M. HERR.

The week just closing will see the end of 'Mums. The recent warm weather brought on the blooms faster than was anticipated, and left few flowers for the Thanksgiving Day trade; only a few blooms of Bonnaffon, Seidewitz and Dolly Dimple were on the market for the holiday. The 'Mum season has been excellent for the grower, as the demand for flowers during October and the early part of November enabled him to sell his stock at higher prices than was ever known in the flower business. This refers especially to the early varieties, which are usually sold at low prices.

A Bright Future

The ending of the war will surely have its effect on the flower business and great possibilities are before us. The grower who drops out this year is making a great mistake, as the coming season will be one of the best the florists have ever known. When the boys return the demand for flowers will be even greater, as weddings and social affairs will be numerous. The wide awake florist is now preparing for this increased business and can see nothing but good times ahead. Think, are you prepared to take care of the increase that is bound to come?

Business has been holding up well for the past two months but is not as brisk as it was several weeks ago. At this writing stock is somewhat scarce, but we do not have to meet the extra heavy demand that we had several weeks back. Roses are arriving in small quantities; this is because of the dark, cloudy weather which we have had for the past ten days, but all growers report a good crop for Christmas. Carnations are also scarce and much in demand; $6 per 100 is still the top price. Lilies are coming in more plentifully, and larger cuts are looked for from now on. Pompons will disappear with the large 'Mums.

Violets, Daisies, Valley, Calendula and a few Sweet Peas are seen on the market. Violets are slow in moving as the quality is still poor. Am. Beauty Roses are not going rapidly but better sales are expected as soon as 'Mums leave the market. Stevia has made its appearance and sells well. There is no oversupply of greens. Christmas greens and supplies are moving out fast, especially Boxwood, which seems to be scarce.

H. A. Irwin, of Monessen, has been confined at home ill, but hoped to be able to attend to business by Thanksgiving Day.

A. W. Smith, Jr., is able to be at his office again, after an illness of several weeks. N. McC.

Business at present is a little slower although there is plenty to keep busy. The stores are making splendid showings in the windows of 'Mums, which find a ready market at a good price. Roses are plentiful but Carnations keep up in price.

Tattlings on the Trade

Miss Kate Peirce, daughter of Wm. Peirce, has been operated on for appendicitis and is home, well on the way to recovery.

Frank Reynolds, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen has been sick at the Post Hospital.

Mrs. Ernest Chamberlain lost her mother by death recently.

John Sylvia has left the employ of Peter Murray.

Wm. E. Mosher was sick with the influenza the past week but is able to be around again. James Garthly has been attending to business during Mr. Mosher's sickness.

Fred Reynolds has left the employ of Julius the Florist. He contemplates opening a new store in the near future. FRED REYNOLDS.

Worcester, Mass.

Although business the past week was much better than the week previous, there is still a great chance for improvement. The florists have taken advantage of their spare time by preparing for Thanksgiving Day trade, which they have reason to believe will surpass the business of several years past on that day. Much advertising has been done and stores never looked more beautiful at this time of the year.

Local 'Mums are at their best now from reports given out by different growers, and so they are being pushed more for this season. H. F. A. Lange Co. report that they will cut approximately 15,000 blooms this week, and H. F. Littlefield, with extensive greenhouses, reports that he will cut at least 12,000.

Other growers are right on top with big cuts.

The market has not been overstocked this past week as many growers are holding out for better prices for Thanksgiving Day. Prices remain practically the same: Carnations $2 to $4 per 100; Roses $3 to $10; Violets 50c. to 75c. per 100; Sweet Peas $1; pompon and single 'Mums 35c. and 50c. per bunch; regular 'Mums 75c. to $2.50 per doz. Fuel Problems Discussed

At the meeting held on Nov. 26 the topics scheduled for discussion concerned the conservation of fuel in greenhouses. The methods suggested were as follows: (1) By the double roof system of greenhouses, with ample air space between roofs. William Jurgens was asked to read a paper on this subject. He claims that this plan saves coal as well as labor, and maintains a uniform temperature. The two houses in which the experiments were made are both of the same length, 200ft.; the double roofed house being 30ft. wide; the narrower, single roof house only 14ft. wide. Both houses are heated with a Lord & Burnham boiler No. 624, the fuel required for each being equal. Both have a Chicago fuel saving device over the boiler. The only difference in piping is that the double roofed house has 11 runs of 2in. pipe, while the single house has only 10 runs. But just think of the difference in space! In the double house, in which Narcissi are beginning to show flower, no fire whatever has been made this Fall. Preparations are on the way for planting Sweet Peas.

(2) Members were expected to come prepared to give lists of plants that may be depended upon to give good results under lower temperatures than those usually given them.

Promoted to Sergeant

The members of the trade here are pleased to learn of the recent promotion to sergeant of I. F. Matson, formerly with Gibson Bros., Bellevue ave. florists, and later with Chas. Uttley Harrisburg, Pa. Sergt. Matson has been known here since boyhood and is great liked. He enlisted a week after the country went into the war; soon after arriving in France he joined the radio school there and later was put in charge of the wireless at headquarters. He had a narrow escape on one occasion when a shell wrecked his wireless plant. He is in the Oriental detail of the 21st Field Artillery. ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.
